Roosevelt Forces Sweep California, 3d-Term Test

Garner Supporters, Second in Race, Concede; Macfadden Trails in Florida

Tuesday's Voting

CALIFORNIA—Roosevelt delegates swept the State, running far ahead of the Garner and two other slates.

TEXAS—County Democratic conventions in Texas were reported to have given Garner 653 and Roosevelt 32 of the delegates chosen for the State convention.

FLORIDA—Senator Andrews was leading Bernarr MacFadden and four others in his renomination race. State Senator Holland led a field of 11 for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

INDIANA—Incumbent Congressmen, including two opposed by Townsend forces, all held margins.

SOUTH DAKOTA—Gov. Bushfield won renomination and Lewis Bicknell was ahead for the Democratic governorship nomination.

ALABAMA—Slate of 22 delegates pledged to Speaker Bankhead as "favorite son" were elected. Incumbent Congressmen were ahead for renomination.

Garnerites Concede

San Francisco, May 7 (AP).—Roosevelt third term forces were sweeping virtually every county in California and supporters of Vice President Garner quickly conceded victory to the President's backers as returns from the Presidential primary rolled in rapidly tonight.

Incomplete counts from 8,459 of the State's 13,511 precincts favored the Roosevelt "harmony" ticket with a commanding lead of 344,965 compared with 55,355 for the Garner slate. An uninstructed "ham and eggs" delegation headed by Willis Allen received 38,259 and the liberal-left wing group headed by Lieut. Gov. Ellis Patterson, who bolted the Roosevelt slate and formed a ticket of his own, got 23,116.

Republicans also turned out in force despite the fact that they had no choice of tickets. There was only an uninstructed slate on their ballot. Their count in 7,831 precincts was 240,654.

The Roosevelt ticket was headed by Gov. Culbert L. Olson, who has been mentioned as a possible Vice Presidential nominee.

Conceding victory to the Roosevelt-Olson slate, Zach Lamar Cobb, leader of the Garner movement in California, said:

"We are proud of every vote cast for Mr. Garner . . . we extend our congratulations to the President and to the delegation elected in his name."

Carl R. Erickson, executive secretary of the Democratic State central committee, immediately called upon the various Democratic factions to "unite for a splendid victory in November."

Macfadden Trails Andrews

Jacksonville, Fla., May 7 (AP).—United States Senator Charles O. Andrews, of Orlando, took an early lead in his race for renomination in today's Florida Democratic primary.

Francis P. Whitehair, Deland attorney, lost the lead for Governor to State Senator Spessard Holland.

Andrews received 50,480 votes in the first 442 of 1,429 precincts reporting. Bernarr Macfadden, Miami Beach magazine publisher and physical culture exponent, was second high with 25,214.

Then came State Railroad Commissioner Jerry Carter, of Tallahassee with 21,902; Gov. Fred P. Cone with 14,980; Attorney-author Charles

By Reversing Secret Ballot Committee Revives Hatch Bill

Sumners Denounces 'Certain Newspapers,' Sees 'Hitlerian' Move

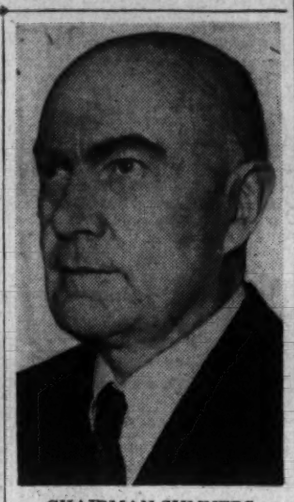
By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday reversed its recent secret ballot pigeonholing the Hatch "clean politics" by a 14-to-11 vote to reconsider and then heard its chairman denounce the measure as another bureaucratic move toward a Hitlerian state.

Indignant at newspaper criticism of himself and his committee, Chairman Sumners addressed the House for nearly an hour. He declared local free government is endangered by the Hatch bill provisions banning political activity by Federally-paid State employes and cried "shame" on signers of the Hatch bill discharge petition.

Later, Representative Hill (Democrat), of Washington, accused Sumners of ridiculing House petition signers and said: "I just wonder sometimes why we should have to listen to some of these elder members."

Hill's speech brought House Majority Leader Rayburn to his feet in defense of Sumners. Rayburn insisted Sumners did not reflect in any way on House petitioners but did "criticize certain newspapers." House Whip Boland followed with a charge that the Hatch bill delegates Congressional powers to the Civil Service Commission and he declared, "For my part, I decline to vote for any such power."



CHAIRMAN SUMNERS

The Judiciary Committee's 14-to-11 vote to recall the Hatch bill from a pigeon hole completely wiped out last week's 14 to 10 vote to table the

House Opens CAA Transfer Plan Debate

Lea Fights Program As Menace to Aerial Safety, Inexcusable

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Scheduling a vote for shortly after noon today, the House jumped the gun on the Senate yesterday by opening debate on President Roosevelt's hotly disputed proposal to abolish the Air Safety Board and place the Civil Aeronautics Authority under the Department of Commerce.

Chairman Lea of the Interstate Commerce Committee, who had disrupted the prearranged House schedule by insisting that the President's reorganization order be brought up on the House floor yesterday, warned against "political domination" of the CAA.

One of the principal opponents of the CAA shakeup, Lea said last night he thought his resolution to block the proposal would pass the House today "by a comfortable margin." In the Senate, meanwhile, a companion resolution comes up for consideration today by the Reorganization Committee. To overturn the proposed order, both House and Senate must record their disapproval.

Lea denounced the reasons advanced for the CAA transfer as "theoretical, trivial and inconsequential." He asserted that when civil aviation was under control of the Department of Commerce, "devastating mistakes" had been made,

Mercury Climbs To 86, New High For Year in D. C.

Summer continued its May visit to the Capital yesterday when the mercury climbed to 86 degrees at 4:30 p. m., and a new high for 1940 here.

The temperature, one degree higher than Monday's hitherto warmest day of the year, brought thousands of Washingtonians out of doors.

In Virginia 90 degree temperatures were the rule.

Canada Plans 3-5 Year War, Red Cross Told

Sommerville Addresses Delegates; Justice Reed Hails Work of Group

By Lucia Giddens
Post Staff Writer

"We have planned for at least three years of war, and our plans may have to be revised for five years," Norman Sommerville, head of the central council of the Canadian Red Cross, told the delegates to the national convention of the American Red Cross at their dinner last night.

The war "won't stop until it stops in the right way," he declared. "We have pride in our past, courage in the present and absolute confidence in the future."

The crowd of approximately 1,800 who attended the dinner at the Mayflower Hotel overflowed from the ballroom into adjoining space. White banners, centered with the Red Cross; red and white flowers and candles made a colorful scene.

2,500 Branches in Canada

"Today when the world is locked in the age-old struggle to adjust the liberty of the individual to the needs of government," there is no better example of the "success of the democratic process" than the Red Cross, Associate Justice Stanley Reed of the Supreme Court said in his address.

Sommerville said that the expansion of the peacetime Red Cross in Canada to "its full wartime activity" was so successful that there are "now approximately 2,500 chartered branches from coast to coast in Canada in a population less than 10 per cent of that of the United States."

Model Hospital Erected

"At least 6,000 auxiliary societies, clubs and church groups sprang into war activity," he said, forming a total of 8,500 groups of women working for the relief of Allied war sufferers.

Sommerville pointed out that the Nation-wide campaign for $3,000,000 last winter resulted in contributions of $5,000,000.

Guard Slays Virginia Convict, Wounds Pal in Break Attempt

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., May 7.—A convict was killed and another seriously wounded today as three blasts from a guard's shotgun halted an attempted break at the State rock quarry 25 miles north of here.

Harold Milo, 20, convicted housebreaker, making his second attempt, was killed by a single charge of buckshot fired by Guard George Watson.

With two more shots, Watson brought down the second fleeing convict, Caskie Withers, 21, of Manassas, who was serving five years for arson.

The men made a break for woods near the quarry at the upper edge of Albemarle County at about 11:30 a. m. as they were being taken from the pit with a group of convicts preparatory to blasting.

Milo, running a little behind Withers, was killed outright. Withers, hit by six slugs, returned and surrendered. Both men were serving sentences at State Prison Camp No. 26 between Proffit and Earlysville.

An investigation of the break, reported by Capt. C. L. Edwards, temporarily in charge of the camp, was being conducted by Assistant Commonwealth Attorney John H. Maury, jr., State Patrolman J. E. Kidd and Deputy Sheriff C. S. Huffman.

Milo, a resident of New York State, was due to appear in circuit court at Richmond next month for re-sentencing in connection with his attempt to escape March 18. He had begun his term September 19, 1939.

Withers was sentenced at Manassas last December on a charge of setting fire to the Walter C. Sadd grocery store.

Holland Mobilizes Defenses To Meet German Threat; Envoy Here Made Paymaster

Hungary Told Hitler Has Asked For Permission To Move Troops

By Robert B. Parker,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Budapest, (Wednesday), May 8.—The official Hungarian news agency published a report today that Germany has asked the Hungarian government for the right to send troops through the country.

This report was circulated shortly after diplomats in the Balkans had reported a strong British drive to line up a Balkan "defensive alliance" of Yugoslavia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey to stand together against any aggression.

The Hungarian news agency, in reporting the German request, reproduced a dispatch which originally was published in the Belgrade newspaper, Politika, which in turn had credited it to its Budapest correspondent.

Sofia Hears Nazis Prepare

Several times in the past inspired Hungarian newspapers, as well as the news agency, have taken such roundabout methods to tell Hungarians what is going on inside their own country.

Simultaneously, the newspaper, Utro, in Sofia, Bulgaria, printed a Berlin dispatch declaring Germany and Italy were prepared to send huge forces into southeastern Europe at the first sign of British-French action in that area.

The dispatch quoted by the Hungarian agency said that according to certain reports in Budapest the Germans had asked passage through Hungary for their troops but that so far the report could not be verified.

Ultimatum Predicted

"In case the Allied troops violated any of the Balkan countries' frontiers, the Reich will send an ultimatum to that country demanding it choose immediately one or the other belligerent camp," Utro said.

"In the event the country in question failed to answer with appropriate speed the Reich government would be forced to undertake any measures it thought advisable.

"Any Allied attempt to extend the war into southeast Europe might force Germany and Italy to put into action much greater

British Torpedo Swedish Steamer Operated by Nazis

Stockholm (Wednesday), May 8 (AP).—The Swedish steamer Monark, 1,786 tons, with a German prize crew aboard, was torpedoed by a British submarine yesterday.

The Monark was on its way from Stavanger, Norway, to a German harbor, with a load of wood pulp.

The Monark was at Bergen, Norway, when that port was suddenly seized by the Germans at the start of the invasion.

(Stockholm dispatches failed to explain the presence of the German prize crew, but it was assumed the ship was seized by the Nazis as contraband.)

Independent Union Upheld as Court Rebukes NLRB

San Francisco, May 7 (AP).—With a rebuke to the National Labor Relations Board for a "grasp of power," the Ninth United States Circuit Court of Appeals today upheld the right of independent unions, organized among employes of a single company to legal equality with big international unions.

The court denied the board's plea for enforcement of an order requiring Sterling Electric Motors, Inc., to disestablish an independent union of about 50 workers, a majority in the small Los Angeles plant.

The ruling described the union as "self-organized."

Surprise Order Holds U. S. Fleet In Hawaii 'Indefinitely'

On the eve of its departure from Honolulu for home bases, the United States fleet was ordered last night to remain in Hawaiian waters "indefinitely."

Announcement of the surprise move came first from Admiral Richardson, fleet commander-in-chief, aboard his flagship at the Pearl Harbor (Hawaii) base. While he and officials here said it was "to carry out further tactical exercises," considerable international significance was read into the action here.

With Europe at high tension over possible extension of the war, diplomatic observers pointed out that the retention of the American Fleet in the mid-Pacific might be interpreted in Japan as a political move to discourage any change in the status quo in the Orient.

Roosevelt Approves

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, said the Navy Department had granted Admiral Richardson's request to keep the fleet near Hawaai for additional training. Officials said the Navy has been desirous of fully testing its great base at Pearl Harbor, which has been recently strengthened. The fleet would operate from there in any war in the Pacific.

President Roosevelt was understood to have approved the action, though there was no indication the decision originated with him or with Secretary of State Hull. A spokesman for the State Department said the department "knew of no reason why the fleet should stay out there, or any reason it should not."

Indicating that the continuation of the ships in Hawaiian waters might be prolonged, the Navy said that vessels scheduled for overhaul in navy yards on the mainland would come home when due for such repairs. Overhaul schedules are made up six months ahead.

Plan Sortie Next Week

Admiral Richardson's announcement said the fleet "will make a sortie from Pearl Harbor early next week and carry out further training exercises off the Lahaina area. Further plans were not revealed.

Approximately 25 warships and the base force of tankers and supply ships were to have left Hawaii for California ports today. The main body, comprising some 90 vessels, under prior orders were to sail tomorrow.

Moscow Paper Charges Finns Wrecked Property

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 7.—Moscow diplomatic quarters showed great interest in allegations by the Communist party newspaper Pravda today that Finland "impudently wrecked" industrial properties in areas ceded to Russia by the treaty of March 13.

The Soviet foreign office and other government sources, however, would not comment on the Pravda assertions that Finland had violated the peace treaty by sabotaging manufacturing enterprises.

Neither Pravda nor any other Russian source mentioned any possible Soviet action as a sequel to the charges.

Pravda said Russians observed the spirit and letter of the treaty in replacing broken windows and sweeping the streets before they returned Petsamo to the Finns.

Mexico Will Pay Sinclair 8½ Million

Mexico City, May 7 (AP).—The Mexican government announced tonight it had agreed to pay the Consolidated Oil Company (Sinclair), $8,500,000 for properties it expropriated on March 18, 1938.

Eduardo Suarez, Mexican treasury secretary said the $8,500,000 represented the "total payment" to the company.

The deal was the first Mexico has made with any firms whose properties were taken. The firms have valued their properties as high as $400,000,000.

"ROUTE OF ADVANCE"—Map indicates reported advance of two German columns toward the Netherlands. Nazi troops were said to be advancing from Dusseldorf (1), apparently heading for Arnheim, and from Bremen (2) in the direction of Leeuwarden

Nazi Drive Predicted on Maginot Line

London (Wednesday), May 8 (INS).—The Daily Express today quoted an "unimpeachable source" as saying that an expected German attack on the Netherlands would be accompanied by German offensives against France's Maginot Line and in the Balkans, presumably with Italy's participation.

The Hague, May 7 (U.P.).—The inspector general of navigation announced tonight ships will be prohibited from entering Dutch waters of the Meuse-Waal Canal, the Meuse River above the town of Grave, near the German border and the Juliana Canal in the southern part of Brabant province from the evening of May 11 until May 13.

Admiral Keyes Says Superiors Showed 'Shocking Ineptitude'

By Drew Middleton,

London, May 7.—Opposition to the Chamberlain cabinet united tonight behind the challenging leadership of a national naval hero who shook the British Conservative citadel to its foundations by blaming the government's "shocking ineptitude" for the admitted failure of the Norwegian venture.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger John Brownlow Keyes, a National Conservative (government) member of Parliament, led the assault with the declaration that the admiralty rebuffed his plan to force Trondheim Fjord with sea power—an action which he said might have brought land and sea triumphs over Germany instead of defeat and

Berlin Hints Spread of War

Fear Mediterranean Action, but Study Invasion of Britain

By the United Press

Berlin, May 7.—Germany rejoiced tonight over Prime Minister Chamberlain's "lamentable" defense of his policies before Parliament and warned that an "insufferable situation" may spread the war to the Mediterranean at any hour.

Despite an almost hysterical tempo of Mediterranean scares, splashed in bold headlines, some neutral observers suspected that both the Allies and Germany were playing a game of "mutual bluff" in attempting to divert attention to southeastern Europe.

Germany, they said, may be focusing fears on the Mediterranean in order to launch her promised "final blitzkrieg" against the British Isles with swarms of bombing

U. S. Can't Let Germany Win, Says Former Envoy to Reich

By Felix Cotten
Post Staff Writer

James W. Gerard, Ambassador to Germany before this country entered World War No. 1, said yesterday that the United States "cannot allow Germany to win" World War No. 2.

He made this comment after a White House visit during which he chatted privately with the President at luncheon about the international situation.

There were persistent reports, meanwhile, that the United States is exerting extreme pressure to keep Italy neutral and that the President is drafting, in conjunction with the Vatican, a new peace proposal.

Secretary of State Hull returned late yesterday from a vacation in Atlantic City. Whether there was any significance in this was a matter of speculation.

Indications continued to point to an important statement on recent war developments in the President's speech Friday night welcoming delegates from the 20 Latin-American countries to the American Scientific Congress.

The President canceled his regular Tuesday press conference in order to work on the speech. He conferred briefly with Undersecretary of State Welles.

Welles said afterward that he had received no reports from abroad indicating an extension of

2 Nazi Columns Are Reported On the March; Army Prepares

By Ben A. Thirkield,
The Post Cable Editor

There was indication last night that the Netherlands would be the next neutral victim of aggression—and that the time was almost at hand.

These reports were received:

1. The Associated Press heard that two German columns were advancing toward the Netherlands border from Bremen and Dusseldorf. The information came to a "highly reliable" source in New York, despite close restrictions on information from the area involved.

A few hours later, however, official sources in Berlin emphatically denied the report.

2. The Associated Press' informant earlier had disclosed that Dr. Alexander Loudon, Netherlands Minister here, had been appointed general paymaster for Dutch officials abroad, effective in case of emergency. The Legation confirmed this report and said the appointment had been made three days ago.

Fleet Kept at Hawaii

3. It was announced that the United States battle fleet would remain in Honolulu indefinitely. Not officially mentioned, it was noted, however, that this would serve as a restraint on any Japanese effort to "protect" the Netherlands East Indies.

4. The Netherlands government last night cut off all outgoing telephone calls from 10 p. m. to 8 a. m. (2 a. m. E. S. T.) and will do so again tonight.

5. All Dutch army, navy, air force and antiaircraft leaves were canceled as a defense precaution.

Weather Report Omitted

6. The National Broadcasting Co. noted that the Netherlands radio omitted its customary weather report, in the words of the announcer "due to conditions that are known to you."

7. British Prime Minister Chamberlain and War Secretary Oliver Stanley both hinted broadly that action in the west was believed imminent.

8. Berlin correspondents reported a feeling that German moves to the west might be impending, with one official saying Chamberlain's fear of an attack on England was not unjustified.

Feint Held Possible

The Associated Press informant acknowledged that the German troop movement might be merely a feint, such as, he said, was used last week to draw the British fleet into the Mediterranean. (The nature of last week's "feint" was not disclosed.)

However, he continued, Germany is known to desire air bases on the English Channel from which to attack England. In this connection, one of the German columns was understood to be directed toward Leeuwarden, in northern Holland a few miles from the coast, in an area which would provide an excellent jumping off place for bombers aiming at England. This report would appear to coincide with the expressions by Britain's war leaders.

The second German column was said to be directed toward Ann-

A DAY OFF IN NEW YORK

PEACE MOVE: In defiance of world trends, the 1940 World Fair has demilitarized its information men. No longer are they captains, sergeants or cadets; now they're just plain mister. But they're still allowed to carry swagger sticks, like the 90-day officers in 1917.

Harlan Miller

HEADLINES: If you don't like what you see in the headlines nowadays, you can make your own, and put your name in 'em, too. For 25 cents (or $1 for seven copies) you can, for example, send home a newspaper with a headline like "Joe Zilch Warns Hitler to Call Soldiers Off."

* * * *

RED CAPS' SCORN: Since the new 10-cents-a-suitcase rule went in here, the red caps at the depot have changed. They used to be fairly content to get a 35-cent tip for carrying three bags; now 35 cents gets you a look of amazed, mournful scorn. Better make it 40 cents.

* * * *

WILLKIE MAN: Around the lobby of a New York hotel you can overhear almost anything; for example, the gentleman in the brown tweeds who's saying: "My opinion of the American voters would improve 1,000 per cent if they'd have sense enough to elect a utilities man!"

"—an annex to the Zoo"

TOTS IN CAGES: Don't jump to the conclusion that those tall iron oval enclosures in Central Park are part of the Zoo. If you look closely you'll see 'em occupied by small tots, baby buggies and nursemaids.

They're to protect tots from traffic and pedestrians; or maybe pedestrians from tots. Just a whiff of the concentration camp about 'em, though.

$10 FOR A VIEW: You can get a fine room with two windows overlooking the park for $10, 'way up high, if you ask for it. But when the bellboy ushers you into the room the first thing he does is to pull the curtains, though you're 150 feet and a mile from the nearest peeping tom.

* * * *

CAFE: At least one famous night spot in Manhattan is forestalling the amateur washroom wits by plastering its fancy tiled men's room (and I'm told the women's room, too) with mildly off-color verses and gag lines. But the wisecracks placarded in the dining room itself are a little feelthier.

* * * *

WAR FLAVOR: The martial flavor, though, seeps into the World Fair, despite the sturdy efforts of the officials to advertise peace and freedom. The little information booths scattered around are now called "pillboxes," and probably the little shelters where you can get your sore feet treated will become known as "funk-holes."

"—the crowd looked ominous"

FREE SHOW: I saw about 1,000 people crowded excitedly around a little clearing in Rockefeller Center, and jumped to the conclusion that it must be a riot or an excavation.

But on closer scrutiny it turned out to be just three or four rather self-conscious people roller-skating during their lunch hour, in the sunken rink.

* * * *

NAVY DISARMED: If our Navy is getting a little flabby, it's probably due to the fact that ducks and swans now monopolize the pond in Central Park where our heroic gobs used to practice rowing while on shore leave.

In memory of the time I rowed there on my first trip from Iowa, I wanted to hire a row boat, but alas, they're gone.

* * * *

12 HOURS FOR 50c: One great improvement is in the parking situation. When we were here on our honeymoon, it cost $1 to park our car anywhere within trekking distance of our hotel, and I haven't dared bring a car into New York since. Now you can park right in the night club sector 12 hours for 50c. More vacant lots, apparently.

* * * *

QUESTIONS: New Yorkers seem more bothered about Greenland than anybody else; they keep asking the U. S. Information Office here how far away it is and whether it's within bombing range . . . Other popular questions are, how can you get invited to one of Mrs. Roosevelt's lawn parties, and did Lindbergh have a candy bar when he flew to Paris.

Roosevelt Forces Sweep California

Garner Supporters, Second in Balloting, Concede to 3d-Termers

Francis Coe, of West Palm Beach with 12,126, and Dr. O. B. Hazen, of West Palm Beach with 1,605.

In the race for Governor, 512 precincts gave Whitehair 35,438 Holland was leading with 41,389 and B. F. Paty, of West Palm Beach, third with 15,088.

There was much interest in the 11-man race for the Governorship nomination. Cone will end his four-year term next January and his office was sought by the Rev. James E. Barbee of Jacksonville; J. H. Clancey of Panama City, Mayor Walter B. Fraser of St. Augustine, Holland of Bartow, Carl Maples of Wakulla, Paty of West Palm Beach, Burton Schoepf of Tampa, Frederick Van Roy of Crystal River, Hans Walker of Ocala, Fuller Warren of Jacksonville and Whitehair of Deland.

In the voting for delegates to the Democratic National Convention, there was nothing on the ballot to indicate the Presidential preferences of the various candidates. The State's Democratic executive committee voted that the delegation of 18 men and women—with 14 votes at Chicago this year—should be unpledged and uninstructed.

Of the 88 candidates for delegate, however, 47 indicated a personal preference for a third term for President Roosevelt.

Texans Back Garner

Dallas, Tex., May 7 (AP).—Vice President Garner was boosted for the Presidency today by his fellow Texans. They gave him a big lead over President Roosevelt at 254 county Democratic conventions.

Garner had 653 delegates to 32 for the President, Garner headquarters at Dallas reported early in the night.

The President was not ignored. Almost every county convention indorsed his Administration and many delegates were pledged not to engage in any stop Roosevelt move that might develop at the State convention at Waco May 28, or the National convention at Chicago.

Townsendites Behind

Indianapolis, May 7 (AP).—Incomplete returns from today's Indiana primary indicated defeat for efforts of the Townsend old-age pension organization to unseat Congressmen Charles A. Walleck and George W. Gillie, both Republicans.

The youthful Halleck, who, with Gillie, incurred the enmity of the pension planners by voting against their proposed legislation, forged well ahead of his Townsend-supported opponent, Frederick Landis, jr., for the second district nomination as returns were tabulated tonight.

Returns from 96 of the district's 411 precincts gave Halleck 6,374; Landis 3,464.

The towering Gillie, a former sheriff, did even better in the Fourth District, which includes Fort Wayne, the State's second city. He had better than a 12-to-1 lead over the Townsend candidate, Lawyer J. Fred Greene, who was running third.

Returns from 121 of the district's 311 precincts gave Gillie 14,822; Norman Sweet, 1,059; Greene, 1,036.

Gov. Bushfield Renominated

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., May 7 (AP).—In a primary where gubernatorial nominations were the sole major issue, South Dakotan Republicans today chose Gov. Harlan J. Bushfield as their standard bearer to succeed himself by an overwhelming avalanche of votes, unofficial tabulations tonight showed.

Democrats appeared to have selected Lewis W. Bicknell, Webster attorney, as Bushfield's opponent in the November election.

Returns from 1,159 of the State's 1,959 precincts gave Bushfield 53,307 votes to 14,359 for A. N. Graff, former Sioux Falls mayor, who attacked the Bushfield administration bitterly in his campaign.

On the Democratic side, Bicknell polled 17,680 votes in 1,104 precincts, compared to 12,278 for Almer O. Steensland, former State HOLC director.

Bankhead "Favorite Son"

Birmingham, Ala., May 7 (AP).—Alabama Democrats selected by ballot today 22 delegates who will go to the party's national convention at Chicago to cast their votes for Speaker William B. Bankhead as the State's "favorite son" candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Unopposed, as were three other Representatives, Speaker Bankhead was renominated. He said his candidacy for the Presidential nomination is not in oppposition to a third term for President Roosevelt.

Congressional contests found incumbents leading in the early returns in each instance. These included the veteran Henry B. Steagall and Joe Starnes, a member of the Dies Committee.

The Gallup Poll

Willkie Gaining Among G. O. P. Voters, Dewey Holds Big Lead, Survey Indicates

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., May 7.—In the comparatively short time since the Willkie-for-President boom started, the popularity of Wendell Willkie has shown an increase among Republican voters polled by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

DR. GALLUP

Although the increase has been relatively sharp in itself, the Willkie forces still have much ground to cover in order to overtake the triumvirate of popular Republican Presidential contenders—Thomas E. Dewey, Senator Vandenberg and Senator Taft. Nevertheless, Willkie's gains put him in fourth place in popularity, ahead of such outstanding leaders as Hoover, Landon, Gannett, Bridges and Martin—no mean achievement for a "dark horse," as Willkie styles himself, in a little over a month.

Spontaneous Choices

The survey was conducted among a cross-section of Republican voters throughout the country, and this question was asked:

"Whom would you like to see elected President?" No list of candidates was presented to the voters; the choices were entirely spontaneous.

An identical survey was made last March. The comparative vote among those expressing a choice in the two surveys follows.

TODAY
Dewey	67%
Vandenberg	14
Taft	12
Willkie	3
Hoover	2
Others	2

MARCH
Dewey	53%
Vandenberg	19
Taft	17
Hoover	5
Gannett	1
James	1
Others	4

Sharp Gain for Dewey

First, there has been a sharp increase in Thomas E. Dewey's popularity in the period since March—a period during which he conducted a strenuous campaign tour from coast to coast. Dewey's popularity among Republican voters, as measured by the poll, is greater than Gov. Alfred Landon's popularity was at a comparable time in the 1936 campaign. In May, 1936, Landon was the choice of 55 per cent of Republicans expressing a choice in an Institute poll, as compared to 67 per cent for Dewey today.

This does not mean, however, that Dewey will win the Republican nomination in June. Political leaders will be quick to point out that the situation is different in many respects from what it was in 1936, when there were fewer strong contenders, and when Landon's potential delegate strength was probably greater than that of the leading candidates today. And, in any case, those familiar with history know that the most popular candidates often do not win the nomination.

Willkie Weak in West

Second, the number of Republican voters favoring Willkie increased from less than 1 per cent in March to 3 per cent today.

An analysis of the Willkie vote by geographical sections indicates that his Presidential strength is comparatively small west of the Mississippi, where the Willkie vote runs to approximately 1 per cent. His following is greatest in the New England and Middle Atlantic sections, where the vote for him runs to 4 per cent.

Third, today's study found approximately one-fourth (28 per cent) of Republicans undecided about their choice for Presidential candidate, as compared to 40 per cent last March.

Although this represents a substantial decrease, the undecided vote is still large enough to indicate that the G. O. P. race continues to be wide open.

Among other candidates receiving prominent mention in today's study were former Gov. Alfred Landon, Gov. Arthur James of Pennsylvania, Publisher Frank E. Gannett, Justice Owen Roberts, Representative Joseph Martin, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Representative Bruce Barton, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Charles McNary, Senator H. Styles Bridges, Publisher Frank Knox and Senator Gerald P. Nye.

43,000 in 6 States to See G. O. P. Parley by Television

For the first time in history, television will broadcast pictures and proceedings of a national convention when the Republicans convene in Philadelphia June 24.

Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee announced yesterday that two television units of the National Broadcasting Co. and one of the Philco Radio and Television Corporation will televise the convention to an estimated 43,000 persons in six Eastern States.

Hamilton said the Republican Party as "the party of private enterprise" welcomed the chance "to provide an opportunity for a new industry to stride forward in honest American fashion."

"It was but a few das ago that the New Deal, through its dominated Federal Communications Commission, struck vigorously at this very industry by bluntly commanding it to cease its efforts at merchandising," said Hamilton in a statement.

"We of the Republican Party sincerely hope that public interest accruing to television by reason of its use at the 1940 Republican convention will more than offset the setback given this new industry by the New Deal."

The television companies estimated that 40,000 persons in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts in the N. B. C. area will see and here the broadcast, as will about 3,000 more in Philadelphia in the Philco area.

Sixteen Republican State chairmen or their representatives meanwhile prepared to participate in a round table conference with Hamilton today on campaign coordinating efforts between the National and State committees. Hamilton said candidates, platform or convention arrangements will not be discussed. Committee divisional heads and chairman of Republican Congressional and Senatorial campaign committees will participate in the conferences and House and Senate Minority leaders will join them at a luncheon following.

Other political developments:

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, a Presidential candidate if the President does not run, said he thought it would be "an excellent idea" for Democratic Party leaders to prepare platform drafts in advance of the July 15 Democratic convention. Hamilton already has called a meeting of Republican Resolutions committee designates a week in advance of the June 24 Republican convention.

Following a chat with the President, Gov. John Moses of North Dakota told White House reporters he thought the North Dakota State convention May 13 would "without a doubt endorse the Administration wholeheartedly." Moses said he did not talk politics with the President but asked him to make a further study of North Dakota relief conditions and give further aid.

A new G. O. P. candidate for President loomed on the scene as Charles H. March, member of the Federal Trade Commission, prepared to address the recently organized March for President Club in Litchfield, Minn., tonight.

Lee County, S. C., instructed its delegation to the State convention to support a third term for the President and then unanimously selected Senator Ellison D. "Cotton Ed" Smith as a delegate. Lee County is the home of Smith, who is vigorously opposed to a third term, and has threatened to "take a walk" if Roosevelt is renominated.

Johnson Lead Is Increased To 1,246 Votes

'Big Train' Given 50-50 Chance to Win Seat in House

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Walter Johnson has taken a base in big league politics, and is given a 50-50 chance to score next November and win a seat in the House of Representatives.

The immortal "Big Train" of baseball, who spent 24 of his 52 years as pitcher and manager for the Washington Nationals, appeared last night to have an unassailable lead in the battle for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Sixth Maryland District.

With 274 out of 283 polling places reported, the old fire-ball king had a lead of 1,246 votes.

The figures: Johnson, 7,419; A. Charles Stewart, 6,173.

Of the nine polling places yet to be heard from, two are in Allegany County and one in Garrett County. Stewart was strong in both of these.

However, the other six missing places were in Frederick County, where Johnson ran like a jack-rabbit in Monday's primary election.

In the general election in November, Johnson will run against Representative William D. Byron, of Williamsport, who won the Democratic nomination for a second term without opposition.

The Sixth Congressional District begins with nearby Montgomery County and sweeps northwestward, taking in Frederick, Washington, Allegany and Garrett counties.

In 1938, Representative Byron was trailing Stewart, the successful Republican nominee of that year, when he reached Montgomery County. He was something like 500 votes behind. Then Montgomery gave Byron a whopping vote and put him over.

Johnson is a resident of Montgomery and very popular. He owns a large farm at Germantown.

The aftermath of Maryland's primary saw efforts being made to replace personal rivalry with party harmony. National Committeeman Howard Bruce started this late Monday when he promised his hearty support to Senator George L. Radcliffe, who defeated him for the Democratic nomination for the Upper House.

With less than a score of the State's 1,309 polling places unreported, Radcliffe's margin last night was 78,657, a bigger majority than Senator Millard E. Tydings piled up in his race against David J. Lewis in the "purge" primary of 1938. Radcliffe seemed certain of 99 votes in the Democratic State convention, where he will be formally nominated.

In 1,292 polling places, the vote was:

Radcliffe, 173,685; Bruce, 95,028; Vincent Gierttowski, Baltimore steel worker, 2,408.

Former Gov. Harry W. Nice made a runaway race of it against former Mayor William F. Broening, of Baltimore, for the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

McNutt Calls Big Business 'Aristocracy'

Duty of U. S. to Break It Up to Help the Little Man, Denverites Told

By the Associated Press

Denver, May 8.—Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, said today he believed it the duty of the Government to break up a big business "aristocracy" which "if left to itself, rules with an iron hand."

"Monopoly in big business is ruinous to little business," he informed the Denver Chamber of Commerce in a prepared address.

"It ruthlessly eliminates competition.

"If business were organized on a democratic basis . . . we should probably have no problem at all."

Colorado Democrats generally considered McNutt's speech a reply to a recent Denver address of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Dewey assailed the government as an enemy of "small business" and contended New Deal policies had injured little business more than big business.

McNutt, who has said he would seek the Democratic nomination for President if Mr. Roosevelt did not, declared: "The welfare and prosperity of the Nation depend more upon the prosperity of small business than upon any other single factor.

"The great advantages of capitalism and private initiative come largely through the small enterpriser. It is he who displays the spirit of adventure and tries out new ideas, new policies and new methods."

Canada Plans 3-5 Year War, Red Cross Told

ferers "will require greater devotion and greater sacrifice than we have ever known," Sommerville said. "The will to meet it is yours. The strength to meet it depends upon you."

Describing activities of the Canadian Red Cross through its advisory committee in England, Sommerville told of the 600-bed hospital just erected on property of Viscount and Lady Astor, "which had been donated to us for that purpose." The hospital, to be opened this month, will be "a model of its kind,' he said.

"Another Virginia lady has given $65,000 for equipment for this hospital," Sommerville said. After the program, he declined to reveal her identity, saying that she wished the gift to be anonymous, but he did say that she is married to a Canadian.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, was toastmaster for the dinner, at which the invocation was given by Bishop Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University.

Justice Reed said "the Red Cross is an overriding insurance policy which the Nation carries to guarantee that the abnormal catastrophes of existence shall not crush the unfortunate community. Whatever provision has been made for the expected and forseeable social contingencies, the calamities of war and peace are beyond community preparation."

He referred to the Red Cross as "the national trouble-shooter."

"The development and the organization of the Red Cross are a most inspiring example of the ability of free peoples to care for every need of life. Voluntarily we give in millions to the support of this agency," Justice Reed pointed out.

"Instrument of Mercy"

Referring to the struggle to adjust the liberty of the individual to the needs of government, Justice Reed said:

"Through swift decisions and prompt action, centralized authority dazzles peoples with its supposed efficiency. In our hearts we know that boasted efficiency is superficial, if not unreal.

"Our way of life teaches us that great and enduring national strength comes only from the consciousness of peoples that their agencies of government and of living are the voluntary expression of popular aspiration. We have fashioned the Red Cross as an instrument of mercy through which preparedness combines the ability to act promptly with the strength that comes from popular support," Justice Reed said.

Confidence in the Red Cross structure to carry "any and all responsibilities" put upon it by war or by problems on the "home front" was expressed by James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations, at yesterday's session.

Ready for Emergency

Stating that the Red Cross is ready for any emergency, Fieser pointed out the greater organization today than in the period preceding the World War.

"Now we are in the midst of even greater challenges again—those occasioned by war. . . .We can not dismiss these man-made cataclysms by saying they are too big to bother about, that they are none of our business. Even the little that we can do to offset this mass punishment and torment is a step in humanitarian preparedness. We must, as in our program here at home, go as far as American good will gives us support in going.

"Every field of Red Cross activity has possibility of increased growth," Fieser said. "Everyone hopes and prays that our chapters will be permitted to continue their development in the ways of peace. We all recognize, however, that the horizon has again darkened.

"We are considering not preparedness in ships or cannon or projectiles or airplanes, but preparedness to save human life. This is the highest expression of civilization."

Sails for Greenland

Maurice R. Reddy, of Washington, assistant director of disaster relief for the American Red Cross, will sail Friday on the Coast Guard cutter Comanche for Greenland to survey possible relief needs, it was announced yesterday at Red Cross headquarters.

He expects to be in Greenland for six weeks to determine the extent of "possible need for food supplies in view of the fact that the island has been cut off from its mother country, Denmark," he said.

From the dinner dance of the Junior Red Cross at the Washington Hotel last night, messages were sent to similar societies in 14 Pan American nations and 28 other countries.

The messages urged the 20,000,000 boys and girls in these organizations foster "the cause of world-wide friendship and unselfish service" in the effort of building universal peace.

James T. Nicholson, national director of the Junior Red Cross, called on the delegates to "assume considerable responsibility for repelling all the attacks upon our heritage which are made by ignorance, indifference, carelessness and unbridled selfishness." Mrs. August Belmont, member of the central committee of the Red Cross, was toastmaster.

The convention which brought 3,500 delegates, including 850 representatives of the Junior Red Cross, will close today with a 9:30 a. m. session at Continental Hall. The principal address will be made by Rabbi A. H. Silver, of the Temple, Cleveland, Ohio.

Plate Glass Severs Detective's Toe

Precinct Detective Charles Cannon, Sixth Precinct, was investigating a window smashing robbery yesterday and lost one of his left toes.

He was called to the jewelry store of Julius Wolpe, 3322 Fourteenth street northwest, where a thief had made off with about $500 worth of watches and diamond rings.

A piece of plate glass in the frame fell on Cannon's foot and severed a toe. He was taken to the police clinic for treatment.

In the meantime, Baltimore police notified local authorities they had in custody a colored man who had in his possession three watches taken from the store.

1,500 Leave D. C. Jobless Ranks in Week

Private Employment In 'Tremendous' Rise, May Break Record

Since May 1 an estimated 1,500 jobs have been found for unemployed Washingtonians, the District Employment Center, 808 E street northwest, reported yesterday.

The reemployment upsurge, described as "tremendous" in the last two days, is expected to break all records since the depression. Officials said the demand for workmen in the District during the month would likely be considerably higher than the all-time high of 4,500 jobs found for unemployed last May.

The entire demand, they said, is coming from private employers, most of them in phases of the construction business. The upsurge was partly attributed to delays in building made necessary by protracted cold weather and rains. Improved business conditions also were a factor, it was said.

In cooperation with the American Legion-sponsored National Employment Week, closing today, employment officials are attempting to encourage employers to hire older workmen.

The names of 39,000 are carried on the center's rolls. Many of these, it was stated, have jobs but are in search of better ones.

Census Blank Surplus Laid to Feud

By Edward Ryan

Census officials are adding up in terms of waste paper the final score of their feud with Senator Charles W. Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, and other Congressional leaders.

Estimates yesterday placed at 14,500,000 the oversupply of special income question blanks, prepared during the final days of the bureau's row with Congressman over the income and bathtub questions in the census.

The bureau had 15,000,000 of the income slips printed, and distributed to enumerators for those who wanted to send answers about their income direct to Washington. Less than half a million of the blanks have been used, officials said.

Beyond this item, officials have not figured out what the precensus battle may have cost.

They count it as one factor, along with bad weather and the larger number of new questions, that left the census takers with a sizable load of "cleanup" work when the first month of the census ended.

117,000,000 Checked

A checkup at that time, it was learned, showed that about 117,000,000 of the United States population was accounted for. This amounted to 98 per cent of the total population ten years ago, but was a lower percentage of the expected 1940 total. The latter figure was set, before the census started, at about 130,000,000.

Reports from enumerators claimed a high batting average in talking away opposition to the census queries. Their favorite report was that citizens asked, at the end of the census quiz, "is that all." Some were waiting for the questions that never came, like how many loaves of bread were eaten during the year, and how many baths were taken.

Frequently, however, hesitaton about answering any questions at all gave enumerators one or more extra trips. This extra work, it was explained, would not boost the cost of the census for some time, since the enumerators are paid a flat rate for each name they record and not a daily wage.

Every jump the mercury takes is being watched by employe groups campaigning for a five-day week. Washington's summer heat is cited as one of the best reasons for giving Government employes two-day week-ends.

Passage of five-day week legislation was urged yesterday by George M. McNulty, national commander of the National Association of Regulars, and Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers.

McNulty, who lives in Detroit, said that Washington should be a starting point for five-day Government work week.

"If the five-day week should be adopted in any part of the Government," said McNulty, "surely Washington is one place where it should be had, because there is no other city in the country where workers suffer more from the heat than here."

McNulty and Baker said that a two-day week-end would help keep employe productio up during summer. Baker said his organization is seeking 100,000 employe signatures to support the Mead bill for a five-day, 35-hour week.

Other examinations were announced for college graduates with special training for one-year appointments as student physiotherapy aides and student dieticians at the Army Medical Center. During training the jobs pay $420 a year, less $360 for food and quarters. Those who complete the training will be eligible for $1,620 jobs.

Nazis Reported On the March Near Holland

Two Columns Said To Be Advancing; Dutch Bolster Army

heim, in southern Holland about 10 miles from the Belgian border. If this advice is correct, the southern Nazi column might be airming at establishing a barrier between Holland and Belgium.

Meanwhile, a report from a London newspaper carried by International News Service, said Queen Wilhelmina was believed to be preparing for a quick conference with Leopold, King of the Belgians.

British newspapers also reported that Dutch planes were patrolling over all the country, and that all coastal defenses were fully manned, International News Service said.

Dr. Loudon received word of his appointment as paymaster three days ago.

"Purely Precautionary"

The Minister emphasized that the move was "purely precautionary," but added:

"This is definite proof that the Netherlands government means it when it says it will defend its neutrality and independence, even against overwhelming odds."

Dr. Loudon complained that "doubt has been expressed on the radio and by the press, despite repeated denials, that the Netherlands would oppose invasion." He said he hoped, at last, that the world would believe the sincerity of his country's determination to defend herself.

"My appointment as paymaster general," he said, "means that the legal government of my country will be able to carry on with the full assistance of all officials abroad regardless of what happens at home."

Duties Indicated

The Minister indicated that his duties would probably include whatever foreign purchases it might be necessary to make, as well as responsibility for the pay of all diplomatic, consular and agricultural secretaries and attaches abroad.

He emphasized that his administration would not include the Dutch East Indies or possessions in the West Indies, including Curacao and Dutch Guiana on the northern coast of South America. These territories, he said, are financially autonomous and have exchequers of their own.

The Minister said he did not know what amount of foreign credits might become available to him, but it is understood that there are large Netherlands resources in this country.

Speaking calmly, Dr. Loudon said he had received no word from his government of press association reports of a German army move on Holland. He requested that his appointment be reported in a matter-of-fact manner and that no attempt be made to dramatize the importance of events.

By the Associated Press

Amsterdam (Wednesday), May 8. The Netherlands cut off all outgoingtelephone calls to all points abroad from 10 p. m. last night until 8 a. m. (2 a. m. E. S T) today

It was officially explained that the telephone lines were reserved during those hours for the use of the government which yesterday canceled all army, navy, air force and antiaircraft leaves as a defense precaution

Telephone calls to the Netherlands from abroad were not affected.

Telegraphic service was only nominally disturbed. Telephone calls tonight also will be stopped at the same hours at last night, it was announced.

The government's sudden decision to clamp down on outgoing telephone communications came as trains were jammed with soldiers and sailors hurrying back to their units.

Leaves have been withdrawn previously, but this was the first time that virtually no exceptions were made and also the first time that the men were ordered to return to their posts immediately.

Civilian train traffic, beginning tomorrow, will be restricted to facilitate troop movements. Holland has nearly 400,000 men under arms.

(The Netherlands Radio Station PCJ adopted the policy of stations in belligerent countries last night by omitting its customary weather report from an English-language broadcast picked up by N. B. C. at 9:45 p. m., E. S. T.

(In signing off, the announcer said that "due to conditions which are known to you" he would not give any weather report.)

Officials described the leave cancellation as "due to the increasing uncertainties of the international situation."

Partial Text of Chamberlain's Speech in Commons

Prime Minister Says Nazis Paid Heavy Price for Gains

By the Associated Press

London, May 7.—Following is a partial text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech in the House of Commons today:

. . . By this time our men from Namsos and Andalsnes are back again and the campaign in southern Norway is at an end . . . I think we may count ourselves fortunate that we did not lose more than one British and one French destroyer. . . .

Whatever criticism may be made about this, I am sure that everyone will agree that the troops which had been engaged in this campaign had carried out their task with magnificent gallantry. . . .

They distinguished themselves in every respect and, man for man, they showed themselves to be superior to their foes. . . .

The news of our withdrawal from southern Norway came as a profound shock. . . .

Ministers, of course, must be expected to be blamed for everything. It was reports emanating from Stockholm which may have been invented by the enemy and which roused expectations which were never justified and certainly never indorsed by any minister.

Calls Reports Unfounded

We are doing our best to damp down these unfounded reports, but we had to be very careful not to say anything to inform the enemy of the true situation. I am afraid in the circumstances, shock and disappointment were inevitable.

I do not wish to extenuate anything but at the same time I hope we shall not exaggerate the extent or importance of the check which we have received.

The withdrawal from south Norway is not comparable to the withdrawal from Gallipoli. There were no large forces involved. There was not much more than a single division.

Our losses, therefore, were not really great in number nor was there any considerable or valuable amount of stores left behind. . . . The Germans had far bigger losses—warships, planes, in transports and in men. . . .

We have suffered a certain loss of prestige . . . a certain color has been given to the false legend of German invincibility on land. . . . Some discouragement has been caused to our friends and . . . our enemies are growing. . . .

France has shown remarkable steadiness and, as in this country, the only effect of a reverse is to stiffen her determination

The reaction has been more serious in Sweden than anywhere else and I fully appreciate the reason why. . . . If the Swedish government and people decide for a policy of neutrality in the face of pressure I trust that at least that neutrality will be strictly impartial as between the belligerents.

Justifies Expedition

It might be asked why the government attempted an expedition to Trondheim when they must have known from the beginning that they would be faced with a local air superiority and the strong probability that reinforcements would be hurried up through the valleys leading from the direction of Oslo. . . .

We did realize that this expedition would be full of risk and that it would be difficult to take Trondheim and difficult to hold it . . .

On the other hand, we had to consider the effect on the Norwegian government, the Norwegian forces and the Norwegian people if we made no attempt to hold central Norway. We received the most urgent and repeated appeals from the Norwegian commander in chief to attack Trondheim at all costs. . . .

I feel myself that if we refused to answer the call . . we should have justified the reproach that our only object in Scandinavia was the iron ores of Sweden and that we cared nothing for the freedom of small nations.

It has been suggested that the Anglo-Finnish force which was designed for the assistance of Finland should never have been dispersed. . . . If the argument is that by dispersing the Anglo-Finnish force we missed an opportunity of successfully attacking after the Germans had delivered their blow, that argument is founded on a complete misconception. . . . The rate of dispatch of troops to Norway was not governed by the availability of troops in this country but by the speed at which they could be landed in those very few ports which alone were open to us to use. . . .

We had reason to believe that a relatively small force would be necessary to occupy these places until larger forces had been landed, but after the first force had been landed it was insufficient to restore the position . . .

I believe the failure of the plan was due to two factors. First of all, our inability to secure airdromes from which we could operate our fighters, and, secondly, the rapid arrival of German reinforcements . . . Absence of fighters enabled the enemy to attack our communications and to hinder our reinforcement whilst his own land communications enabled him to bring up an ever-increasing superiority of strength.

It became clear that we could only maintain our force in the Trondheim region by such a concentration of men, materials, and aircraft as would have drawn off an altogether undue proportion of our total forces. In the special circumstances we decided to carry the campaign in Norway elsewhere with greater vigor and effect . . .

I ask the honorable members not to form any hasty opinions . . . It is quite obvious that the Germans have made certain gains. It is equally clear that they have paid a heavy price for them. It is too early to say on which side the balance is finally inclined because the campaign is not yet finished . . .

Although we will give all the help to Norway that we can and as soon as we can, we must not forget that there are other fronts which might at any moment blaze up into a conflagration.

Germany with her vast and well-equipped armies is so placed that she could at any moment attack any one of a number of different points. We want to be ready to meet that attack whenever it may come.

A minister who shows any signs of confidence is always called complacent. If he fails to do so, he is labeled defeatist. For my part, I try to steer a middle course, neither raising undue expectations which are unlikely to be fulfilled nor making the people's flesh creep by painting pictures of unmitigated gloom . . .

I do not think the people of this country yet realize the extent or the imminence of the threat which is impending against us . . . Let us beware of bickering and division amongst ourselves when presently we may be faced by war in its most violent form directed against this country in the hope of breaking up our courage and will power . . .

"No Division Among Us"

To suggest that this minister or that minister is more responsible than his colleagues for this or that course of action is as unworthy as it is unfair. There is no diversion among us All of us have one thought, and that is how we may each of us make our best contribution to win the war.

On the eleventh of last month, I announced the retirement of Lord Chatfield. I asked the First Lord of the Admiralty to succeed him as chairman of military coordination in the cabinet. My right honorable friend (Churchill) readily accepted the position, but after he had had some experience of it, Mr. Churchill suggested to me that in order to have his assistance to the cabinet more effective, it would be a good thing to put him in closer contact with the chiefs of staff.

Arrangements were made under which Mr. Churchill was authorized by the cabinet, on behalf of the military coordination committee, to give guidance and direction to the chiefs of staff committee.

. . . For purposes I have mentioned, Mr. Churchill will be provided with a small staff under a senior staff officer, Maj. Gen. Ismay, who has been appointed an additional member of the chiefs of staff committee. No doubt other changes in form of government or the functions of individual ministers may from time to time suggest themselves.

I think very likely . . . as far as I am concerned I shall endeavor to keep my mind open to any fresh considerations, and to take any steps which may seem to be called for if they will help the country.

Asks for Goodwill

Once again I want to urge members that in these strenuous days we should do better to occupy ourselves with increasing our war effort—rather than in disputing about forms of government—in the production of material of planes, tanks, guns, munitions and all the countless articles and equipment which are required to fit out our weapons and make them usable. It is in the production of these things that we want organization, energy and goodwill.

As far as we are concerned in the government we are doing all we can to overtake the start which Germany has obtained during her long years of preparation. We are getting today the wholehearted cooperation of the employers and workers.

I want also to get the cooperation of members of all parties (an opposition shout of "no") in the work which everyone recognizes to be the prime need of the day.

We do not set ourselves up to be faultless and as being above receiving help from others who are willing to help. Let us then, before fresh trials come upon us, put all our strength into this work of preparing for it. We shall steadily increase our strength if we ourselves are able to deliver our blows when and where we will.

British Fleet Damage Laid To Deficiencies

Lack of Air Support, Not Nazi Superiority Blamed by Edison

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Edison, declaring the battleship is still the backbone of American defense, yesterday blamed Allied deficiencies rather than any superiority of planes over warships for the heavy punishment inflicted by German bombers on the British fleet.

Testifying before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee on the lessons of the war in Norway, Edison said that despite recent Nazi air successes, the Navy "can't conceive" that Germany would be able to destroy or even "seriously damage" the British fleet.

Meanwhile, Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board in the World War, urged Congress to establish an organization to provide "for the orderly conduct of war if it comes."

Edison ascribed "lack of proper air support" given the Allied navies and the fact they had to operate "in narrow fjords and the Skagerrak" for their lack of success in Norway.

"I think the fleet in Norway was not sufficiently supported by the British air force," Edison declared. "Whether they didn't have enough planes, pilots or cooperation with the navy, I don't know. It is my opinion, however, that the British fleet did not have proper air support or it would have made a better showing."

Declaring the "best defense against planes is more planes," the Navy chief said he would like to see more aircraft carriers and planes added to the fleet. He reiterated his statement of last week that the "topsides" of future warships should be redesigned to offset a "temporary advantage" attained by planes, but declared this had been "erroneously interpreted" to mean that battleships were becoming obsolete.

"I am convinced," he stated, "that so far as the United States is concerned, battleships were, are, and will be for many years to come, the backbone of our first line of national defense."

Fleet Admiral Blames Failure On Churchill

Hero Tells Commons Superiors Showed 'Shocking Ineptitude'

His declaration tonight capped the first momentous and stormy day of a two-day House of Commons debate on the Norwegian affair.

Sir Roger, his uniform glistening with the medals he won in the World War, made his attack on the cabinet, and especially on First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill, only a few hours after Prime Minister Chamberlain had announced new powers for Churchill in an effort to save the government.

Only the stocky Churchill figure and the popular magic of the Churchill name remained between the Chamberlain cabinet and disaster.

The first lord, on whose shoulders the prime minister unequivocally placed the burden of henceforth personally directing grand strategy on land, sea and in the air, is to reply tomorrow to the government critics.

Government at Bay

He will need all his powers of oratory; for when the House rose tonight after 7½ hours of fiery debate, the men who have ruled Britain under Chamberlain since May 28, 1937, saw their outer defense crumbling fast.

Chamberlain's hour-long statement, frankly admitting failure in central Norway and warning of a possible German attack on Britain herself; and War Secretary Oliver Stanley's rambling explanation of an expedition whose history the average Briton already knows too well, were overshadowed by opposition attacks from many directions.

Despite its vicious attack, the Labor Party decided not to move for a vote of censure, in the belief that it had the government "on the run," and hinted that the real test was to come in six weeks, when "other shortcomings" are revealed.

"Ginger Group" Refrains

A Conservative "ginger group" opposing the government with the support of former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha and other men normally in sympathy with the administration, decided likewise to defer a motion of censure, pending developments.

What finally emerged from the Houses of Parliament shortly after 11:30 p. m. was a government now faced with an aroused and active opposition and confronting a defiant House which apparently is backed up by the nation on every measure it debates from this point on.

Keyes' scornful words that "if only we had used our fleet courageously" eclipsed in bitterness other attacks such as Labor Leader Clement R. Attlee's that the "failures" in the cabinet be dismissed, and Liberal Chieftain Sir Archibald Sinclair's taunt that "Britain is fighting a one-shift war."

Worth Some Risk

Parliamentary strategists, who only an hour before had said only "an unexpected development" could overthrow the conservatives, saw in the speech of a man who is a national hero and an admiral of the fleet something resembling this.

Sir Roger declared the cost of forcing Trondheim with the fleet would "have been trifling compared with other operations I have organized and led."

"It was surely worth some risk to win so great a prize," he continued.

He revealed that the admiralty, which under Churchill is supposed to be devoted to the principles of attack, told him the forcing of Trondheim Fjord "was not considered necessary as the army was making progress and the situation in the Mediterranean made it undesirable to risk ships."

He declared he was "astounded" that the naval staff could not realize the attack was doomed to failure unless British ships sank German destroyers in the fjord.

"Our general advancing from Steinkjer to Trondheim expected British ships to support him—not two German destroyers who fired on his flank—landed troops behind his advance forces, and captured or destroyed them," he cried.

Old Friend of Churchill

Sir Roger, who is believed to have broken a close friendship of many years' standing with Churchill over the Norwegian campaign, spoke for "the men of the navy."

Holding a rank which is equivalent to that of field marshal in the army, he acts as adviser to the naval board of strategy.

Sir Roger answered Chamberlain's plea not to consider the Norwegian withdrawal "another Gallipoli" with the carefully spaced sentence:

"The Gallipoli tragedy has been followed step by step."

The campaign to which he referred was the Allied effort, designed by Churchill, to force the Dardanelles in 1915. It took a terrific toll of men and ships.

Says Risk Was Little

The German destroyers in Trondheim Fjord could have been destroyed with little risk, Sir Roger declared. He assured the House the defeat "ought never have been allowed to happen."

The man who, in the last year of the World War, hoisted the signal "St. George for England and let's give the dragon's tail a damned good twist," bitterly told the House "If only we had used our fleet courageously" the Germans would now be holding losing cards in Norway.

He implored Churchill to "steel his heart and take the steps which are necessary to insure that more vigorous naval action in Norway is no longer delayed."

Attack Considered

Chamberlain's only reference to Sir Roger's declaration that he had pleaded for a direct attack on Trondheim was the Prime Minister's admission that such an attack had been "carefully considered." The land attacks on Trondheim from Namsos and Adalsnes were made, Chamberlain said, at the urgings of the Norwegian government.

Lieut. Col. Leopold Stennett Amery, rebel Conservative who once was First Lord of the Admiralty, cried out "somehow or other we must get a government of fighting men of fighting spirit."

"I do not feel there is a sentence in the prime minister's speech which suggests that the government foresaw what Germany meant to do, or came to a clear decision when it knew what Germany had done, or acted swiftly or consistently in the whole of this lamentable affair," he went on.

Attlee Strikes First

Attlee, hitherto regarded as "cooperative and safe" by the Conservatives, struck first as the leader of the Labor opposition after Chamberlain had closed with an impassioned plea for cooperation "in the hour of England's peril."

Attlee threw the cry of "failure" in the face of the aged prime minister from his opposite bench 20 feet away and demanded "different people at the helm" of the government in "this life and death struggle in which we cannot afford to have our defenses in hands of failures."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, long-time political enemy of Chamberlain, furiously lashed the government's "ill - founded boastings," repeated Attlee's pointed query as to whether the government "has learned anything from Poland" and asked if it had sent insufficient antiaircraft equipment to Norway.

Speaker Warns Hecklers

He demanded a smaller war cabinet, swiftness and vigor in action and pleaded for Parliament to "speak out."

Bitterly, he told the House "time is not always on our side; Hitler took the old gentleman by the beard on this occasion."

Chamberlain for the first time since the start of the war spoke in the face of persistent heckling which on one occasion got so loud that he sat down while the Speaker warned the House.

He opened his defense of the Norwegian campaign by declaring the British loss of life was "not really very great."

Later, however, War Secretary Oliver Stanley, winding up the first day's debate, said British casualties were "substantial," but under the circumstances, "not unduly heavy."

"Helpless," Says Premier

The House's attitude became visibly uneasy as Chamberlain explained Britain was "helpless to prevent the German stroke." He said the Norwegians failed to block the advance of the German reinforcements by demolitions and Britain failed to secure air bases.

He admitted 100,000 troops gathered for the intended Finnish expedition had been sent to France, a point exploited by Sinclair who said he doubted the government had had that many men ready.

"I believe it was right," Chamberlain said doggedly, defending the British entry into Norway. "I thought it equally right to withdraw," he added, "when it was realized that the plan would not succeed"

Warns of Attacks

For the second time within a week, Chamberlain warned that Germany might attack anywhere, and that the Allied forces must not be dispersed.

"Presently we may be faced in the most violent form with attacks directed against this country," he said.

In words that had a metallic ring, Chamberlain soberly asked the nation to increase its strength until "we ourselves are able to deliver our blows where and when we will."

He told again of the Allies' new strength in the Mediterranean.

Then, as he twice had done in the past—once at the outbreak of the war and again on March 4—he turned to Churchill.

Churchill, he announced, will have responsibility for "supervision of military operations" from day to day as well as ruling the destinies of Britain's sea power. Under him will be a small personal staff headed by Maj. Gen. Lionel Ismay, old cavalry campaigner with experience both in the field and in intelligence service.

From the looks of things tonight, if Chamberlain is going to get off with no more than a warning at the end of the two-day debate, that warning will at least be emphasized and underlined.

In the lobbies of Parliament, many members were of the opinion that the prime minister's real testing time, however, would come in six weeks or two months, rather than today or tomorrow.

Calls for Unity

In the meantime, Chamberlain urged national unity and an end to "quarrels among ourselves."

Sir Roger explained that he came to the House for the first time in uniform to speak for officers and men of "a fighting, seagoing navy who are very unhappy."

"It is not the fault of these men that the German warships and transports which forced their way into Norwegian ports by treachery were not followed in and destroyed as they were at Narvik."

Discounts "Italian Bluster"

The veteran sea dog said he told the admiralty that if "Italian bluster worried them" some older ships could have been used in Norway without affecting the strength of the fleet.

The naval authorities responsible, he said, "seemed to have concentrated on the naval hazards and been blind to the danger which the army would encounter if effective naval support were not immediately available."

"When at length I was allowed the opportunity to give my views I was told there was no difficulty in going into Trondheim Fjord, but that it was not considered necessary as the army was making good progress and the situation in the Mediterranean made it undesirable to risk ships," he went on.

Norwegians Begged His Aid

Declaring that it "was surely worth some risks to win so great a prize," Sir Roger said Norwegian officers "came to me and begged me to use my influence as far as I could."

Anticipating what Churchill might have to say tomorrow, he declared the first lord of the admiralty would deliver "a very fierce counter-attack on me but I ask him to realize my view which is based on experience and precedent and achievement."

"I beg him to steel his heart and take the steps which are necessary to insure that more vigorous naval action in Norway is no longer delayed," he asserted.

"If he does he will have the navy wholeheartedly behind him. One hundred and forty years ago Nelson said 'I am of the opinion that the boldest measures are the safest.' That holds today."

Sir Archibald Southby, a Conservative, replied that it was not British incompetence but "the treachery of Norwegian officials" which brought about the defeat. He said the opposition attacks would "give great satisfaction in Berlin and would hearten the German government."

Arthur Greenwood pressed home the Labor attack by declaring:

"Wars are not won by masterly withdrawals . . . We have had to creep back to our lairs."

First Attack on Halifax

Greenwood declared, "We have lost the military initiative in this war and we have certainly not had a diplomatic offensive since the war broke out."

His reference to diplomacy was the first attack on Lord Halifax's usually sacrosanct department during the debate.

"By an unfortunate series of incidents in Norway we have forfeited the confidence of neutral states in Europe," Greenwood concluded.

Earl Winterton, hitherto sturdy Conservative, went over to the opposition camp when he called for an inquiry into the Norwegian campaign.

Would Query Officials

"Those of us who were at Gallipoli greatly regret to this day that some ministers were not impeached and some high generals court-martialed for what occurred then," he said.

He called for a committee or commission with power to examine military and civilian officials "from the highest to the lowest to discover the cause of the setback" in Norway.

War Secretary Stanley at the end of tonight's debate danced the bogey of an attack on the Western Front before the M. P.'s and declared troops sent to Norway would have been much more valuable in France if the offensive "which is possible and probable" had taken place "in the last few weeks."

"The greatest storm the world has ever seen may burst on the Western Front at any minute," he asserted.

Other developments included an announcement by the Treasury that penalty duties had been removed, retroactively to last January 1, against imports of Italian silk manufactures.

In some informed quarters the move was interpreted as a token of "economic appeasement" designed to encourage Premier Mussolini to stay out of the war. State and Treasury Department officials, however, said it meant only that Italy had given satisfactory evidence of having ceased subsidies on exports of silk manufactures to the United States.

Fund Favored for Rome Fair

Countervailing duties were imposed on Italian silk goods before the outbreak of war last August.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee virtually wagered $2,000,000 that Italy would maintain her neutrality by voting to authorize that amount for American participation in the 1942 Rome exposition.

Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, committee chairman, said, "I don't think Italy will enter the war."

Gerard declared the United States would be "in great danger" if Germany should win the war.

"Germany would not attack New York or Baltimore," he declared. "She would strike first probably in the southern part of Brazil. Two states in southern Brazil, Santa Catharina and Rio Grande do Sul, are almost entirely German.

Stalin Demotes Voroshiloff From War Post

Veteran Bolshevik Replaced in Ministry By Timoshenko

By International News Service

Moscow (Wednesday), May 8.—Dismissal of Marshal Klementi E. Voroshiloff, Russia's highest ranking soldier and hitherto close associate of Josef Stalin from his post of Soviet defense commissar, was announced today.

He was replaced by a comparative unknown, Marshal Semyon Timoshenko.

Voroshiloff, who had been entrusted with supreme direction of the recent 105-day war in Finland, was transferred to the position of assistant chairman of the Council of Peoples' Commissars, a body equivalent to a cabinet in other countries.

He thus became vice premier directly under Premier Molotoff whose star now appears to eclipse the waning star of Voroshiloff.

Voroshiloff, veteran Bolshevik who had been war commissar for 14 years, was given the chairmanship of the defense committee of the Council of Peoples' Comissars, a relatively subordinate role.

The smiling, smooth-faced Voroshiloff, born 59 years ago in a clay hut, was known to Soviet leaders as "Klem," and had been regarded by many Russian observers as the man most likely to succeed Stalin if the later were to quit power.

Contract Bridge

Mr. Le Vae and Mrs. Maude Travers, social director of the Kungsholm, were playing a rubber of bridge with a couple who prefer to be known as "Mr. and Mrs." The bridge instructor had just devoted a few minutes of his talk to the "value of short-suit leads at no trump."

Mr. and Mrs. picked up the North-South cards of this hand. Mrs. Travers and her partner the East-West. Neither side was vulnerable and North was dealer:

Mrs.
♠ K Q 8
♡ A 9 4
◇ Q J 8
♣ A Q 7 6

♠ A 10 7 4 2 ♡ 8 7 5 3 ◇ K 2 ♣ 5 4 — WEST — NORTH — EAST — SOUTH — ♠ 9 3 ♡ K 10 6 ◇ 5 4 3 ♣ K J 10 9 8

♡ Q J 2
◇ A 10 9 7 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of spades.

Onlookers and Mrs. scolded Mr. for having passed two no trump. "Let's see if we make it, dear, first," replied the husband patiently.

Le Vae, with the East cards, felt some obligation to put his recently expounded theories into practice, and so, instead of leading the jack of clubs, he played the nine of spades. It worked out well, happily for him.

After reflection, Mrs. Travers won the spade lead with her ace and sent back a club; declarer finessed the queen. Le Vae hopped up with his king, and the club jack, followed by the ten, forced out the ace.

Mrs. now tried the diamonds, finessing the queen to Mrs. Travers, who won the king and played a heart. Now Mrs. made her fatal error. Thinking she was playing for three notrump and counting only eight tricks, she played low on the heart lead, hoping the queen or jack in dummy would take the trick.

Le Vae rushed in with his king and cashed his remaining clubs to set the contract two tricks, winning four clubs, a diamond, a spade and a heart.

Mrs. could have made her contract by putting up the heart ace and cashing in all four diamonds, a club, a heart and two spades.

As his wife blushingly conceded defeat, Mr. remarked.

"You see, my dear, we bid not too little, but too much.

Had Le Vae opened a club, three no trump would have been easy.

Brig. Gen. Magruder Named Commander in Capital Area

CUBBISON LEWIS MAGRUDER CUMMINS

Brig. Gen. Bruce Magruder, a Washingtonian who rose from the ranks to high post in the Army, yesterday was named commander of the military units guarding the Nation's Capital.

Magruder, now commanding all of the Army's tanks during maneuvers in the South, will relieve Brig. Gen. Maxwell Murray as commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade about June 15. Murray previously was ordered to duty in Hawaii.

At the same time, transfer of the following other ranking officers was announced:

Brig. Gen. Joseph M. Cummins, now on duty in Panama, to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., for a post with the Fifth Division.

Brig. Gen. Robert H. Lewis, from command of the Seventy-seventh Field Artillery at Fort D. A. Russell, Tex., to relieve Gen. Cummins in August.

Brig. Gen. Donald C. Cubbison from Hawaii to command the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla. He will relieve Col. Augustine McIntyre, who retires for age July 31.

Gen. Magruder was born in Washington and served as a first lieutenant with the District of Columbia National Guard in 1903-04 before enlisting as a private in the Regular Army. He was appointed a lieutenant in 1907. In the World War, he was overseas with the A. E. F. intelligence service, and commanded the Sixty-sixth Regiment of Tanks at Fort Meade, Md., two years ago.

Pontiff Blesses Peace Day Backed By Georgetown

Calling for the return of nations to Christian ideals and fraternal union in justice and charity, Pope Pius yesterday bestowed a special apostolic benediction on college students who took part in the third annual National Catholic Students Peace Day, May 1.

The Pope invoked the "Mother of Peace" in a cabled message, addressed to the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University. Georgetown sponsored the peace meetings, which were held at 185 American colleges.

The cablegram, which was signed by Cardinal Maglione, Papal secretary of state, stated:

"Holy Father, invoking Mother of Peace for nations return to Christian ideals, fraternal union in justice and charity, affectionately imparts desired apostolic benediction on organizers and members of Catholic College Peace Day."

ADA Saves $51,152 on Note Transaction

The Alley Dwelling Authority, engaged in demolishing the District's slums and replacing them with low rent standard dwellings, "found" $51,152 yesterday.

Actually the saving was effected by a rather complicated financial transaction but, in effect, it amounts to an outright find or gift, which will expedite the ADA's job of providing 1,100 additional housing units for low income families.

John Ihlder, executive officer of Alley Dwelling Authority, announced the sale of $3,980,000 in short term, low interest notes to two groups of buyers. A banking syndicate, including the Riggs National Bank of Washington among its members, bought $2,480,000 worth at an interest rate of .44 per cent.

Salomon Bros. and Hutzler of New York accepted $1,500,000 in notes at the rate of .42 per cent.

Simultaneously the United States Housing Authority announced similar deals by local housing units in 11 other cities. Altogether, $65,580,000 in short term notes were sold yesterday, bringing direct participation of idle private capital in public low rent housing projects to a total of $194,000,000.

The ADA saved $51,152 on the transaction in this manner: Had it been obliged to borrow the needed $3,980,000 direct from USHA, the interest rate would have been 3 per cent, instead of the .42 and .44 per cent which will be paid the private lenders.

The loans are on a six-months basis, with the United States Housing Authority standing behind them. Nineteen more local housing agencies will open bids next Tuesday on short term notes aggregating $60,865,000. Largest amount is sought by Baltimore—$13,950,000.

The notes are noncallable, wholly exempt from Federal income taxes and, in most cases, also exempt from State taxes.

Washington will use its borrowed money, Ihlder explained, principally to provide for construction costs of two white and two colored projects during the next six months.

These are the Ridge road and Navy place developments, both for white occupancy, which will accommodate 323 and 300 families, respectively; the James Creek project, for colored, in the southwest section and for which land acquisition is nearing completion, and the Frederick Douglass Dwellings on Alabama avenue southeast, which is soon to be let out for contracting bids.

The Ridge road and Navy place developments are now under construction. They will be known as Fort Dupont Dwellings and Ellen Wilson Dwellings, respectively, the latter named in honor of Woodrow Wilson's first wife.

Arlington Dump Burns for 2 Hours

Fire in the Arlington dump at Four Mile Run that raised a 60-foot ridge of flame last night tied up traffic on No. 1 highway for 15 minutes. Firemen fought the blaze for more than two hours before getting it under control.

E. M. Moreland, Arlington County sanitary inspector, said that the blaze had started from spontaneous combustion.

Our Sales are Swell—and so are the deals your Buick dealer is making!

What to do when the bug bites you!

FIGURES show that about one out of every five able-to-purchase new-car buyers really wants a Buick more than any other car.

Not all will buy one.

Too many of them without even getting actual figures will shake their heads and sigh, "Nope! A car that big and handsome must be out of my reach!"

You'll be smarter than that, we know.

When the bug to own a Buick bites you, you'll figure that a car as talked-about as Buick must be looked at first—if you're going to have anything to go on in judging 1940 values.

You'll realize it doesn't cost a cent to find out how one feels under your own hand and what the delivered prices are.

So you'll walk in, please, to the nearest Buick dealer and boldly say:

"Let me have a good look at that car that's showing the rest of 'em what modern style is.

"Let me try out that big straight-eight engine that's electrically balanced after assembly for smoothness to match a wrist watch's works.

"Show me those big soft coil springs you talk about and how they smooth out that rough stretch down the street—and what's the business about recoil-mounted Knee-Action, heaviest frames at the price, five-foot front seat room in SUPER models, and six dozen new 1940 features?"

When you've got the answers through a good long ride—ask one more question: "How much?"

Current prices† start at $895 ★for the business coupe, delivered at Flint, Mich. To this add transportation based on rail rates, state and local taxes (if any), and optional equipment and accessories—though there will be few such "extras" you'll need.

That totals up to low delivered prices that are often only a few dimes more a day than on cars in the lowest-price class—so why hesitate or haggle?

When the bug bites you, get the facts—and you'll get a Buick and be happy!

Buick prices begin at $895★ for Business Coupe (Illustrated)

National's New Musical Builds Box-Office Lines

'Louisiana Purchase' Has What It Takes; Former Local Favorite Is Capital Visitor; This, That and the Other About the Theater

ADDENDA TO YESTERDAY'S REVIEW of "Louisiana Purchase," at the National, piled up by a late curtain, early deadline and curtailed space:

At Sunday evening's cocktail soiree at the Willard, when the press met Producer "Buddy" DeSylva, Irving Berlin, composer-lyricist, and Morrie Ryskind, librettist—and at which a surprise number of teetolalers, save the mark, seemed to be present—Mr. Berlin expressed the hope that we would find a few catchy tunes in his score. We did—notably "Sex Marches On," "Tomorrow Is a Lovely Day," "Outside of That, I Love You", "You're Lonely and I'm Lonely," "Fools Fall in Love" and that irreverent "spiritual" that goes hot at the end, "The Lord Done Fixed Up My Soul."

BELL

Producer DeSylva, with equal modesty, surmised that we might see a fairly opulent production. What we saw was one of the most gorgeous pieces of staging that has come along since goodness knows when. Morrie Ryskind was optimistic about the laughs that might be in his "book." The thing is packed with them.

Another thing we neglected to mention in the first hurried summary was that The Martins, that soft-voiced, mixed quartet of harmonists, amble in and out of the two acts and 15 scenes to even better effect than in "Three After Three", the last item in which they appeared on the same stage—if we have our memory on straight.

Between Saturday night's last performance in New Haven and Monday night's here, 20 minutes was pruned out of the running time of the show. The boys are still hacking away at it, with three more weeks to go before hitting Broadway. By that time "Louisiana Purchase" should be a star-spangled "wow." It will sell out for the week at the National, as it is. When I ran into Irving Berlin on the street yesterday, he was wearing a smile wider than either Pennsylvania avenue or the Potomac!

At Monday night's premiere, Mark Sandrich, Paramount producer-director of musicals, and Mrs. Sandrich were in the audience and raving about as much of the musical as they had seen up to the intermission. Mr. Sandrich, incidentally, was especially struck by the splendor of Carol Bruce and her talents. Might she, by any chance, be headed for the Paramount lot? Mr. and Mrs. Sandrich, by the way, were more enthralled by that Monday afternoon visit to Mount Vernon than their two young sons—were plenty enthralled on their own account.

The usual Tuesday preview screening was omitted yesterday—we have already seen "My Son, My Son," next at the Palace—while the Loew high command was escorting Blanche Yurka about town. Miss Yurka has made many distinguished appearances on local rostrums and—again not wholly trusting our cockeyed memory—was leading woman for the late Everett Butterfield, former favorite juvenile of the old Columbia Players; when he launched his own stock company at the Belasco years ago with a praiseworthy production of Justin Huntly McCarthy's "If I Were King."

ᔓᔕ

Due to absolute capacity business last week, "Keep Off the Grass", the new Shubert musical, starring Jimmy Durante, Ray Bolger, Jane Froman and Ilka Chase, will remain in Boston a third week, thereby setting some sort of a record or something. Its Broadway premiere is tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, May 22.

ᔓᔕ

James A. FitzPatrick, the travelogue expert, reports that the Will H. Hays office has approached him to make a series of sacred song shorts for exhibition in motion picture theaters, the profits to go to the Motion Picture Relief Fund. The idea is to have such singing stars as Deanna Durbin, Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald sing such hymns as "Abide With Me," "Rock of Ages" and the like, with setting to be provided by the producer.

ᔓᔕ

"Harvest," the French film saga of the soil, costarring Fernandel and Orane Demazis, goes into its second week at the Little today. Beginning tomorrow, the Belasco will revive Howard Hughes' multimillion dollar production of "Hell's Angels," with Herbert Kline's "Lights Out in Europe" as its complement through Saturday.

Whew-Ain't-It-Hot Note

The weatherman may have forgotten Spring, but it's a cinch he hasn't overlooked Summer!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 7.

"My Favorite Wife" is a riot. I like it better than "The Awful Truth," which starred Irene Dunne and Cary Grant, just as this does. They, together with Leo McCarey, the Spewaks and RKO's white hope, Director Garson Kanin, make a pretty unbeatable combination. What we need today is more laughter. And here it is! The joy of making unit pictures is that you can select your own stories. I doubt if this picture would ever have seen the screen under the old system. At least half a dozen minds would have said, "Where's the story?" The laughs come from a fresh treatment, situation, gags, wonderful lines. Funniest line is never heard.

HOPPER

ᔓᔕ

When Cary Grant dresses up as Santa Claus and says, "If Roosevelt can move up Thanksgiving, I guess I can do the same with Christmas," the audience was shrieking so at his appearance they never heard what he said. Gail Patrick and Randy Scott were never better. Granville Bates should be in a glass case and only taken out to play judges.

ᔓᔕ

You laugh the minute you see Donald MacBride's sourpuss. A word of praise for the musical score of Roy Webb—he made his music speak. "Favorite" is the right word. That's what the picture will be—your favorite.

ᔓᔕ

Sam Goldwyn has the Governor of Arizona, Amon Carter, of Fort Worth, Texas, and Bob O'Donnell, from Dallas, all fighting—which is wonderful for Sam. They're all fighting for the premiere of "The Westerner." Sam's playing "hard to get"—which means "The Westerner" will no doubt be premiered here in the City of the Angels.

ᔓᔕ

Reports from San Francisco say it's the best picture Gary's ever done, tops in any man's language. You may not always agree with Sam, but he's awful smart. He thinks if major companies who turn out 50 pictures would make 15, and make 'em good, there'd be nothing wrong with the box office. Records prove he's right.

ᔓᔕ

His "Wuthering Heights" is playing in Paris, where it opened a year ago. "Rebecca" is going into its sixth week in New York.

ᔓᔕ

Jack "Buck Benny Rides Again" will do four and maybe more in New York. Which, in these spring days, is going some. Yet I hear 12 producers are rushing to do nickel-slot-machine pictures. If that isn't going backward, what is?

ᔓᔕ

As soon as they finish "Go West," Groucho, Harpo and Chico Marx leave for New York to do a special performance of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" for Finnish relief. Harpo will play Banjo (himself), Woollcott—if well enough—will do himself, likewise Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence. After which they may do it at the World's Fair in New York, and San Francisco Fair as well.

ᔓᔕ

Bobs Watson, aged 8, said to Lum and Abner on their first day of their picture, "C'mon on over and I'll show you how to steal a scene." He did.

ᔓᔕ

You can look for the wedding of Jimmy Stewart and Olivia de Haviland as soon as she finishes her next picture.

PRINCIPALS IN "MY SON, MY SON"

Left to right, Sophie Stewart and Henry Hull, as the Dermott O'Riordens, and Brian Aherne and Josephine Hutchinson, as Mr. and Mrs. William Essex, in Edward Small's picturization for United Artists of Howard Spring's widely read novel, opening Friday on the screen at Loew's Palace. Louis Hayward and Madeleine Carroll head the supporting cast

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 7.

DIST. ATTY. O'DWYER: Spec. Pros. Amen will bring disbarment proceedings against two prosecutors who worked for your predecessor, Geoghan, as a result of a murder investigation now pending. Amen has decided not to bring criminal prosecutions against lawyers, but to press disciplinary action instead—because he feels it's almost impossible for him to get convictions in Brooklyn . . . Jim Farley: Chas. Swayer, the Dem. Nat'l. Committeeman to whom the big Ohio delegation is pledged, tells his friends that he will turn it over to F. D. R. on the first ballot at the Convention . . . William Saroyan: Before the N. Y. drama critics met and selected your "Time of Your Life." Bob Sherwood wrote to the Critics Circle, asking that his play, "There Shall Be No Night," be withdrawn from consideration.

ᔓᔕ

HAROLD L. ICKES: When you appear before the Senate to testify for the legislation to open Alaska as a haven for Europe's exiles, another witness will be Stefansson, the explorer . . . Warner Bros. have made a documentary film about Alaska and will show it soon to the President, at the White House . . . Simone Simon: Kitty Carlisle will replace you in "3 After 3." . . . Harry Richman: There's a possibility that Gertrude Lawrence will join you in appearing in the new Ziegfeld Follies . . . Maritime Commission: The Spanish Government, which wanted to purchase 9 Danish boats, before Copenhagen was invaded, now is negotiating to buy 9 American ships.

ᔓᔕ

ATTORNEY GENERAL JACKSON: L. M. C. Smith, the new assistant in charge of espionage investigations, will lunch this week with J. Edgar Hoover—and thus will eliminate all suspicion of any rift caused by these duties having been taken away from Hoover. They'll discuss plans for complete cooperation. Harvey D. Gibson: Rosita Royce, the Dove Dancer, will rehearse a new dance she'll do at the World's Fair. She's substituted parrots for doves—and the parrots will heckle people in the audience. Bette Davis: Luise Rainer, who shares with you the honor of being a 2-time Academy Award Winner, won hre release from M-G-M after 4 months' negotiations.

ᔓᔕ

WILLIAM POWELL: Dashiell Hammett won't write any more Thin Man stories—nor will he ever write any more mystery stories. His newest one, "There Was a Young Man," will be published by Random House. It's about a man who has 17 children. There are 3 murders in it . . . While writing this story Hammett was reminded that if it's a mystery story, then Alfred Knopf has the right to publish it—because his previous contract gave Knopf the right to all his mystery yarns . . . Hammett therefore solved the murders in the middle of the novel—making it no mystery.

ᔓᔕ

WALTER HUSTON: John Haggott, production manager of the Theatre Guild, had many disagreements with Wm. Saroyan, during the rehearsals of "Love's Old Sweet Song." Haggott complains that he's suffering from pernicious Armenia . . . Leon Henderson: Jerome Frank's resignation as Chairman of the SEC now is expected to be submitted before Congress adjourns, Frank will return to private practice in N. Y., and you'll succeed him . . . Grover Whalen: Ickes will speak at the Fair on May 18th, on Labor's Stake in Government. The networks won't broadcast it . . . Nail. Lawyers Guild: Petitions are being circulated for another cleanup in your ranks.

JOHN STEINBECK: "Will Morrissey's Okies," a musical satire on your "Grapes of Wrath," was presented in Culver City, Calif., last week. The leading lady, 16, sang her first song—and was immediately arrested. Mayor LaGuardia: The Songwriters Protective Assn. will petition you in behalf of WNYC, asking that its budget allowance be continued—though that station plays very few popular songs . . . Bing Crosby: In your new movie, "If I Had My Way," there's a prop photo showing Oliver Morosco's stock company of 1901. One of the men in that photo is Fred Butler, father of David Butler, who directed "If I Had My Way. . . Equity: Sydney Greenstreet, who portrays Alfred Lunt's uncle in "There Shall Be No Night," really is his uncle.

ᔓᔕ

ELAINE BARRIE: The sponsors of the Allied Relief Ball wants you to do your act, "How to Undress Before Your Husband"—with Barrymore doing the narration—but don't know how to suggest it to you. . . Sat. Eve. Post: You weren't the only one who refused an opportunity to publish Alsop & Kinter's best-seller, "American White Paper." Henry Luce wanted to make it a 3-instalment supplement to Life, but changed his mind. And now more than 35,000 copies have been sold. . . . Dramatists Guild: The Musicians Union will crack back this week at the recent statements accusing backstage crews, musicians, etc., of being responsible for hurting the American theater. Its release will accuse some of the best known producers in America.

Characters From Life

Seasoned veterans of stage and screen, Alan Mowbray and Donald MacBride, consciously mimicked many real producers and directors they have known in the past—in "Curtain Call," a comedy drama of the theater produced by RKO Radio.

Johnny Mack Brown Now Move Bad-Man

For the first time in his 12-year movie career, Johnny Mack Brown portrays a villain.

As Gils Brady in his newest starring picture, "Bad Man From Red Butte," Brown essays a hardened killer in a lawless Western community.

However, that is only half of the story. Killer Brady has a twin brother, the hero, also played by Brown.

Supporting the Western star in "Band Man From Red Butte" are Bob Baker, singing cowboy of radio and screen; Fuzy Knight, ace Western comedian, and Anne Gwynne, red-haired Texas beauty.

Deanna Has First 'Solo' Auto Ride

Press previews of Deanna Durbin's "It's a Date" drew critical acclaim and marked Deanna's seventh straight hit, but the star herself took more pride in another achievement.

Deanna drove alone from her home to Universal studio and returned for the first time one day last week.

The star has been driving for several months, under supervision of her father. She obtained a full-fledged driver's license recently and made her first "solo" drive last week.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 7 (INS).—I reckon John Garfield be much easier to handle when he returns to the Warner studio next week. He has had his fling at the stage and didn't do so well in "Heavenly Express" which closes next week after a remarkably short run. Warners, however, are glad to get John back for he is a good actor and they like him, in spite of his constant threats to leave the movies for the stage.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Well, now that John has had his lesson he will come back to the Hollywood he professed to dislike a much chastened young man. He starts work almost immediately in a remake of "The Patent Leather Kid." This Rupert Hughes prizefight war yarn was Richard Barthelmess' greatest success in the silent films and was announced a few months ago for George Raft. Garfield has a great chance for characterization as the prize fighter with a yellow streak who redeems himself when he goes to war.

ᔓᔕ

A hot rumor was current in Hollywood today that David Selznick would join the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization as one of its bosses, "Gone With The Wind," released by M-G-M, has been such a knockout that the studio is rumored as having made him a tempting offer. It was impossible to get any kind of verification of the story but a little sleuthing revealed the fact that David had given up his lease on his present studios, only retaining office space. His commitment is up at United Artists, and I understand he has had an offer from practically every studio. In the past he has refused to join M-G-M because his father-in-law, L. B. Mayer, is at the head, and he felt he didn't want anyone to think he was depending on family favors. But with the sensational "Gone With The Wind," and "Rebecca," no one could accuse him of needing help now.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: Lynn Bari and her agent-husband, Walter Kane, are adding a nursery to their house in anticipation of a happy event; the Joe Pasternak-Peggy Moran romance is very much on again; the Philip Karlsteins have again made a date with the stork. She formerly was Dixie Martin, adopted daughter of Mrs. Alexander Pantages; Jack Benny and Rochester planed in yesterday after a sensational New York appearance. Mary Livingstone follows in a few days by train.

Isabel Jewell's new heartbeat is Paul Feldman; Marlene Dietrich at the Florentine Gardens with Tim Durant and Charlie Chaplin. Sitting near them were Ilona Massey and Alan Curtis—this twosome seems fairly permanent; Bob Gregory, much publicized as Princess Baba's husband, is forsaking wrestling for music. He is sponsoring a music-color concert at the assistance league Friday night; Marguerite Clark heads back to New York tomorrow. She said au revoir to many friends at a party given in her honor by the William Powells.

Mrs. Charles Howard wires that Mioland said he was sorry he had to disappoint his California friends. He will race again Saturday in the Preakness; Mrs. David Butler is in the hospital in San Francisco, her friends will be sorry to hear; Greg Bautzer, back at his office tomorrow with his leg still in a steel brace.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Chamberlain Deters Allies, Italy Believes

Opinion Prevails Paris, London Do Not Want To Provoke Duce Now

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, May 7.—Italians hope Prime Minister Chamberlain weathers the storm in London, judging from the press and private remarks. They are firmly convinced that the Allies, under the Chamberlain government, are losing the war, and since that is what they want, they hope that there is to be no change.

"We are voting for Chamberlain," writes "Blackshirt" in today's Resto del Carlino, echoing what the Popolo di Roma said a few days ago. "Chamberlain in power is a guarantee that the conduct of the war by the French and English will remain weak, proddy and inconclusive.

"Everybody can see that this is not a war for old and vindictive umbrella carriers but for bold and ready men, so that it is a benefit to his enemies that Chamberlain remains premier if possible, until the inevitable Anglo-French defeat."

The premier's speech in the House this afternoon is held to have added no new elements to the known facts.

Hostility Strong as Ever

Italian attention is almost wholly turned toward the Mediterranean, where more British war vessels have arrived. Yet the press reaction is still within what might be called normal lines and one cannot deduce anything much from it except that the Axis is as strong as ever and so is the hostility toward the Allies.

There may be something new from the Allied side, although the report that the British had asked the Italians to make up their minds about neutrality or war by May 16 is denied on every side—British and Italian.

It remains possible, however, that the British are trying to get a definite expression of opinion from the Rome government. Moreover, the whole situation is shaping up so as to force a showdown sooner or later. For five years the French and British have taken all kinds of abuse from the Italian press, and now they are answering back.

There are some here who believe that moving the fleet to Alexandria means that the Allies, having come to the obvious conclusion that Italy will join Germany anyway, have decided to pick their own time to force Italy to move, rather than wait until Rome finds a psychological moment to suit herself and Germany.

Most observers, however, are convinced that the Allies do not want to provoke Italy now.

German Stories Accepted

The morning newspapers take the line that the British fleet has come to the Mediterranean to find safe waters where they will not be bombed by the German air force. The German stories of sinking a British warship and a cruiser are naturally accepted by the Italian press.

The Italian government has made representations to the Holy See through its Ambassador, Dino Alfieri, concerning the Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, it was learned today.

It is objected that the Vatican City newspaper is taking a line at variance with that of the Italian press and since it circulation is chiefly in Italy this is causing embarrassment to the government.

Alfieri's request for a modification of this attitude is almost certainly going to be refused, and relations between the Holy See and the Rome government will doubtless deteriorate. As a matter of fact, they are not particularly cordial at the moment, which is something new in this Pontiff's reign. Since the Vatican is strongly anti-Nazi it has naturally looked with anxiety on the recent strengthening of the Rome-Berlin Axis forces for the immediate frustration of any such attempt."

One result, it was authoritatively stated, is that the Pope is not now exercising any direct influence upon Italian policy for the maintenance of nonbelligerency.

Yugoslavia, where the Balkan tension is highest, was increasing her men under arms to an estimated 600,000.

Britain's proposed alliance, according to diplomatic informants, would involve pledges to Rumania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey that the Allies would not start war in the Balkans, but that the Allied fleet, now at Alexandria, and the "Weygand Army" now assembled in the Near East would rush in to help in case the axis powers attacked.

To Open Whole Front

The British plan is understood to be to open the whole Balkan front at once in such an emergency, rather than let Italy or Germany attack one country at a time.

Yugoslavia, however, still was looking elsewhere for backing. Authoritative Belgrade quarters said trade talks between Yugoslavia and Russia have shifted now to "political subjects" as a result of Yugoslav fear of an Italo-German move, and the Belgrade government is believed moving rapidly for reestablishment of normal diplomatic relations with Russia, broken since 1917. Bulgaria, likewise tended to look toward Russia.

Moreover, the sudden departure from Zagreb for Rome of Archbishop Alojzije Stepinac, highest Catholic prelate in Yugoslavia, led to the belief that Pope Pius XII had summoned him in an endeavor to stave off the danger of the war spreading.

In Hungary, the press gave evidence of the country's solidarity with the Italian-German axis, saying that events in Norway and Denmark had proved that isolated neutrality is no longer possible.

Works With Allies

The Turkish National Assembly gave absolute power to the military in zones which will be placed under martial law in the event of war, and the Turkish press reiterated Turkey's resolution to fulfill her alliance with Britain and France in case of aggression in the Mediterranean basin.

As for the British plan to unite the Balkans defensively, Bulgaria seems to be the key. Up to now she has balked at any such alliance. But Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to Turkey, was in Sofia, reportedly making a high offer for Bulgarian adherence this time.

Bulgarian cooperation would permit overland passage of the Allied Near Eastern army under Gen. Maxine Weygand to Rumania and Yugoslavia.

But Bulgarian officials were reported cool to the idea, despite reported promises of a British loan, a corridor to the Aegean Sea and possibly southern Dobruja after the war.

[News that the Netherlands has canceled army leaves strengthens German suspicions that the Mediterranean tension is only a smoke screen for hiding Allied intentions to act elsewhere, the New York Times said, adding that it may well be that the Netherlands' number is next.—Editor's note.]

A semiofficial statement tonight asserted that Chamberlain's speech had only served to emphasize and deepen the "disdain" which the people hold for him and his capabilities.

Other Nazi leaders described Chamberlain's speech as "pretty weak stuff" and said the fact still remained that "German troops drove the British out of Norway and that is all there is to it."

These leaders admitted that there might be a great deal of truth in Chamberlain's warning of perhaps an "imminent" German attack on the British Isles.

"When Chamberlain said the English people do not yet realize the extent and imminence of the threat against England he spoke the truth," a spokesman said. "We are convinced that the English people do not yet know the true situation.

"They have been lulled into a sense of security by assurances that their blockade is winning the war."

The elevation of Churchill met with nothing but sarcasm in Nazi circles. "I am sure," said a spokesman, "that if the Norwegian campaign had been successful Churchill himself would have claimed credit. Now, however, in his new capacity he must bear the responsibility for the future failures."

Chamberlain was bitterly assailed for saying that the situation in the Mediterranean is quiter since the dispatch of the British and French battle fleets to Alexandria.

"How can they say that?" a spokesman asked.

"I have before me a desk covered with reports from southeastern Europe which show quite the contrary. The Mediterranean nations are worried.

"The British and French have an expensive army in the Mediterranean basin which is not designed for peaceful purposes."

Highlighting the intensified "Mediterranean scares" was a charge that Britain and France had set May 20 as a deadline for "ordered action" by the Allied army in the Near East.

The German government furnished all newspapers with a purported account of a telephone conversation last Tuesday night between Chamberlain and French Premier Reynaud.

454,000 Tons Of Nazi Ships Said to Be Lost

300,000 Tons Sunk, Captured or Scuttled Since Apr. 1, British Say

By Robert P. Post
Copyright by New York Times

London, May 7.—The Germans have lost about 300,000 tons of merchant shipping since April 1, according to an admiralty communique today. Presumably most of this tonnage lost was in the shape of supply ships and transports going to and from Norway and Germany.

The German mercantile tonnage now definitely sunk, scuttled or captured amounts, according to the admiralty, to 454,000 tons. It is estimated, the admiralty says, that 30 unidentified ships amounting to about 150,000 tons have been sunk by Allied mines, aircraft and submarines.

Enemy losses in mercantile tonnage since the war started are estimated at 600,000 tons or about 15 per cent of the pre-war total of the German merchant fleet.

British List Losses

Other mercantile losses for the week ended Sunday night are estimated at four British vessels with a tonnage of 8,689; one Allied ship with a tonnage of 1,458, and two neutral boats with a tonnage of 298.

Up to May 1, 19,908 British, Allied or neutral ships have been convoyed by the British with the loss of 31 or at the ratio of one to 616. Neutral ships convoyed were 2,912, with a loss of three, or one in 970.

French convoys for the same period contained 8,457 with the loss of seven ships. Therefore, Allied convoys since the war started contained 22,555 ships, with a loss ratio of 1 in 594. These figures make the total losses of world merchant shipping for April 41,677 tons, the smallest of any month since the war started.

Allied Forces Land Safely From Norway Despite Air Raid

By J. Norman Lodge
Associated Press Staff Writer

A Northern British Port, May 7.—An Allied expeditionary force from Namos, Norway, landed intact today despite an attack by 39 German bombers which sank three destroyers—the British Afridi, the French Bison and the Polish Gromo.

Naval losses were comparatively small, and not a single man was lost of the soldiers in convoy.

With two other Americans, Bonny Powell, Fox Movietone cameraman, and Arthur Menken, Paramount Newsreel photographer, who were taken aboard at Namsos Thursday night at the urgent suggestion of British headquarters, I witnessed the entire battle last Friday when Nazi planes dived at the convoy.

One German plane was shot down.

Bomb Misses 50 Yards

The convoy flagship, which was headquarters of British and French officers, narrowly escaped when a bomb hit the water but 50 yards to port. A series of incendiary bombs also narrowly missed.

The Bison was struck and the wounded and survivors were taken aboard another ship.

Shortly thereafter, the bombers reassembled and dived on the Afridi. They hit her. She listed badly and the survivors were transferred.

After the rescues were made the power-divers reappeared.

One, in a perfect spot to be concealed by the glare of the sun, dived nearly to the funnel tips and loosed a fatal bomb on the Afridi. She went down.

Six German planes appeared again, but defense fire drove them off before they could drop a single explosive.

The troops were taken aboard the transports at Namsos under very difficult conditions and by the light of a fire started by a German bomb earlier in the day.

Sleep in Passageways

They were forced to sleep in passageways in ships much too cramped for half the number taken aboard.

The officers fared no better than the privates, several sleeping on iron decks for the five-day voyage.

On Saturday, May 4, there was no sign of German aircraft, but a bad submarine scare was experienced and a hasty search was made. During the scare a British patrol plane appeared, and men and officers jumped on the decks, shouting, "hurrah, here's our aircraft."

Later the same day, a series of Bristol Blenheim bombers (British) appeared.

By this time some system had been devised aboard ship. When one company received corned beef hash, another got marmalade and bread. With considerable swapping the men made out a meal.

Upon arriving at this northern British port, we (Lodge, Powell and Menken) were taken from British custody by French marines and placed below deck where we were entirely forgotten—without food, water or fresh air—for 24 hours.

The only thing that saved the situation was the good-natured banter of our guards who spoke as bad English as we did French.

During the embarkation, mopping up squads of French and British blew up the Bangsund bridge, another bridge at Namalseid, barricaded a tunnel leading from Steinkjer to Namsos, blew up roads, and smashed the motor of every piece of transport in the Namsos area.

The American cameramen suffered terribly, when, after risking their lives throughout the entire Namsos campaign to photograph bombings, fires and exploding shells, they had to send their film to the London War Office aboard the sloop H. M. S. Bittern and from a hill watch a German dive-bombing attack sink the ship.

Powell, who is going through his eighth war as a cameraman, said, "I should have been killed several times. I never have taken better pictures. I cried as I saw the Bittern go down."

Narvik Battle Rages Without Positive Result

Allies Take Edge In Day's Fighting For Norse Iron Port

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, May 7.—The battle of Narvik continued today on land and in the air without any decisive results, but with the advantage admittedly in favor of the Allies.

According to the available reports, the Allies are encircling the Germans and are pressing down on the iron ore railroad from Narvik to the Swedish frontier, while Allied planes are bombing and machine-gunning the German troops wherever possible.

And though the Germans claim that "the situation is unchanged," it is generally believed here that the tenor of the German communiques presages German fears that this position might have to be abandoned.

The Germans have had plenty of time to entrench themselves in the mountains and the Allies must fight their way from ridge to ridge, moving their artillery from one peak to another to blast the German machine-gun nests opposite. Moreover, constant snowstorms are still interfering with the operations.

Despite this and despite the 100 German planes sent to Narvik to bomb and machine-gun the Allied troops, warships and supply vessels, the combined Allied forces are continuing their advance. Their mainstay now are the French Chasseurs Alpins, trained in this kind of warfare, who came up from Namsos, and more apparently on the way.

Committee Reconsiders Hatch Bill

bill for the session. But it left the measure still pending, undisposed of, before the committee.

Unlike last week's secret tabling ballot, conducted with typewritten, unsigned slips of paper, yesterday's vote was on the record, with the vote of each member disclosed.

No motion was made to report the bill, although it has been weeks under study in subcommittee. Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, said he will move for an immediate report on Thursday.

Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, said his drive for 218 petition signers to force the bill to the floor for action will continue unabated until the committee acts. He predicted a report will be ordered on Thursday.

Eight more members, meanwhile, marched to the rostrum to sign their names to the petition, bringing the total to 123. This was just 95 signatures short of the number needed to force a vote on the floor.

It was reference to this petition list by Representative Dempsey and later in some newspapers as a "roll of honor" that called forth much of Chairman Sumners' scorn.

"Talk to me about a roll of honor!" said Sumners. "You ought to be ashamed of yourselves, every man that wrote his name on that mess of stuff. You have slandered your people, saying that they cannot govern themselves and preserve the purity of elections in their own respective districts.

"If you do not have the decency to quit, they ought to kick you out. Oh, I do not mean that. I am sort of mad. They have been tromping on me."

Representative Hill later told the House that Sumners had "time and again" ridiculed those who signed the discharge petition, "and called us fools."

"He quoted the Bible," said Hill, "and I can quote the Bible too—'He who calls his brother a fool is in danger of hell-fire.'"

"Who is the gentleman from Texas?" asked Hill. "He comes from a State where only 28 per cent of the voters of the State vote. . . . A few years ago he said he wouldn't allow the Supreme Court bill to come on the floor of the House, and then he talks about dictatorship."

Majority Leader Rayburn retorted that there was no restriction in Texas on voting, and that Sumners was not criticizing petition signers.

"I think the gentleman from Washington (Knute Hill) will read in vain to find any criticism of the signers of the petition by the gentleman from Texas (Sumners)," said Rayburn.

Representative Shafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, interrupted Hill to say that signers of the petition took no position on the bill, but merely wanted the House to vote on the measure.

Shafer said he was glad the President had indorsed the Hatch bill and said he hoped he would support his amendment "to keep President Roosevelt and Jim Farley from shaking down the economic royalists by selling campaign books for $250 apiece."

Announcing his objections to the Hatch bill, House Majority Whip Boland told members he found out something about the operation of the original Hatch Act in the Pennsylvania primary last week. He said many WPA workers did not come to the polls because they were afraid that some people would talk to them about candidates and they would be prosecuted for violating the Hatch Act.

Chairman Sumners, who did not participate in last week's vote to table the Hatch bill, likewise cast no vote in yesterday's "untabling" action. He told members he would cast his vote later in the afternoon, referring to his prospective speech.

Following is the way the committee voted yesterday in ordering reconsideration of the bill:

For reconsideration—Celler, of New York; Healey, of Massachusetts; McLaughlin, of Nebraska; Murdock; Tolan, of California; Byrne, of New York; Massingale, of Oklahoma (Democrats), and Guyer, of Kansas; Hancock, of New York; Michener, of Michigan; Robsion, of Kentucky; Gwynne, of Iowa; Monkiewicz, of Connecticut, and Springer, of Indiana (Republicans).

Against reconsideration—Weaver, of North Carolina; Walter, of Pennsylvania; Hobbs, of Alabama; Creel, of Kentucky; Satterfield, of Virginia; Barnes, of Illinois; Gibbs, of Georgia, and Kefauver, of Tennessee (Democrats), and Reed, of Illinois; Graham, of Pennsylvania, and Vreeland, of New Jersey (Republicans).

Mrs. Roosevelt Attends School Dedication

General view of dedicatory exercises yesterday at the hospital and administration unit of the District Training School at Laurel, Md. Dr. Winfred Overholser is speaking. Inset—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as she spoke

To the accompaniment of music played and sung by inmates, a new infirmary administration building at the institution where the District cares for its feeble-minded was dedicated yesterday.

The District Training School at Laurel, Md., farthest removed of the Capital's municipal institutions and long critcized for its congestion and intermingling of children and adults, put on its best starched front for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, guest of honor, and the other distinguished visitors.

The First Lady spoke briefly, since she had to rush back to Washington for the Red Cross reception. After stressing her interest in adequate care for the mentally deficient, she toured the first floor of the new building and had to leave without inspecting the dormitory cottages, where 2-year-olds are quartered with middle-aged defectives.

First Lady Speaks

"A hospital is absolutely necessary for this type of institution," said Mrs. Roosevelt, addressing the 250 welfare workers, civic leaders and public officials gathered before the $250,000 three-story brick structure.

This is the first time in the training school's 15-year history that it has had an infirmary for the acutely ill among its population. In the past there was no choice but to treat meningitis, scarlet fever, measles and other contagious cases in the dormitory wards, risking transmission to other inmates.

The new structure, which has been in use since January, can accommodate 58 sick patients. There are four isolation wards for the contagiously ill. The third floor is not yet fully equipped and on completion the hospital will be able to care for 90 patients.

Because of serious overcrowding in the six dormitory cottages, a number of inmates are being housed in the hospital, though they are not ill. Two more 50-bed cottages will be erected this summer, but these, when finished, can be filled with inmates already living at the institution under double-up conditions, Dr. Lewald said.

Approximately 450 others have been certified for admission and are on the waiting list. Present population of Laurel Training School is 620, ranging from infants to aged men and women.

"There's an awful lot of room yet for improvement," the gathering was told by Commissioner John Russell Yoting, who said he had discussed proposed improvements with Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy and others.

Cites Figures

Dr. Winifred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, pointed out that from 2 to 3 per cent of the general population is mentally defective. Accordingly, he said, the District may be presumed to have 15,000 such cases, of which about 10 per cent, or 1,500, should be institutionalized.

"The diagnosis of mental deficiency is a dangerous one and should never be made on the basis of an intelligence test alone," said Dr. Overholser. "It should be made only by a psychiatrist after consideration not only of the intelligence test, but of the physical findings, the economic, social, developmental and school history.

"The early training of the mental defective is fully as important as that of the normal child and too hasty ruling out of the school system of a child who is backward may merely serve to facilitate his drifting into delinquency."

War Impels FCA Changes, Governor Says

By Hedley Donovan.
Post Staff Writer

Gov. A. G. Black of the Farm Credit Administration declared yesterday that the European war's unsettling effect on American agriculture is one of the factors requiring far-reaching changes in the present credit system.

Black appeared before a subcommittee of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee to support farm credit legislation sponsored by Senators Bankhead (Democrat, of Alabama; Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin.

The European war is likely to result in "persistently unstable agricultural conditions for a long period," he told the subcommittee.

Similar to House Bill

The measure before the subcommittee is similar to the bill offered in the House by Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

The House Committee devoted three weeks to open hearings on the bill in March and early April and has since debated the proposals at numerous executive sessions.

Jones said yesterday he expects the group to resume consideration of the measure next week, while another committee member, referring to bitter controversy over the bill and the possibility of adjournment by mid-June, called the legislation "as good as dead."

Black Cites Purposes of Bill

Before the Senate subcommittee, headed by James Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, Black said the chief purposes of the pending bill are "to provide a sound basis for reducing present interest rates under a scheme which ultimately would do away with interest subsidy payments and would place the system on a self-sustaining basis, and to provide clear authority and direction for the refinancing of farm indebtedness in cases where it is shown to be excessive."

He maintained that the bill, through decentralization, would "strengthen and extend the genuine cooperative participation of farmers" in the farm credit system.

COMMISSIONERS PROCLAIM NATIONAL RESTAURANT WEEK

Commissioner J. Russel Young presents A. G. Ernest, president of the Washington Restaurant Association, the proclamation declaring May 6th to 12th National Restaurant Week in Washington, D. C.

The Association devotes this week to acquainting the public with the advantages of restaurants. Restaurants are serving specially priced luncheons and dinners and are using banners, displays and newspaper advertising to get across their motto, "'Good Food Is Good Health."

CUSTOMERS' TREAT. This is one big, extra, superspecial week at all the restaurants around town. For it's National Restaurant Week and every chef is trying to outdo the other chefs in offering savory specials, usually at a price. Wherever you light, you'll find something notably delectable in victuals. We wish they'd make it National Restaurant Month instead of National Restaurant Week.

LYNN, THE LINNET. Warbler Lynn Allison has just arrived in the Flag Ship. Being a popular radio singer, Lynn can make a mike sit up and say "Auntie!" She's a charmful and beguiling addition to Flag Ship diversion. P. S. A new Apache dance team is about to start carrying on at the Flag Ship.

AIR BATTLE IN LOTUS! Tommy Tucker, ace Hollywood sound effect man, is stopping the Lotus show three times a day. His "air battle" will give you the jitters. Your hear air-raid alarms, the deep throb of bombers, the wicked "bz-zz-z" of combat planes, the rattle and bang of machine guns and baby cannon, ambulance sirens, finally the deep thump that means tickets to Valhalla for airmen. It was so realistic that it had some of the patrons looking for bomb shelters . . . Tommy is the fellow who invented the Tarzan call.

ELOPING EARLINE. You won't believe it, but Earline King, brown-eyed warbler of the Neptune Room, will soon celebrate her tenth wedding anniversary. She eloped with Joe King, whom you've seen as a ventriloquist in "Going Native" revues, when they were both in the eleventh grade of the North Carolina schools. And the youthful marriage has stuck like the best glue. Earline says her only rival is "Winnie Mae," Joe's female Charlie McCarthy.

THOSE RHYTHM LADS. Jim Fitzpatrick, of Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band, plays a niftick mellophone. It's a sweetened-up xylophone . . . Arthur Todd, of the King Cole Room, is putting a razor edge on his golf game by playing with Charley Malone, who's a crack amateur golfer when he isn't a pro Redskin footballer . . . Parley Eaton, the Rainbow Room's fine saxaphonist, had a paralyzing golf course experience the other day. He missed a hole-in-1 by less'n an inch . . . Jerry Rhoades and Art

Fitzpatrick DOWNER

Humes, plus that determined bachelor, Maestro Pete Macias, are the only unmarried members of the Lounge Riviera Orchestra . . . Tommy Johnson, of the Robin Hood, has a unique reason for not giving us his picture to put in the paper. He says, "All my pictures flatter me so much that no one recognizes me." Hey, Hollywood!

WANNA RADIUM GARDENIA? Francita is giving away armfuls of "radium gardenias" to dancers in the Shoreham Blue Room this week. When the blue lights come on your gardenia will glow like a star . . . Another Shoreham bright light is the tabloid version of "Chocolate Soldier" sung by Doraine and Ellis.

COMINGS AND GOINGS. Hurry up to Sharz-Zad! This is the last week for George Duffy's handsome rhythms. Shar-Zad closes for the season Saturday night. But there'll be special entertainment in the Carlton cocktail lounge all summer . . . The bright and breezy Fat Boy roof garden will open in about two weeks . . . And a little later on there'll be lavish opening parties on the Shoreham Tefrace and the Powhatan Roof Garden . . . You have until May 18 to enjoy the gayeties of the Pall Mall Room and La Salle Versailles. After that it's curtains for the summer.

MAYFLOWER MOON. Dick Koons and his Mayflower Lounge Orchestra are going dramatic with a "production number" of "Moon Over Miami." There's a moon, palm trees and other scenic effects. Sounds dangerous for the romantic minded.

MELODY AS YOU LIKE IT. The brittle conga tempos of Angelo di Bella in Lido's La Conga Room . . . The smooth lilt of Viennese waltzes as played by Sasha Lukas in the air-conditioned Troika . . . Those spanking novelty numbers dished up by Lyle Smith and his crew at the Mayfair . . . The completey screwball, "I'm Looking for the Guy That Plays Alto, Barytone and Wears a 37 Suit," now being given the works by Anchor Room's Eileen George . . . "There'll Be Some Changes Made," as indigoed all up by Hi Hat's Angie Rodante . . . Bill Downer's high-test dance rhythms that regularly lure so many hundreds to the Nightingale . . . The sizzling midnight dittos of the Rhythm Boys in Cafe Caprice. They tickle folks so much that they always bring back their friends to enjoy the fun.

CASINO ROYAL PROSPECTS. When the bright and flip "Dance Cocktail Revue" finishes the week at the Casino Royal, it will be succeeded by a completely new Broadway show with a full beauty line and vaudeville numbers.

METRONOME PICTURE. Don Bestor's sleek music and the highly seasoned songs of his vocalists, Johnny Russell and Penny Lee, are proving a knockout in the Metronome Room. Don's pal, Tommy Riggs, now playing the Earle Theater, bounced in the other eve and gave a ten-minute impromptu show . . . After the Bestor Orchestra finishes a full three weeks, it will be succeeded by Reggie Childs' Band, with Little Jack Little next in line.

ARE YOU HUNGRY? Then put some gas in your chariot and set your course for River Bend. "Piggy Party" is on again tonight. Tons of food and oceans of George Stein's rhythms all for one little dollar.

QUIET, PLEASE. That's just what you'll get in the Harrington Tavern. No noise, no rumpus. You can just sink down on a red leather divan and let the world go by as you enjoy a mint julep . . . Ditto for Dick's Grill, where the lights are soft, the voices low and the food is good.

MADRILLON'S NEW CABALLEROS. A quartet of real Cubans, Los Caballeros, will make their bow at the Madrillon tonight. The Caballeros will play congas and rumbas in the interludes between the American dance rhythms of the Carr and Don Orchestra. This means continuous dance music half of it in the Havana manner, half a la Manhattan. It's another fine Madrillon recipe for good times.

JAT HEROD (what a name!) and his magical fiddling have just arrived in the Robin Hood. Jat was formerly voilin solist with the great Walter Damrosch and has played concerts at the White House. But you'll enjoy his violin just as much in the cheerful Robin Hood as in the stately Presidential drawing room.

FLASH! FLASH! The telephone buzzes just at the deadline to tell us the happy news that there'll be a big "summer opening party" at the Lounge Riviera next Monday and that an all new show is starting at the Troika. More about these events next time.

Ill-Armed 'Tommies' Return From Norway

Associated Press RADIOPHOTO

In England Again—Steel-helmeted British "Tommies" are met by Gen. Sir Edmund Ironsides, chief of the imperial defense staff, after returning home from Norway. They disembarked at an undisclosed Scottish port. Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain yesterday named Winston Churchill to supervise Britain's armed forces in the war against Germany

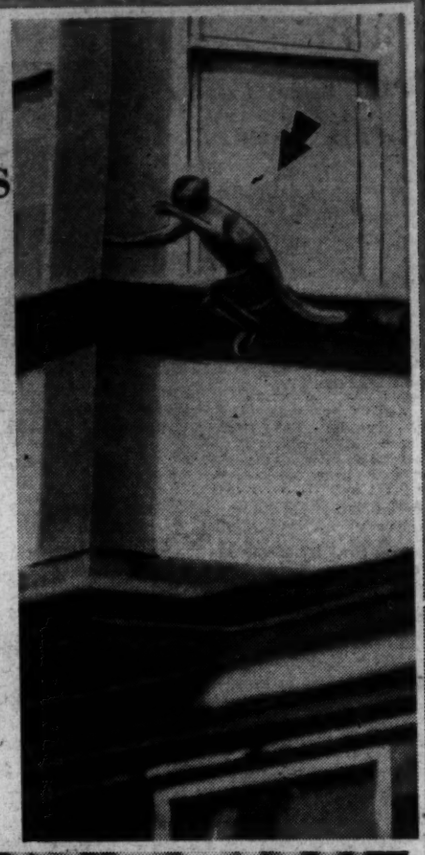
Monkey Business



Seventeen monkeys escaped yesterday from the Philadelphia Zoo, scampered up trees and houses and threw a densely populated neighborhood into a confusion which lasted for hours.

The monkey at right, jumping from house to house, is probably still on the loose.

Thirty police and firemen answered the Rhesus riot call and the excitement was too much for Mrs. Marie Deehan (below), who fainted and was carried away.

Up, Over!—Nancy Erskine will ride Creole in the horse show to be staged today at Forest Glen, Md., by National Park College students. The show will be part of the school's May Day celebration

No Nuisance—Scantily clad "car hops," like Ray McKinley, 18, attracted a brisk business at Roy Fenton's beer tavern in Texarkana, Ark., but brought protests from some housewives and a clergyman. Fenton was brought into court on a nuisance charge but was released when officers were unable to find an applicable statute

Massachusetts Avenue Detour Bridge Maintains Even Two-Way Traffic Flow

Detour Bridge—The three-lane detour bridge, which spans Rock Creek on Massachusetts avenue northwest, will be in use while work progresses on the $550,000 span (arrow). The new bridge, being built under a regular District appropriation, will be ready about January 20, 1941. The temporary bridge was constructed at a cost of $38,000 and makes available two lanes for traffic during the morning rush going downtown and two lanes for home-bound cars in the afternoon. The new bridge will eliminate the bottleneck on the Rock Creek and Potomac parkway, where the road passes under Massachusetts avenue

FBI Practices Peril Liberty, Norris Says

Nebraskan Holds Floor for 3 Hours To Assail Hoover

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, yesterday charged the Federal Bureau of Investigation with practices tending toward "the destruction of human liberty in the United States."

The 78-year-old Nebraskan held the Senate floor for three and a half hours to condemn FBI procedure in the arrests of 11 Detroit sympathizers of the Spanish loyalists and denounce J. Edgar Hoover as "the greatest hound for publicity on the American continent."

Norris said he was obliged "to take sharp issue" with the Justice Department report, issued last Saturday, absolving the FBI of any improprieties in the Detroit arrests. He called the report, prepared by Henry Schweinhaut, head of the department's civil liberties unit, and released by Attorney General Jackson, a "whitewashing."

Jackson Approval "Painful"

The Senator said he found it "painful" to learn that Jackson considered the bureau's procedure "proper in a free country." At the Capitol it was recalled that Norris two years ago argued eloquently for Jackson's confirmation as Solicitor General, describing him as a man of Supreme Court or Presidential timber.

Norris said those charged with recruiting for the Spanish loyalist forces had been arrested between 4 and 5 a. m., handcuffed and refused permission to communicate with relatives or counsel. He insisted that the facts in the case were not in dispute, and that "these men were treated like the worst felons."

Norris asserted that Hoover maintained at public expense a staff to write speeches for himself "or for anyone else who will take them."

"No organization that I know of meets in Washington without having some person appear before it to tell what a great organization the F. B. I. is," he continued.

Arrests Under Murphy

These speeches, Norris said, portray Hoover as "the greatest man of all, who . . . never made a mistake, never made a blunder. In his hands lie the future and the perpetuity of our institutions and our Government. All such organizations pass resolutions of commendation of this great man."

The Detroit arrests took place while Frank Murphy, now a Supreme Court Justice, was Attorney General. Jackson ordered dismissal of the indictments February 16, two weeks later defending the bureau against any charge of brutality in its procedure.

Norris insisted on further investigation. Last week's report from the Justice Department criticized the handcuffing of prisoners in a chain, but attributed this action to the United States marshal's office rather than the F. B. I.

A vocalist with Will Manvells' Vienna Syncopators will sing popular songs over station WMAL this morning. She is Miss Irene Kern, of Arlington, Va., and has appeared on the PDS program before. She also belongs to a local dramatic club, and collects dolls and postcards as a hobby.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in co-operation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Third of U. S. Farmers Live In Slums, Senate Hearing Told

One-third of the Nation's farm population lives in "rural slums," the Senate Civil Liberties Committee was told yesterday.

Carl C. Taylor, head of the Agriculture Department's division of farm population and rural welfare, declared that more than 500,000 American farms are on land "so poor that it is impossible to make a living on it, no matter how hard these families try."

Dr. Frank Lorimer, of American University, said the problem of the uprooted farm family, dramatized in the Pulitzer prize novel, "The Grapes of Wrath," is assuming national proportions.

If the country is to benefit from the potential service of these families, he said, "we must provide an education that conforms to American standards, preserve their health and create opportunities for full and constructive employment."

Comparatively high birth rates on the farm confront the country "with an immediate problem in the coming of age of nearly 400,000 farm youths every year," he said.

Dr. Lorimer asserted that "there are already more people in agriculture than can be supported at a decent level of living without perpetual subsidy, in a Nation which has not yet achieved the means of employing its natural resources effectively in servicing the needs of its people."

Only half the 400,000 farm youths are needed each year to replace the older workers in agriculture who die or retire, he stated. "The other half must choose between primitive subsistence in farming or turning to the open road in search of opportunities which do not exist."

Arnold Fears Fund Shortage Will Prevent Food Inquiry

By the Associated Press

Thurman Arnold, who has the Justice Department's antitrust division busy on several major fronts, said yesterday that he would like also to attack factors which keep food prices high in large cities.

The question of investigating and proscuting alleged abuses in the food distribution industry, Arnold said, is one of men and money, he made his statement in response to an inquiry about reported plans to begin an investigation in the Chicago area.

He said that while no plans had been made the department had long been interested in "comprehensive prosecution" in that field. However, he added, the division already was jammed with work and had been given no additional money in the 1941 appropriation, so that there was "a grave problem of whether there is sufficient personnel to undertake such a prosecution on a scale extensive enough to do any good."

Pullman Under Inquiry

From another Justice Department official, meanwhile, it was learned that an antitrust investigation of the Pullman companies has been under way for several weeks.

This official said that the question was whether one Pullman company was using its exclusive licenses and contracts with the railroads to give another Pullman company a monopoly in the manufacture of sleeping and chair cars.

The Pullman companies comprise a holding unit, an operating company which handles contracts and licenses, and a manufacturing company.

Madison Case Comment.

Asked about the Supreme Court's decision Monday in the Madison oil case, Arnold said that it "would be of tremendous advantage to consumers all over the United States."

The high court, in a 5-to-2 opinion by Justice Douglas, upheld the conviction at Madison, Wis., three years ago, of 12 corporations and five individuals for conspiracy to violate the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Arnold asserted that the court had ruled "finally and decisively that industries may not join together to put a floor under prices on the plausible excuse that any competition which hurts is a competitive evil."

66 Railroads to Offer Trips on Credit Plan

You will be able to pay for a railroad trip on the installment plan soon.

Announcement was made here yesterday on behalf of 66—"almost all"—railroads that after May 20 anyone with satisfactory credit may buy railroad tickets on credit. The only stipulation is that the cost of the proposed trip must be $50 or more. No down payment will be required.

says Jimmie Kelly, Champion Motor-cycle Racer and Enthusiastic Camel Smoker

ON A MOTOR-CYCLE I GO FOR SPEED IN A BIG WAY, BUT I KEEP MY SMOKING ON THE SLOW-BURNING SIDE WITH CAMELS. THAT WAY I GET A LOT OF 'EXTRAS'— IN MILDNESS, COOLNESS, FLAVOR—AND CAMEL'S SLOW WAY OF BURNING MEANS EXTRA SMOKING PER PACK

ON THE FAST SIDE—A 50-mile-an-hour skid, and Jimmie Kelly (No. 43) whips into the lead on the ocean beach at Daytona. On a racing motor-cycle Jimmie Kelly is a riding champion, but when it comes to cigarettes, this record-breaking driver is...

"ON THE SLOW SIDE"—That's Jimmie Kelly's way—and the way of millions of other smokers—of saying that he prefers the slower-burning cigarette... Camel. "That's where the 'extras' are in cigarette pleasure and value," explains Jimmie (above).

CHAMPION Jimmie Kelly (right, above) is just one of thousands of experienced smokers who have discovered that Camel's slower way of burning means several definite advantages. Being slower-burning, Camels are free from the drying, uncomfortable qualities of excess heat. They give you extra mildness and extra coolness... always so welcome. Slower burning makes the most of the full, rich flavor of Camel's costlier tobaccos. Camels give you extra flavor ...don't tire your taste. The extra smoking in Camels is a matter of the smokers' experience as well as of impartial laboratory record. So get more pleasure per puff and more puffs per pack. Get Camels. Penny for penny, Camels are your best cigarette buy!

● In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

The Maryland Vote

One significant fact emerges from the Maryland primaries held Monday. The Tydings-Jackson organization, supporting Senator George L. Radcliffe, has won a decisive victory. The incumbent's vote was not far short of twice that received by his anti-New Deal opponent, Howard Bruce.

It is difficult to trace or interpret with any assurance of accuracy the many cross-currents which combined to bring about this triumph for Senator Radcliffe. In one sense it is a notable victory for the New Deal. For the most part, Senator Radcliffe has been a loyal supporter of the Administration. In this campaign, however, he had the militant support of Senator Tydings, one of the Senators against whom President Roosevelt directed the attempted purge of 1938.

One point seems clear beyond dispute: Regardless of how their views on legislation may differ, the leaders of the Democratic Party in Maryland are ready to adapt their political allegiance to a winning combination. There was a good deal of substance to Mr. Bruce's campaign argument that the votes of Senators Tydings and Radcliffe have tended to cancel each other out. But that did not prevent them from forming a winning political team on election day.

Some observers are calling attention to the fact that the returns in Maryland place the Democratic Party of that State under control of an anti-New Dealer, Senator Tydings. It seems equally significant that the shrewd Mr. Tydings used a New Deal candidate to achieve this victory. Certainly there was nothing in Monday's vote to suggest any anti-New Deal trend in Maryland, or any formidable opposition to President Roosevelt if he is nominated for a third term.

Washington has one special concern in the outcome of the primaries, the defeat of Representative Ambrose Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy has served as an active and intelligent member of the House District Committee and is the moving spirit behind the bill to reorganize the cumbersome and inefficient District government. His defeat will be widely regretted here, particularly if his service to the District was regarded by his constituency as an unimportant matter.

Expanding Frontiers

Both a promise and a challenge to youth may be inferred from statements at the dinner for several hundred college students given in New York this week by Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of General Motors. Youth is not unaccustomed to glowing pictures of the future's boundless possibilities. On the other hand, it may be a healthy shock to hear opportunity and personal responsibility related as concisely as they were at this function.

The students wished to know, among other things, whether Government or private industry will solve the problem of want amid plenty. The answer, in effect, was neither. "Your opportunities," Mr. Sloan said, "are just what you make them." Charles F. Kettering, vice president of the corporation, went further:

"We have excesses of men, money and materials. All that we lack today are new projects—new inventions, new products, new activities." His speech was a call for individual exertion, with confidence that industry is ready to take care of those who are ready to take care of themselves.

Mr. Kettering suggested there might be "a number of major industries hidden" in a list of questions he submitted. Among these were:

How do plants fix the sun's energy? What is the nature of the atom? How may we use farm products more effectively? How do catalysts work? What is the nature of vitamins? What makes glass transparent and metals opaque?

Such questions will probably be examined further at the conference on "New Frontiers in American Life" which opened yesterday at the University of Rochester. There educators, industrialists and students are meeting to discuss whether there really are "new frontiers," and if so where. The Rochester gathering also will inquire what the colleges can do to help locate the frontiers.

To this Mr. Kettering replies, in effect, "seek and ye shall find."

The Commons Debate

Yesterday's full-dress debate in the House of Commons on the Norwegian fiasco was, for all its grim overtones, a heartening demonstration of democracy in practice.

Dictators cannot afford to admit their failures. They dare not submit to parliamentary criticism. The myth of their invincibility must be maintained at all costs. The truth, if it is unpalatable, must be kept from the people.

Democracies, when they are true to themselves, must and do act on the opposite assumption that full exposure of governmental policy, however disturbing it may be at the moment, can have only salutary effects in the long run. That is why one of the strongest points made against the Chamberlain government in yesterday's debate was that the full truth had been kept from the British people, that they have been spoon-fed with optimistic statements by government leaders who, by their own present admission, had no warrant for their optimism.

In his defense of the government's policies, Premier Chamberlain sought neither to divest the cabinet of responsibility for the outcome in Norway nor to minimize its scope, although he did point out certain extenuating aspects of a disastrous campaign forced on Great Britain by Germany's ruthless invasion of Scandinavia. Excuses, however, did not save the aging prime minister from rough treatment at the hands of an aroused and embittered opposition.

That the effect of the debate will be the immediate displacement of Mr. Chamberlain, or any large-scale shake-up in the present cabinet, appears, from present indications, doubtful. The only immediate result is some extension of the powers of Winston Churchill, to include the supervision of military operations from day to day.

At the same time the debate has revealed complete unanimity, among all parties, on the desirability of prosecuting the war with greater vigor. The defeat in Norway has created among the British people no spirit of defeatism. On the contrary, it appears to have stiffened their backs. They realize now as they have never realized before how formidable is the task before them. But such realization is usually necessary to stir the British to full effort.

George Lansbury

Although he was for many years a leader of the British Labor Party, George Lansbury was always much more than a party man. The evangelist in him outstripped the politician. His beliefs could not be confined within the four walls of party doctrine and when he found a conflict between his principles and his politics the latter took second place. This was demonstrated in 1935, when Lansbury resigned leadership because the Labor party accepted rearmament as a national necessity.

There were two evils which Lansbury regarded as paramount and which he fought with all the ardor of his being. They were poverty and war. He believed that both could be eliminated by the application of reason. He was convinced of the basic nobility of men and of the constructive results certain to follow an appeal to their better selves. And in this he made no exceptions. He was as certain that it held for Hitler as for himself.

There is pathos in the fact that George Lansbury is dead in the midst of a war which he had always sought to prevent; the effect of which is certain to be an extension of that poverty which he always believed to be unnecessary in the modern world.

But "Old George," as he was affectionately known, would not have taken this too much to heart. He had the saving grace of humor, well demonstrated by his biography in the august British "Who's Who." There, after listing his religious affiliation as Church of England he promptly added: "Teetotaler, non-smoker, twice in prison."

Delayed Drive

As is often the way, few people realized how important a place the National Symphony Orchestra had created for itself until Washington was recently threatened with its loss. The volume and degree of concern shown at that time demonstrated as nothing else could that the Symphony, in the nine years of its existence, has come to fill a real need in our local community.

However, the ill wind that fanned the flames of the Orchestra Association's dispute with the musicians' union, may prove to have brought with it some good results for both sides. The ensuing publicity brought forcibly to public consciousness the highly intricate problems connected with the maintenance of the orchestra and the importance of the annual sustaining fund without which the orchestra could not exist.

Combined with the fact that the campaign was necessarily greatly delayed, this should in some ways facilitate the work of the 700 volunteer workers who will knock on our doors in the next few days. For now, more than in any previous year, they will need spontaneous and generous cooperation.

A Much Better Start

In two respects the House Judiciary Committee has corrected its recent blunder in tabling the Hatch bill. Yesterday it voted to reconsider that unfortunate action. Reversing its previous tactics, the latest vote was made a matter of record and announced to the public.

That straightforward response to a widespread public demand is encouraging. In effect, the committee has acknowledged that the method used to sidetrack the clean-politics bill was improper. Its members have now decided that they must face the consequences of votes for or against this measure in an open and democratic manner. That in itself is a really notable gain.

The 14-to-11 vote for reconsideration also suggests that the committee is now willing to submit the bill to a fair test of strength on the House floor. To be sure, the committee has not officially approved the bill and there is no certainty as to when, if at all, it will be reported to the House. But at least the untenable position taken last week has been reversed and the door opened to further debate on the merits of the bill.

No doubt the timely support given the clean-politics movement by President Roosevelt was a factor of importance in the Judiciary Committee's decision. Since he rather grudgingly signed the first Hatch bill, the President's attitude has crystallized into hearty indorsement for this reform legislation. His timely request that State and local employes, paid in full or in part by Federal funds, be restrained from active participation in political campaigns fairly cuts the ground from beneath opponents of the bill in the House.

With the President's support, the Hatch bill becomes a truly nonpartisan piece of legislation. Leaders of both the Democratic and Republican parties favor its enactment. Votes in the Judiciary Committee for reconsideration, moreover, were evenly divided between Republicans and Democrats. The issue is in no way partisan. It is simply a question of preventing the use of Federal money to grease the wheels of local political machines.

The Judiciary Committee is now under obligation to present that issue to the House without delay. Its responsibility in the matter has not been changed by Chairman Sumner's fiery attack upon the bill. Mr. Sumner has completely missed the point of this legislation. It does not constitute an invasion of States' rights. It is merely an attempt to safeguard previous legislation extending aid to the States from abuse by politicians. That issue ought to be laid clearly before the House.

Grapes And Gripes

This year the annual Pulitzer awards will probably meet with general approval. The one likely to arouse most criticism is John Steinbeck's prize-winning novel "Grapes of Wrath." This will be nothing however, to the storm which would have arisen had the book been overlooked.

Whether or not "The Grapes of Wrath" is great literature has been a topic of dissension ever since its publication. This specific argument has gotten little further than the abstract one which has long raged on the question of whether good propaganda can be good art. It must be assumed that the Pultizer prize was awarded solely on the basis of what the committee deemed the literary merit of the book and not for any message it contained. Nor can it be taken for granted that the judges necessarily share Mr. Steinbeck's social viewpoint.

It is also an open question whether this is the author's most outstanding work. Judged as literature many will continue to think much more highly of his earlier novel "Of Mice and Men." However that may be, it did not of course arouse nearly the amount of interest that was shown over his late production.

In all his work Mr. Steinbeck has wisely stuck to places and people he knows intimately. And it so happens that the difficulties which face the farmers and migrants in the San Joaquin Valley, and the reactions of the people to those obstacles, are a vital part of American life today. Because he knows these problems well, and has the power to describe them forcefully, the choice of his most popular novel will be sustained by the jury of public opinion.

A Bombay man claims a ghost waked him the other night and threw him out of a window. A ghost could get the same results with us with less effort. All he'd have to do would be to wake us and stand between us and the door.

We'd like well enough to see Secretary Cordell Hull become a Presidential candidate, although we know full well that several thousand awful puns anent the Ship of State would thereby be precipitated.

Author Of Song

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Friday's program, Lee Everett announced over WMAL that, although many requests had come in for the origin and author of "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny," he was not sure just who had written it.

For the benefit of those who might want to know, "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny" was written by James A. Bland, a Negro, who was born in Washington, D. C., in 1854. He attended local schools and was graduated from the preparatory department of Howard University in 1873.

"Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny" was copyrighted in 1875, when the author was only 21 years old, and it at once became a popular tune all over the country. For more than 60 years this ballad has been sung and hummed all over the world, and it continues to be a familiar and favorite air. Last year it was recommended by the Virginia Conservation Commission that "Carry Me Back to Ol' Virginny" be accepted by the general assembly at the World's Fair in New York as the State of Virginia's official anthem.

Many other well-known songs have been written by this colored man—among which are "In the Evening by the Moonlight" and "In the Morning by the Bright Light." James Bland was a musical prodigy and later went on the stage as a minstrel. For years he was famous not only in this country, but became a minstrel of great world popularity.

He died in Philadelphia on May 5, 1911, and was buried there. More detailed information—a biography by Kelly Miller, an article in the Etude magazine, etc.—may be located in Howard University library.

Reorganization

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest recent articles about the President's Fourth Reorganization Plan. Most of us as American citizens are in favor of reorganization to increase Government efficiency and reduce expenditures. However, transfers of Government agencies should be made only after thorough consideration, and hearings from those in position to know the effects of such transfers.

It seems to be well established that the proposed reorganization was arrived at in secret sessions and that the administrators responsible for the agencies concerned were given no opportunity to present their views on the far reaching consequences of the transfers. Certainly the purest of reorganizers will agree that it is wrong for a group of theorists to get together and reshape organizations about which they have no intimate knowledge.

I join with those who vote to keep the Civil Aeronautics Authority independent so that it may continue its good work, and to leave the Weather Bureau in the Department of Agriculture where it has developed a Nation-wide service through the far-flung field organization of that department, a service which saves hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to commerce and industry as well as to the farmers. I am told by an official in that department that if the reorganization "theorists" had any conception of the inter-relation and ramifications of the Weather Bureau with the agricultural structure, they would have recognized that it should be left in that department.

In Ironic Vein

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I heartily indorse the proposed acquisition by the United States of the British and French West Indies in part payment of the debt of the mother country, because this acquisition would be in line with some of the highest principles of American democracy.

First, we take what we want.

Second, we again shoulder the white man's burden, namely, carrying on our own backs the profit from the labor of darker peoples. The lords and masters in England and France cannot or will not pay their debts. And so, we take their islands, with their potential naval and air bases, their rum, bananas and "niggers." The people will have no more to say about who will be their new masters than will the rum or the bananas. In other words, the brown West Indian must pay the debts of white Europe.

Third, we know how to govern a dark race. In spite of an occasional lynching, a little cheating in the Southern public schools to deprive Negroes of their fair share of expenditures, the general exclusion of colored people from West Point and Annapolis, the almost total disfranchisement of some 8,000,000 Negroes in the South, and a few other peccadillos, our American Negroes, as a Richmond paper used to say, are "the best Negroes in the world."

Now, the French are just lacking in finesse. They actually permit a colored West Indian, M. Gratien Candace, to preside over their Legislature in Paris. They even retained another colored West Indian, Commandant Mortenol, in command of all the antiairplane defenses of Paris. Let's take the French West Indies, I say, so that we can stop all of this tomfoolery and carry the blessings of American democracy and white supremacy to the little brown brother in the Caribbean.

C. I. O. On Unemployment Benefits

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your advice to "certain labor groups" that they accept Mr. McGehee's latest gem, H. R. 9619, contains certain statements in error of the facts. The most important error is that the bill has "liberalized benefit payments."

No doubt this misconception is based upon the naive belief, usually true, that $16 is more than $15 and that 18 weeks is more than 16 weeks. Actually District workers, all of them—family men with dependents, single persons without dependents, high paid workers and low paid workers—would receive a reduction in the number of weeks of benefits if Mr. McGehee's bill were to become a law.

The present law enables a worker to receive benefits over a period of 26 weeks, so that the simple arithmetic facts, in discussing weeks of benefits as they relate to Mr. McGehee's latest, show that the 18 weeks now proposed are less than the 26 weeks provided in the present law.

However, as your editorial writer is no doubt aware, unemployment compensation is a rather technical subject; and it may be that the "high priests" of this profession and those who stand to give by keeping unemployment compensation at a minimum, prefer to leave the subject in the realm of the complicated. This has the double value to them of putting a premium on the services of the "high priests" and of making it possible to write a bill which will seem liberal but in fact will be the opposite and will confuse even well-intentioned editorial writers.

Unemployment benefits are computed in part on the basis of what a man earns during a given period and the benefits will vary primarily in relation to a man's earnings. By that device it is possible for a $15 maximum benefit amount a week to mean more than a $16 maximum benefit amount a week, strange as this may seem to the average American. The reason for this is that the present law and Mr. McGehee's new bill each have different ways of crediting a man's earnings; and further, each have different ways of computing what the "high priests" call "weekly benefit amount."

Thus a worker earning $20 a week might find his wages computed under the present law in such a way as to give him a weekly benefit amount of $13 a week. Under Mr. McGehee's bill this same worker would have the misfortune of having his benefit amount computed at $11. What good is it to this worker, therefore, to know that The Washington Post thinks that he is better off because Mr. McGehee's bill would give $16 maximum, which is more than $15?

We could go on, would your space and patience permit, but this same worker, suffice it to say, might under the present law during a given year draw in benefits a total of $338, whereas under the most liberal interpretation the maximum that this same worker would get under Mr. McGehee's "liberal compromise" would be $198! Small wonder neither we nor the working people of Washington appreciate the "half a loaf" advice of this editorial in The Post of May 3. It seems rather as if the McGehee bill would take "half a loaf" of the small sum the worker already has, with the employers of the District of Columbia receiving $1,000,000 reduction in taxes per annum.

The moral of this is that "where the problem looks intricate look first before plunging, because there might be a lot of pitholes."

Defends Lippmann

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fearing Mr. Walter Lippmann will not deign reply to Mr. Corker in The Post of May 6, permit me to suggest that anyone who failed to commend and appreciate the article complained of by Mr. Corker must be overburdened by blind prejudice.

As a most outstanding contributor to your splendid paper, Mr. Lippmann needs no defense at my hands or those of others. That his conclusions are correct must be apparent.

It is becoming more and more clear that present conditions are the result of sabotaged international organization and cooperation, and which is traceable in large measure to the efforts of the "Bill" Borahs, the "Hi" Johnsons and the Cabot Lodges. These, aided and abetted by a majority of the influential press, crucified the greatest hope for universal peace.

After another world blood bath, may common sense have its inning.

Totalitarian Team

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The totalitarians have the pitchers. A combination of Johnson, Waddell, Mathewson, Walsh and Joe Wood would have nothing on them. Their opponents or possible opponents have no pitchers. I don't see that much can be done about it. Not in this generation anyway. And it seems to me that the scribes traveling with the opponents of the totalitarians are about as poor a lot as ever got on the pay roll of our daily papers.

The Post Impressionist

The Barefoot Girls

Never have I been famous in any degree, and certainly not in the realm of sports. My few attempts to play tennis or basketball brought only scorn from my schoolmates. In fact, they were right when they remarked that I, reaching for an elusive tennis ball, looked like a cow chasing a butterfly. Thereafter, in high school and college, I buried my head in a book and did not emerge to compete for athletic honors.

But some years later, after three months of applying for a teaching position, I wished that my talents had been more expansive. For everywhere I applied for a teaching job I was rejected. All seem to need a basketball coach. In sheer desperation I finally told one country superintendent I could, and thereupon, having the other qualifications, was elected.

October came. My bluff was called. There was nothing to do except attempt the impossible. One day after classes about 20 robust, hefty specimens of vigorous womanhood turned out for practice.

Each girl informed me that the team had won the district championship the year before, and this year they were aiming for State honors. I had heard all that from the superintendent. Every word they spoke made me tremble like a leaf in a hailstorm.

That first day I grouped them around me and read aloud the new rules of the game. The next day I passed the time by encouraging the team to elect a captain. On the third day I talked about good sportsmanship and fair play. Then came the fifth day, and I handed out new uniforms. Thereby a week went by, and not once had I blown the whistle for a real practice.

Monday the fatal day could no longer be postponed. That morning I started out on the 2 mile trek to the squatty looking, two-story frame building that was the schoolhouse. My heart was heavy I looked for some method of escape, but could find none. Men, women and children working barefooted in the fields looked up to gaze at the new teacher.

As I walked dejectedly down the dusty road all I could see were the 20 unpainted frame houses that made up the residential section. Only two domiciles could boast a coat of paint. There was no postoffice, no electric lights, no trains. As I passed one of the two cross-road grocery stores a group of farmers yelled, "When is the first basketball game?" Miserably I continued on my way.

At 2 o'clock that day it poured rain. Thus I had been spared another day.

Tuesday of the second week dawned clear and bright. It was one of those mild Indian summer days—a perfect time for practicing basketball. A faculty meeting was called that day—so one more respite from humiliation. But come Wednesday I grimly decided not to shirk my duties longer. Fortunately, two-thirds of the school had brought excuses from their parents to get out early to pick cotton. Something intervened Thursday—I can't remember what. Only Friday was left of the second week.

Thirty girls showed up for practice that afternoon. The sun beamed down and the players looked slyly at each other. After a few turns around the court, every girl removed her shoes and stockings. I stood horrified. Accustomed to roaming barefooted during the summer, they could not stand the heat on this belated summer day.

In less than 30 minutes the pupils sensed my lack of knowledge and experience, and at first they told me about it politely.

What could I do but fumble around? The superintendent looked at me daily with fishy, questioning eyes. Surely he had been informed of my incompetence. On we struggled through the practice. The first game with a rival school loomed near. How, and I don't know why, the gals won with flying colors. Each time that we had a game I dreaded defeat, knowing the blasphemy that would be heaped upon my ears. Yet, there was no defeat—nothing could stop those girls—not even a poor coach.

At the end of the season my team was selected to play the upper State winners for championship honors. If they lost that game I would be socially ostracized and certainly not re-elected next term. On Sunday the preacher talked about the big game instead of the foibles of youth. Missionary society meetings invariably slithered into gusty discussions of the oncoming game.

Finally the big occasion arrived. My team went into the arena determined to win. Their opponents had the same idea. Standing on the side lines, I watched every play as I paced up and down. End of the first half the score was 10 to 0 in favor of the rival team. By this time it looked like a good licking for us. The whistle shrilled for the third quarter. From grandchild to great-grandpapa of my rooters were offering suggestions. In the middle of the stretch, with still no score for my team, the captain called time out.

Was someone hurt? A dead silence enveloped the crowd. I looked, so did everybody else. Our captain jerked off her shoes and socks, flung them out of the court. With that signal the entire team shed their shoes and stockings. A horrified stillness reigned over the huge city gymnasium, broken almost instantaneously by a shout from the electrified spectators. A roar of laughter reverberated from the 10,000 people assembled in the capital city of the State to watch the undefeated city team lash the low country, village backwoods squad. The opponents (city gals) giggled superciliously. But not one girl on that barefoot team heard the snickers, or cared. Barefooted, lithe and free to dart around, they played as the French legion fights in a pinch.

Minutes seemed hours. Then the final whistle sounded. The score stood 20 to 10 in favor of the barefoot basketball team. "Battling Barefeet" the morning papers called them—a little satirically. But what matter; the hometown toasted them as heroines.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Odds-On Favorite

Hull's Chances

CORDELL HULL remains the odds-on-favorite for the Democratic Presidential nomination if the President does not run again. There are many ironies in this present status of the Secretary of State.

Seven, or even four years ago, Hull seemed to be only a curious holdover, the emoodiment of the more respectable liabilities inherited from the Democratic Party's dead past. His economic beliefs were so much at variance with the New Deal as to seem incompatible with it.

Hull's economic creed is almost simon-pure mid-nineteenth century international liberalism. Roosevelt was elected in 1932 and again in 1936 as the leader of a sharply different school of thought: a modern type of national liberalism. Roosevelt's fundamental thesis in 1932 was that the United States could work its way out of the depression by national measures. Hull's was the almost diametric opposite, that we could recover only through the restoration of an international economic system based on free-flowing trade.

The clash between the Roosevelt-New Deal thought and the Hull theory was brought out sharply at the beginning of the World Economic Conference in 1933. Hull's main speech at that conference was a scathing repudiation of all national efforts at recovery. Even after it had been toned down by Charley Michelson—and later by the President—it read like a wholesale condemnation of the New Deal. Later on Hull began to accommodate his public utterances to the Roosevelt Administration's program, but without surrendering one jot of his own economic theory.

NOW THE PRESIDENT, who for several years has contrived in every way to prepare the way for the nomination of a New Deal successor, seems to have settled on Mr. Hull. This would be altogether reasonable if experience had proved the New Deal to be wrong and Mr. Hull to be right. The New Deal has not been a complete success, although it has impressive gains to its credit. But Mr. Hull has not been proved right. He may be right. But the cold fact is that his one distinctive program has been a failure. Even before the war, the gains from his reciprocal treaties were inconsequential. Now the war has washed out almost the entire program. More nations have been brought within the totalitarian trade system. Under the exigencies of war the two great European democracies are controlling their own trade more thoroughly than ever before in their modern history. And their methods are more and more dominating the trade of neutral nations.

No New Deal experiment has failed so utterly as Hull's trade program. And the chances of reviving a world economy on the Hull principles are even more remote today than they were when he gritted his teeth and went into action against heavy odds seven years ago. Again, it must be emphasized, Hull may have been and may be right in theory. But events have shattered what he stood for in the economic field. Yet, singularly, with failure, his availability for the Presidency has increased.

Still another irony in Hull's status as the apparent heir is that on all sides, including the inside of the New Deal, it has been agreed that the Federal Government needs better administration. One of the main arguments of the more liberal Republicans is that they can administer the New Deal reforms better than the New Dealers can. Now Hull, by temperament, is not an administrator. He is slow in making up his mind. At times he is overwhelmed with indecision. He will consume an hour in talking generalities to an unimportant visitor. Hull is, in fact, a promoter for his pet ideas. And he is a skillful politician.

IN STRAIGHT administrative ability, it is doubtful whether anybody in the Cabinet, or of sub-Cabinet rank, is any worse than Hull. Yet, as President, he might have an abler set of administrators than Roosevelt has had. Unquestionably, Hull would concentrate on the main policies, giving Cabinet officers fuller responsibility than they have had under Roosevelt.

There are still other ironies in Hull's position as Roosevelt's most probable successor. He is 11 years Roosevelt's senior and far less energetic than the man who may retire in his favor. He is not in the least glamorous. He is not even a good platform or radio artist. By comparison, Bob Taft is the epitome of political "it."

Hull is, however, more than just a compromise between the New Dealers and the old-line Democrats. He has built up an immense store of public confidence. Recent Gallup polls indicate that he would do better than Roosevelt in a race with either Taft or Vandenberg.

Character must be the key to his popularity. Character, and perhaps his caution. He gives the feeling that, rigid and extreme as he may be in his theories, he will never go off half-cocked. That is a reassuring feeling to have in the present state of the world.

District to Empty Albemarle Pond At Owners' Cost

The Commissioners yesterday directed the Inspection Division to abate the "nuisance" in the 3700 block of Albermarle street northwest and charge the cost to the property owners.

The nuisance, a pond at Thirty-eighth and Albermarle street, will be abated by laying a pipe line from the low point on the property to the Albermarle street storm sewer.

For several years, the hole has filled with surface water endangering the health of the neighborhood.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Pulitzer Prize Awards

SET DOWN 1939 as a banner year. In it two great books were published in America, and both of them won Pulitzer prizes: John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath" and Carl Sandburg's "Abraham Lincoln: The War Years." To match it you would have to go back to 1885, when Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" and William Dean Howell's "The Rise of Silas Lapham" burst into print; and in 1885, of course, there were no Pulitzer prizes. Joseph Pulitzer had just bought the New York World and neither Pulitzer nor his World had yet revealed much interest in literature.

"The Grapes of Wrath" was, of course, the obvious choice, but its selection, nevertheless, does honor to the hierarchy which determines Pulitzer awards. For the book is almost as vulnerable to petty criticism as was Bertrand Russell's appointment to the staff of the College of the City of New York. Its ending is weakly melodramatic; it uses the authentic, foul language of truck drivers and farm workers; it dares to be funny as well as tragic, and it is a novel with a mission. Worse than that it succeeded in its mission, of arousing America to awareness of the plight of the migratory workers. Chambers of commerce, nice-Nelly librarians, patriotic Oklahomans and overheated Californians protested, and the more the book was denounced the more it was read. It belongs with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Jungle" among the novels which have affected the course of American history; it would have been in keeping with a tradition of Pulitzer-prize timidity to pass it by. Yet it also belongs with "Huck Finn," "Silas Lapham" and a very few other American novels as a great and compassionate work of art; it was fitting to recognize that fact.

Sandburg's four mighty volumes deserved the biography award, but the specifications exclude biographies of Washington and Lincoln as "too obvious" choices. The exclusion may be justified on general principles; but there has never before been a life of Lincoln to approach Sandburg's in richness of texture, in insight and imagination, or in its all-around vision, and there is no biography of Washington that matches it.

I think that the Columbian boards, which have changed the prescriptions before, might this year have made another change. Instead they gave to Mr. Sandburg's book the award in history (which, indeed, has twice the monetary value of the biography prize), and with that compromise no one will seriously quarrel. When the Saturday Review of Literature polled critics for Pulitzer Prize nominations, indeed, I cast my vote for the book to all three categories of biography, history and poetry.

THE BIOGRAPHY AWARD, to Ray Stannard Baker's "Woodrow Wilson: Life and Letters," the seventh and eighth volumes of which appeared last year, is the surprise choice. This volume, in fact, is more history than biography—a documentary record of Mr. Wilson as a world figure rather than a biographical interpretation. Not one of the 50 critics polled by the Saturday Review suggested it for the biography prize (or, indeed, for any other); their votes went, after Sandburg, chiefly to Henry Canby's "Thoreau" and to Henry Pringle's "Life and Times of William Howard Taft." And it is unfortunate that the award seems to be given to these two final volumes, tiredly thrown together in day-by-day diary form, rather than to the better digested earlier books in the series. The fifth and sixth volumes, dealing with the early years of neutrality, have, however, an extraordinary contemporary significance. Their careful analysis of the steps by which America approached entry into the first World War—the influence of bankers' loans, of the munitions trade, of outright propaganda and of German acts—has a sharper edge today than when they were published, in 1935-'36. Our minds have been conditioned by those memories—perhaps not too wisely.

Mark Van Doren's poems are never long-winded; and they are shorter in the "Collected Poems" which won the Pulitzer poetry prize than as originally published. They are lean-whittled. Mark Van Doren is a son of the Illinois prairie; but the granite hills of New England have left their mark on his writing. His work has often, and superficially, been compared with that of Robert Frost. It has a larger horizon; it expresses a sense of the American continent.

Fifth Column On The March

By Dorothy Thompson

Nazi Infiltration In The Balkans

Zurich.

IF AND when the war actually comes to southeastern Europe, it will have been preceded long before by the fifth column of those agents, secret and open, those conspirators, spies, commercial agents, provocateurs, revolutionists and propagandists, who search out the Henleins and the Tisos, and the Quislings, the malcontents and the traitors, the idealists and the rascals, who prepare the way and open the gates for the soldiers.

This is a strange war. It is not only a war, it is a revolution. There is little chivalry in it, unless it be perhaps among common soldiers who do their tasks, among airmen who form a transcendental society of their own, and among seamen who fight in actual conflict with their equals according to old tradition. Waters and roads are mined by soldiers. That is war. But nations are mined and undermined in other ways. The Nazis have gone to school with the Russians and have been good students. The Italian Fascists know the technique also. Russia, Italy and Germany are all led by revolutionists who have made subversive movements into instruments of conquest. In this field the Allies are absolutely no match for them.

The Nazis, especially, proceed with a scientific thoroughness. There is not a disgruntled individual, not an over-ambitious statesman or politician, not a resentive social class, not a discontented national minority, not an avaricious business man, whom they overlook. Like strategists surveying the terrain upon which the campaign is to be conducted, mountains and streams that must be crossed, swamps that must be circumvented, the estates and farms upon which troops can be quartered; who study the climate and the seasons, who know when the roads will be muddy or under snows, estimating every advantage and every handicap, these twentieth century revolutionary leaders sap the very structure of the society against which they are campaigning, and know all the weak points, which can be made weaker.

I WRITE this on the train between Trieste and Zurich, on the way back from a tour which has taken me to Italy and Turkey, to Rumania, Hungary and the two provinces of Yugoslavia, Serbia and Croatia—from the east of Germany to the Dardanelles, from the Adriatic to the Black Sea and back again. In no country is the aspect of things quite the same as it is across the border in the neighboring country. But one aspect is everywhere typical: The technique of subversion as a weapon of conflict.

Because the Nazis have perfected the weapon with the most meticulous thoroughness, while, at the same time, their methods are the most crude and the most obvious, it is easiest to study the German side of the picture. The Russians are more devious, and the Italians more inhibited, subtle and Machiavellian.

IN CONTRAST to the Allies, who pursue their own political aims along the more trodden and traditional paths, working through governments, established commercial connections, and espionage organizations euphemistically called "intelligence services," the Germans, who use these mediums also, vastly expand them in an effort to reach, tap and influence the broad masses. I have counted ten ways in which they work; I have doubtless overlooked numerous others.

1. The German minorities. In all the southeastern countries there are large colonies of German-speaking people, settled there for generations, but never completely divorced from the influence of the mother country. These people have been worked upon for years. They have their own Nazi organizations, their own Gestapo, and they receive instructions from headquarters. In Yugoslavia, German settlers began purchasing land along the Danube a short time ago. To counteract this, the Yugoslav government published a decree forbidding the sale or transfer of land immediately proximate to this most important stream, or within 50 kilometers of its shore.

2. Through other dissatisfied national minorities. Thus the Magyar as well as the German minority in Rumania, has been promised reunion with Hungary when the time comes to "break the Rumanian yoke." In Croatia, the northwestern province of Yugoslavia which has always been rebellious under the highly centralized government concentrating its power in Belgrade, the movement for Croatian independence is encouraged. Its leader is a man named Budak, with a scavenger named Buc. The powerful Croatian peasant party, led by Dr. Matchek, is against this group because they know that an "independent" Croatia, divorced from the rest of Yugoslavia and surrounded by Germany and Italy, would very soon forfeit its Adriatic coastline to Italy, and in any case be about as independent as Slovakia is today.

BUT THERE are idealists and scoundrels ready to join any movement that can call itself patriotic. Despite the fact that the Independence Party (the Frankists) are responsible for having produced the camarilla that, organized, drilled and nourished on Hungarian and Italian soil, committed one of the most wretched crimes of the decade—the assassination of King Alexander and French Foreign Minister Barthou at Marseilles—they are not yet finished. The local leader, Budak, was recently imprisoned by the authorities. Only a few days ago his wife was found dead, head-downward in a well. The Frankists raised the cry of murder, although the verdict was suicide, and laid the crime at the door of the Peasant Party. Budak was released and his wife's funeral became the occasion for a great demonstration in the Croatian capital of Zagreb, where the Frankists appeared for the first time in a distinguishing dress—a sort of pill-box cap.

In the next few days, leaflets were distributed in Ljubljana, the capital of Slovenia, another Yugoslav province that wishes for home rule. These leaflets, supposed to have been distributed by students, demanded Trieste, Fiume and the littoral—parts of Italy—for Yugoslavia. Immediately there were counter-demonstrations in Italy. No responsible element in Croatia or Slovenia could possibly have been guilty of such nonsense. Yugoslavia wants nothing less than an incident with Italy at this time, and even the Frankists, supported by Italy, could not sincerely wish an incident.

SUCH INCIDENTS are not uncommon. Within the last three weeks the former prime minister of Servia has been arrested, together with the chief of police. The arrests were minimized in the press and attributed to purely internal reasons, but it is an open secret in foreign diplomatic circles that both men were pro-German, with Fuehrer copplexes, nor are those facts alone sufficient to cause the arrest of two such prominent figures.

The point is that constant interference in internal political affairs is a cardinal policy of the undermining process.

3 and 4. Commercial agents and commercial offices exercise a constant pressure both upon individuals and upon the press. Germany is and always has been the most important seller and buyer in all the southeastern countries. The acquisition of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, along with industries and markets of those countries, has increased her position. In Budapest, Belgrade, Zagreb and Bucharest shops are full of German wares of all kinds. The great German companies, such as A. E. G. (electrical products) and the sellers of machinery, cutlery, cosmetics and similar products, luggage, cameras and novelty articles, are heavy advertisers in the newspapers, and their pressure greatly reduces the impartiality of the press. The newspapers almost invariably give front page prominence to the official German communiques regarding the war and bury the Allies' news in condensed form in the back pages.

EVERY COMMERCIAL office in this part of the world is a propaganda display. In Zagreb, for instance, the German travel bureau was displaying a few days ago photographs of the finding of the Polish documents, facsimiles of some of the correspondence, together with many photographs from the Norwegian front. A long queue of Zagreb citizens were staring at the display. The English Cunard Line office, farther down the street, contented itself with a long account and a boring picture of the British fleet, which had probably been in the window since before the start of the war.

The "sensational" Ribbentrop revelations attempting to prove that is it was the British and not the Germans who violated the independence of Norway were not taken seriously by a single government official anywhere with whom I was able to talk, but the Germans believe that the broad public is greatly influenced by this sort of sensationalism. They hammer on it inside and out, while the Allies do nothing to counteract the impression upon the nationals.

5. Contacts between German and local businessmen are used constantly to emphasize the rationalization, efficiency and progress which would ensue from German economic organization of the entire Danubian basin, and the advantages to executives, who, when the change came, would already have become recognized as sympathetic and willing to cooperate.

6. Widespread anticapitalistic propaganda, spread among the masses mostly in the form of pamphlets, accusing Great Britain and France of trying to quench the social revolutions of the Nazis and the Russians. This propaganda makes full use of quotations from British left wingers themselves, depicting the worst aspects of social life in Great Britain and France, and is supported by Russian propaganda as well.

1. Appeals to soldiers and the population at large, depicting the enormous strength of the German army and the complete hopelessness of resistance, with terrifying references to the fate of Poland and Norway and the blissful happiness prevailing in wise and reasonable Denmark. This propaganda is distributed by leaflets and supported by the German press, which has wide distribution all through this part of the world, reaches it earlier than British, French or Swiss newspapers, and is published in a language more widely spoken here than any other foreign tongue. Especially effective are the German illustrated papers, which tell their story in a language that even the illiterate can understand. The Allies have no press whatsoever that can tend to offset this.

8. Anticommunism. The Nazis do not hesitate to talk almost the exact language of the Communists in addressing factory workers and miners, and to present themselves as the bulkwark against communism to the conservative peasants. At the same time in the Slav countries and to peasants and workers alike they undermine the malevolence to their cause of Russia, who in the Slavic peasant mind is still Mother Russia, whether imperial or Soviet.

9. Actual corruption of officials. It is very difficult to trace this, but it exists on a grand scale, according to the evidence of all who know these countries well from long residence in them.

10. Terror. The candid revelation of what happens to individuals and officials who take an outspoken stand against the Nazi plans: "If we succeed and you are known to be our enemy, exile, concentration camp or death will be your lot."

Many who sincerely believe that the Germans will lose the war nevertheless contemplate the possibility of a temporary German occupation and have no desire to be its victims.

The Henleins, the Seyss-Inquarts and the Quislings are the German advance guard who are all over southeastern Europe. The Allied counter-espionage, counter-propaganda and counter-organization does not even touch the peoples whom the Nazis reach. For when the Nazis fail to reach the irresponsible, they go after the irresponsible, and they have learned from experience how valuable both can be to them.

Question

How glad the spell of azure eyes—
Those gems so starry, fair;
Their lift can transport to the skies;
Their twinkles banish care.
How true the eyes of deepest hue,
Which screen a burning fire;
Their glow can ever fan anew
The flame of heart's desire.
What of the eyes of turbid green?
Were they wrought to entice?
Do they mask frosty depths unseen?
Are they but clefts in ice?

Joke Loses Mirth

THERE IS LITTLE laughter in the world at this writing, so those Americans who find amusement in the disaster to the British and French arms in Norway are to be congratulated. But each battle victory that Hitler achieves contributes to a conquest, and each conquest results in an increase of Hitler's power and a corresponding decline of the power and influence of the United States. For Germany, Russia and Italy are a team in this war, and the United States has a place on their schedule. If and when the British and French are conquered the United States will be the last great democratic country, and it is foolish to hope that a Nation so inept at war and so pitifully weak in arms and yet so rich as this one would escape the military attention of this combination.

While the British are being swept out of Norway—and some Americans are finding humor in that situation—the Americans are squabbling at home over the question whether a new rifle for the American soldiers shoots hooks or slices, whether it overheats and whether it is as good as another rifle of the same type or, indeed, as good as the old standard weapon.

IT IS NOT a year since the American Army made of themselves in a practice problem under the conditions of peace in the Adirondacks a much more ludicrous spectacle than the British and French provided for the amusement of some Americans, and not only floundered pathetically in the field but, according to a simple, routine news dispatch, actually managed to lose a whole regiment of mechanized cavalry of the Regular Army in broad day on a well-marked main highway when the engagement was over.

It may be funny to read that the British dumped a battalion of Territorials, corresponding in all respects, including inexperience, to the American National Guard, onto the soil of Norway without the proper organization and without artillery or antiaircraft guns, but it would be more pertinent and perhaps less comic to consider that in the present condition of the American Army and its arms the performance might be no better, or even worse.

True, the stupid British had long warning and have only themselves to blame for their military weakness when the contest came—a fact which compares badly with the contention that they were the warmongers who drove Hitler to action.

BUT THE AMERICANS, too, have had warning, and with all the ingenuity of a tribe who have shown the world the way to mass production, and with all the wealth and resources of a great, rich and flabby Nation have not accumulated enough antiaircraft guns to defend Bridgeport, Conn., and, far from manufacturing weapons in quantity and ammunition to shoot from the weapons, can't even decide what kind of gun to manufacture.

It is difficult to see just why the Germans and Italians—and why not the Spaniards, too, who lost so much in this hemisphere and owe this country a grudge?—should be expected not to molest so weak a Nation at the conclusion of a successful war against the British and French in Europe.

The Americans are not frontiersmen any more, and weapons are not handy to them, aside from the fact that they have none. There is no people on earth less adept at soldiering, more ignorant of the feel of military service, and with the British navy gone, a great array of territorial prizes on this side of the world, including bases, now belonging to the British and French or enjoying independence would be thrown up for grabs.

IT IS ABSURD to think, a year ago, that Hitler would storm Poland without even a pretext, or that he would take Denmark—by phone, as the droll phrase goes now—and follow that with a stealthy invasion of peaceful Norway. But he has now shown his ability to surprise the peaceful, civilized peoples of the earth with sudden, deadly assaults, made possible because the civilized peoples do not make war that way, and therefore cannot believe that anyone else would do it.

Hilarious the thought may be of British youngsters, untrained, inexperienced, ill-armed and unsupported being driven out of Norway by the concentrated might of the greatest military power that the world has ever known, but they and their condition are so like the Americans and their condition that the joke loses some of its mirth on close inspection.

Britain At Bay

By Barnet Nover

Aftermath Of Namsos

THE BITTERNESS of the debate that took place in the House of Commons Tuesday was a reflection of the seriousness of the disaster that had befallen British arms and British prestige in Norway.

Given Norway's close proximity to German-occupied Denmark, the advantage which this gave the German air force and the enormous difficulties in the way of landing troops and supplies at points on the Norwegian coast not already in possession of the Nazis, the Alllied defeat was perhaps inevitable. Nor must it be forgotten that Germany did not achieve success in Norway without cost. But such considerations provide little sugar coating for the bitter pill which the British people are being forced to swallow.

The British now realize as they probably never did before the scope and difficulty of the problem that confronts them. They are up against a foe who is as able as he is ruthless and unscrupulous. It will take everything they have to achieve that victory in which they and their leaders firmly believe is coming. But belief in their utimate triumph may prove a snare and a delusion unless it is accompanied by actions capable of making that belief a reality.

THE DEBATE in Parliament showed that the British people are now aroused and in the long run that may partially offset the losses incurred in Norway. For history shows that the British fight best when they have their backs against the wall. That was true in the Napoleonic era. That was true in the World War. It may be true again.

At the outset of the Norwegian struggle Winston Churchill made a remark which has now returned to plague him. He said that Hitler's invasion of Norway would prove as disastrous a venture as did Napoleon's invasion of Spain. In view of what has since happened this prediction looks downright silly. It may be so. That will depend on whether the British manage to retain a foothold in Norway or are dislodged from Narvik as they were dislodged from Namsos and Andalsnes.

If they have to withdraw from Narvik, all of Norway will be in German hands and the whole of the vast Norwegian coast will serve Hitler as a base of operations against Great Britain. If in the face of the very real difficulties that confront them in Norway's Arctic zone, they hold on there, the German triumph in south Norway will be offset in no small measure by the difficulties the Nazis will encounter in getting Swedish iron ore. For only a portion of Swedish ore shipments can go by way of the Gulf of Bothnia and that channel is closed more than six months in the year.

THE DIFFERENCE between Napoleon's move into Spain 133 years ago and Hitler's lightning invasion of Norway are far greater than the similarities. Yet there are interesting parallels between the two ventures which it is worth keeping in mind.

It is significant, for instance, that Napoleon's task, like Hitler's, was made easier by the existence of a "fifth column" in the invaded country. It took only a relatively short time for Napoleon's troops to take Madrid. In the meantime the British government procrastinated, debating whether it ought to send an army into the Iberian Peninsula at all.

Then, as now, it was public opinion which compelled action. In a famous debate on June 13, 1808, almost three months after Gen. Murat had taken Madrid, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the dramatist, arose and denounced what he called "the low and skulking hesitation of ministers." It was not until August of that year that the first British troops were landed in Spain and that force proved inadequate for the task. The following January the British force, under Sir John Moore, retreated to Corunna and after a successful rear-guard action reembarked. The venture looked like a complete fiasco. Yet as long as another British army, based on Portugal and under the command of Wellington was in the field, Napoleon's victory could not be consolidated.

IT WAS the "Spanish ulcer" which killed him, Napoleon later admitted. That Hitler's Norwegian venture will have a similar effect on Nazi fortunes does not at the moment appear likely. But if what has happened in Norway succeeds in arousing the British to the magnitude of the problem before them, even as the popular uprisings in Spain following the French occupation of Madrid stirred to action their ancestors in the Napoleonic period, the parallel may not be as far-fetched as it seems.

In the meantime the war threatens to spread to other and larger theaters. The Balkans are in a state of jitters. Every nation in that corner of Europe is threatened with invasion. In Hungary, Hitler may find another Denmark, in Rumania he may seek another Norway. And if the Fuehrer moves in that direction the Duce may, despite the pleas and warnings of the Allies, seek compensation in Yugoslavia, Greece, Egypt or elsewhere.

"There are other fronts," said Premier Chamberlain in the defense of his government's Norwegian policy, "which may at any moment blaze into a conflagration." The indications are that he is entirely right.

Builders Study Highway Gains, Road Progress

Development of the nation's highway system is assured by increased State and county interest in long-neglected road improvement programs, the contractors' division of the American Road Builders' Association was told here yesterday.

The contractors' group meeting in advance of today's annual conference of the road builders, was addressed by Charles M. Upham, engineer-director of the association, at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel.

Francis Kelly, secretary of the District of Columbia section of the organization, reported that national, State and county legislation is gradually increasing appropriations to meet demands for future highway planning.

Man Indicted On Card Game Loser's Charge

12 True Bills, Naming 16 Persons, Presented In District Court

John E. Gerhart, 50, was indicted on a charge of grand larceny yesterday because Harold B. Averick, New York, complained that it cost him $170 to learn " a new card game" from three strangers in his room at the Raleigh.

Averick said the game started with bets of a dime, but that it was not long before he had to bet $200. It was about then, he charged, that the decks were switched on him. The next morning he complained to the police. Beside $170 in cash, Averick said he lost $180 in personal checks, on which he stopped payment.

The indictment was one of 12, accusing 16 persons, which were presented in the District court before Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday.

Those indicted were:

Robbery—Hudia McClure, 47, colored.

Unauthorized use of automobile—James Turner, 27, colored.

Grand larceny—Calvin Harris, 37, colored; Jack Fulton, 25, colored; John E. Gerhart, 50.

Housebreaking and larceny—John W. Carroll, 37, colored; Harry C. Smallwood, 45, colored; Robert F. Malloy, 19; Paul J. Richards, 18; Dominick Caparretta, 18.

Criminal conspiracy—Roosevelt Long, 29, colored; Lawrence Robinson, 29, colored.

Stealing mail—Lawrence Robinson, 29, colored.

Dr. T. K. Urdahl, Educator, Dies While Visiting Chicago

Dr. Thomas K. Urdahl, 70, educator and economist who lived at 1505 Forty-fourth street northwest, died yesterday of a heart attack while visiting his daughter in Chicago.

Dr. Urdahl made his home here with his son, Thomas H. Urdal, a consulting engineer, after retiring from a life of teaching in 1930.

Served With Trade Commission

Born in Madison, Wis., he attended the Universities of Wisconsin, Paris and Berlin. In 1897 he received the degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Wisconsin. He was instrumental in the establishment of Colorado College and later introduced economics as a curricular subject at Washington and Lee University while head of the social sciences department, 1908 to 1910.

As a professor of economics at Wisconsin, he obtained leave of absence during the World War to serve on the Federal Trade Commission and the Emergency Fleet Corporation. In 1919 he became head of the Swarthmore College economics department, resigning in 1927 to accompany the faculty of the World's University Cruise.

His last year of teaching was at the University of California in 1929-1930.

The author of a number of economics texts, he served several Government departments in specialized investigations during the last ten years. He was a member of the American Economical Association and of the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences.

Services will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Spring Dale Church near Madison, with burial in the family plot in the churchyard. Besides his son, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. H. G. Steiren, of Chicago.

Ranee Deplores Education Theft Of Girl's Charms

ONE of the leading figures around town, just returned from a lecture tour, is Lady Charles Vyner Brooke, wife of the white Rajah of far-off Sarawak and better known as the Ranee. She is also the mama of Princess Baba, who married an English wrestler and served a brief hitch in Hollywood.

Alice Hughes

Now returned from a tour which took her to California, she has many interesting things to say about our girls. Chiefly, however, she feels sorry for them, which may not worry them much. She thinks they get too much formal education, and, in her words, "so stuffed with education that their bodies cease to be feminine. Educated for what?? Poor little thing. That's all they know. What's the use of cheating a woman out of the best things in life by educating away her sexual charm?"

She then adds a little fuel by saying all this education is hard on our men folks. Deprives them of a fundamental right, she avers, since girls with too much knowledge in their heads are not apt to be respectful to men. She thinks the savages in her dreamy country get more out of life.

Harsh words, Rance. I don't think I can go along with you on this. I think the American girls I know are about tops these days for beauty, good sense and general smartness. So you take the Sarawakians, and we'll do all right with out crowd.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Helen Z. M. Rodgers, a Buffalo attorney, told the American Association of University Women that whenever she thinks of the president of a corporation, sh thinks of him in trousers. What about Mrs. Peg Rudkin, head of a country-wide bread baking concern? She wears slacks. So does Mrs. Beatrice Auerbach, sole owner of a fifteen-million-dollars a year store. I daresay Helen Reid of the New York morning paper field wears slacks. All we're trying to say, Miss Rodgers, is that women head corporations, too.

Melisse, the first to lampoon the goofy, life-struck young girl who has since become a type, still looks like her creative flibbertygibbets of the pre-jitterbug age, with shoe-button eyes and wacky ways of wearing their clothes. She has had many imitators, but she goes right on drawing and selling these young moderns.

Maytime for Prints

A really gala dance gown for this blooming month of May spreads its skirts. It fairly blossoms with roses, giant blue ones with emerald green leaves on a snowy ground—a compliment to spring and summer. Made of crisp celanese paper taffeta and processed to practically stand up by itself, the skirt alone has seven or eight yards of fullness in it. The bouffant lines are as flowery as the print—a tight shirred basque, flattering ruffled decolletage and row on row of skirt ruchings run through with velvet ribbons. The sort of dance gown to which men lose their hearts

Avoid Creaking Joints to Stay Young

Stiffness Reveals Age; Exercise Will Prevent It

By Ida Jean Kain

THE FURTHER we get along the more logical it seems that a woman really is not interesting until she is past 35. Later on we may move it up to 40.

As we see it now, the only drawback is this: As soon as a woman acquires enough poise so that she can put the other person at ease, she begins to feel uneasy herself because the usual progression is poise to stiffness, and from there to creaking joints!

But it is no more natural for us to grow stiff than it is to add avoirdupois! A woman doesn't creak with age. She does it because she is rusting out! The way to keep flexible is to move the joints through their full range of motion every day.

Well-Being Helped

If you will do this every day you not only can keep from growing stiff as you get along, but you can enhance your feeling of well-being through the stimulation to the nerve endings in the joints.

The knee joints usually creak first. Here is an easy exercise that will increase and prolong their flexibility:

Sit on the edge of a table, legs dangling freely, and swing alternate legs back and forth in a free knee action. Then, when you have finished that, swing the legs in unison from side to side.

Free leg swinging takes creaks out of leg joints

Now, stand beside the table with one hand placed on it for support, and swing the outside leg loosely back and forth, from the hip joint. The action should be free and easy—it's not the same thing as kicking.

A good finishing touch to your legwork is the deep-knee bend. Try to keep the heels on the floor and slowly bend, bend, bend the knees! If the knees creak, that's a sign you need more exercise.

A very important area to keep supple is the midsection. See how far sideward you can bend. Hold the arms straight out at the sides, shoulder level, then slowly bend acutely to one side. Hold it! Then bend to the other side. If you keep flexible through the midsection you won't have to worry about being slim there!

Knee Joints Are Usually First Point of Attack

Moderation Important

To put the arm and shoulder joint through its full range of movement, swing arms backward in wide circles.

And this will keep you from getting a stiff neck: Let the head circle slowly around, touching the ears first to one shoulder, then to the other.

Bend your fingers, then stretch them wide apart—as a cat does its paws! Even the toe joints need stretching. Extend them, and pull the joints out with the fingers. And, finally, rotate the foot at the ankle, moving it in the direction of the big toe.

Joint flexibility tells the whole story of whether you are growing old. With a few precautions you can turn the calendar back—or at least retard its swift progress!

Blossoms Feature New Lotions

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

All the better performers have created nothing but fresh, delicreated nothing but fresh, delicate fragrances for spring and sum- a long time the sign of opulence for wealthy women was their use of heavy, intense colognes and fragrances, even in the heat of summer. No wthat both summery cotton clothes and the women themselves have grown more sane, fragrances have become equally airy, cool and refreshing. Men are especially thankful for this and revel in the scent of light gardenia soaps and floral boqquet eau de colognes. A bit suspicious of heady perfumes at any time, both men and women are at ease when surrounded by natural garden fragrances which make a woman sweet and clean smelling, rather than like a femme fatale.

Chabert for instance has devised quaint little carts and wicker hampers brimming with posies and sweet smelling nonsense. He has designed an amusing miniature carrousel wheel topped with three plump cakes of flower soap, gardenia, geranium and pine blossom. Another Charbert idea is a wire basket holding a flower pot sprouting posies and rose geranium soap.

At the same store featuring these floral fancies is a beauty gift kit, also smelling of gardens. Made by the coutourier, Germaine Monteil, this kit usually sells for twice the price of its present springtime offer. It contains a collection of night and cleansing creams, a penetrating beauty balm, powder, lipstick in a soft azelia or more vivid geranium flower tint, and an eau de cologne that is an essence of old-fashioned garden flowers.

Fruits, not flowers, are strewn during May by Leigh, long established cosmetic house, which has just created a spicy and different fragrance, called Lymint, which is a cologne of minty out-of-doors sweetness. Sprayed in closets, as a skin freshener, on underthings or after the bath, it is a crisp refreshment to tired spirits and body.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Her Liberal Philosophy Strained to Breaking Point By Husband's Infidelities, Wife Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should like to know whether separation, divorce or continuation of my marriage is the best course to take. I am 21 years old and have been married nearly four years. We have a daughter, two years old. My own mother died when I was born and I was reared by an elderly aunt, so I have no one with whom to discuss my problem, which is occasioned by my husband's infidelity.

In spite of being brought up in an atmosphere of old fashioned standards, I am quite modern in my ideas. Therefore, I have never minded that my husband flirts with other women. But my real trouble began last October, when he developed a social disease. While it was immediately discovered and promptly cured, the discovery broke me up, as I don't believe that married persons should so completely repudiate their vows.

When I attempt to discuss the situation with my husband, he takes the attitude that it shouldn't affect my love or make any difference in our marriage. Also, he thinks such things are not to be discussed, and that they are to be expected in the best of families. Finally, I conquered my distress and about the first of the year, our marriage got back to normal.

Then about a week later I learned entirely by accident that he was going out again with women; that he had never stopped, in fact. I am at a loss to know what to do, as he swears he loves me and is happily married, and I know I am in love with him. I am a person who has always been highly nervous. Even the emotional experience of an exciting play or movie will upset me for hours; sometimes for a day. Naturally, I have worried so much abotu this problem that I am by no means myself. I have reached the point where I cannot control my distress any longer. Please advise me what to do.

WORRIED

Doctor's and Lawyer's Advice Needed Here

DEAR WORRIED: Your problem demands the application of common sense, plus special medcial and legal advice. While I appreciate the confusion of mind which prompts you to ask me, "whether separation, divorce or continuation of marriage is the best course to take"—nevertheless, I feel the moral obligation rests with you to find the answer to that question.

Your husband's reckless and amoral conduct constitutes a health risk to BOTH of you which should be assessed through a doctor's eyes. Since he has profited nothing from his experience of last October, it behooves you to guard against a possibility calamitous visitation upon yourself of the results of his dissipation. The implications of the situation are too delicate to be analytically discussed in the public print, and for that reason, I advise you to talk either with your family physician, or with the doctor who treated your husband for the infection aforementioned.

Any physician would have ethical warrant to rebuke your husband bluntly for the course he pursues; and, also, could tell you plainly the risk you run in passively accepting the present state of affairs. Having taken a doctor into your confidence; and he, in turn, having talked with your husband it should soon become apparent whether this approach is sufficient to compel from him decent behavior.

If it isn't, take your problem to a lawyer, or to the Legal Aid Bureau at 1409 L street northwest. Supposing you were to leave your husband as a self-protective move, you would need legal counsel and representation in advance, so as to retain your status as plaintiff in a suit for divorce or separate maintenance. Just to "walk out on him" would be to place yourself in the position of abandoning the marriage, and he might divorce you (after two years), on grounds of desertion. M. H.

Should Persons Marry When Politically Opposed?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Do you think a strong difference of opinion on the subject of international aggression would cause trouble between two persons who are in love, planning to be married, congenial in every other way and sincerely desirous of leading a happy married life?

The war in Europe is the only subject I avoid discussing with my fiance, as he justifies his government in every move it makes—a state of mind which I cannot share. He has been in this country for ten years and hopes to become an American citizen. Please advise me. Sincerely yours, ALIX.

Mutual Sympathy Essential To Happy Marriage

DEAR ALIX: The ability sympathetically to comprehend the other's viewpoint, without necessarily indorsing it, is (in my opinion) a first essential to happiness in marriage. But this aspect of congeniality must be reciprocal. It must be received as well as given. Thus, while you might understand and condone in your fiance an emotional allegiance to a cause which you cannot espouse, it would be necessary for him also to grasp and respect the reasons why you must and should feel as you do before an irrevocable difference of opinion could be amicably entertained.

I do not believe that a zealous difference of opinion on patriotic issues can be successfully buried in a well of silence between persons of average mentality living in intimacy. I think such issues are disarmed of power to injure and estrange only when brought out in the open and reciprocally appraised as deplorable symbols of mankind's distracted failure to find, and frenzied efforts to discover, a technique of living at peace, amidst plenty, M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Breadbox

Inspiration for Fine Dishes

THE INSPIRATION and basis for many fine dishes—from breakfast satisfiers to sweet dinner-enders can come out of a bread box. And bread-made dishes are kind to pocketbooks, because they are not only economical but make the flavor of more expensive foods go farther.

Croutons have the permission of etiquette authorities to bob, as much as they please, in bowlfuls of hot soup. "Crouton" is merely the Frenchman's way of saying "a bit of crust." They are simple to make but add that something needed many times to a bowl of soup. Toast buttered bread cubes in a moderate oven, or fry the cubes in deep fat until browned.

Buttercups, when applied to foods are crisp little containers for creamed foods. Trim the crusts from slices of fresh bread, brush lightly with melted butter, press each slice into a muffin cup and toast in a moderate oven, 375 degrees until lightly browned. The toasting requires only 10 to 15 minutes.

A contrast of crispness and smoothness in foods is to be had in serving bread rings with smooth creamed ham or eggs. Make the rings from bread slices that have been cut with a scalloped or plain round cookie cutter, brushed with melted butter, and toasted. A doughnut cutter forms an attractive toast round for the top of each individual serving.

Wartime Paris Gowns Simple

Paris.—Dresses designed for dinner parties "at home" in wartime Paris, are characterized by long skirts, high necks and Spartan simplicity.

Shirtwaist styles lead for plainness. They have turnover collars, button-down fronts to waist, and shirt-cuffed sleeves. The less Spartan among them have short sleeves and flared skirts. Favorite materials are small checks in faille or taffeta. One of the swankest has a pink satin shirtwaist topping a shirred skirt of pink chiffon.

Printed dinner gowns in crepes let their floral patterns do all the decorative work, and keep their lines simple and straight. A high-necked model in black is printed with big pink roses, has short sleeves, and by way of scarf a black crepe triangle with fringed edge.

Daughters of Senate Ired at Secret Tattler

Indignant Reaction Follows Publishing Of 'Tales Out of School;' Members of Group Unite in Denying Authorship

By Hope Ridings Miller

WASHINGTON, CITY OF TEAPOT TEMPESTS, has another one brewing fast and furiously. It seems that the Daughters of the Senate are violently indignant that one of their number is supposed to have written a series of articles, "Tales Out of School, Startling Disclosures of Washington Society by a Senator's Daughter," appearing currently in Liberty Magazine.

Hope Ridings Miller

Last week's issue—which incidentally, was a sell-out a few hours after it went on the stands—was painfully and impatiently perused by several Senate daughters at their luncheon meeting a few days ago. The second installment will be examined with equal care at the organization's luncheon meeting today.

Meanwhile, practically every member of the Senate organization has gone on record that she has nothing whatsoever to do with telling those tales. Within the past few days a statement to that effect has made the rounds. All who haven't yet signed it will be given an opportunity to do so today. Finally, when names of all members have gone down in black and white the protest will be mailed to the editor of Liberty Magazine.

Senate daughters don't beat about the bush when you ask them about the article. Singly and en masse, they wash their hands of it.

"Any suspicions as to who wrote it? I asked Miss Chiyo Thomas, president of the Senate Daughters yesterday.

"None at all," she said. "Our only suspicion is—that it wasn't done by any Senate daughter."

She pointed out that the whole thing is a reflection on all of them, and that, in her belief, not a single one in the group would dare write so disparagingly either of her father or his constituents who are on Capital pay rolls.

MISS THOMAS added further that the Daughters of the Senate don't call themselves DOTS, as the Liberty series indicates.

A round-up of opinions seems to indicate the tales may well be charged to a "ghost," writing out of turn.

"Some former Senate daughter may have turned over some of the information," said Mrs. Ralph K. Chase, who is a Daughter of the Senate by virtue of being a sister of Senator Rush Holt. She added that she was quite sure no current daughter did the deed.

AMONG THOSE who have already gone on record to that effect are—in addition to Miss Thomas and Mrs. Chase—Miss Cuyler Schwartz, daughter of Senator H. H. Schwartz of Wyoming, and vice president of the Senate Daughters organization; Miss Marsha Hatch, daughter of Senator Carl A. Hatch of New Mexico; Miss Elaine Gurney, daughter of Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota; Miss Peliz Bailey, daughter of Senator Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina; Mrs. Isabelle Smith Lawton, daughter of Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina; and Miss Ruth Overton, daughter of Senator John H. Overton of Louisiana.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Assistant Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Charles McLaughlin have with them for a visit the latter's brother and sister-in law, Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Talbot, of Cheyenne, Wyo. They will be here until the end of the week.

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, has issued invitations for a luncheon on May 14 in her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Commander John J. Fitzgerald has returned to duty in the Navy Department from the U. S. S. Tuscaloosa, and with his family has taken an apartment at the Roosevelt.

Dr. and Mrs. P. S. Constantinople will entertain at a cocktail party from 5 until 7 o'clock on Saturday afternoon at their home on Glenbrook road.

Mrs. Albert Dornblatt entertained at tea yesterday at Mrs. Kay's Toll House Tavern in Silver Spring, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Viner have returned to their home on Massachusetts avenue after an extended stay in Miami Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Robert H. C. Kelton, who spent the winter in Honolulu and California, has returned to Washington and opened her apartment on California street.

Miss Marion Eleanor Smith, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Martin F. Smith, was hostess at a dinner party last Saturday evening at her parents' home. Guests included the Misses Joanne Swift, Marjorie Simpson, Betty Clark, Sylvia Bunting, Helen Dedicott and Margaret Louise Smith. Following dinner the group attended Wardman Park Theater for the presentation of "Peter Pan," the young hostess taking the part of Liza in the cast.

Mrs. Buchanan Fetes Daughter

Mrs. Richard Buchanan will give a late party on Saturday night at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of her talented daughter, Aleen Stuart, a member of the cast of "Louisiana Purchase."

At the opening of the new musical comedy on Monday, Mrs. Buchanan took over three boxes for her party. Among the guests was Mrs. Gerald Linke, her sister, a former Washington debutante who has made a great success as a model in New York.

It was through her pretty aunt that 18-year-old Miss Stuart got her ballet part in "Louisiana Purchase." She previously appeared in "Streets of Paris." Miss Stuart, whose late father was our Naval Attache to Spain, has been making her home in New York with her aunt.

Whe nthe new show opened in New Haven last week, Miss Stuart stayed at the home of Col. and Mrs. John Q. Tilson, well known here. Col. Tilson was Republican leader of the House in the Hoover Administration.

Her work, reproducing the style and manner of that of her father, appears in 30 daily newspapers in the United States. Mr. Metzger is a graduate of the Shenandoah Military Academy and is now in business in Chicago. The wedding will take place in the St. James Episcopal Church, Leesburg, in June with

About the Town
DUDLEY HARMON

LIKE EVERYBODY else who comes to Washington, charming Ellin Mackay Berlin has one person in mind she'd like to meet above all others. In her case it's the President, who seems to be to the Capital what Hedy Lamarr is to visitors in Hollywood. But as the Berlins—when they lived on the West Coast—were so extensively deluged with requests from friends to round up movie celebrities, they've vowed never to ask anyone to arrange an introduction for them.

Mrs. Berlin is a Democrat and worked as a volunteer in the '36 campaign. She is one of Mrs. Roosevelt's devoted admirers after having met her in California last year.

ANOTHER OF Mrs. Berlin's Washington ambitions—she comes here very seldom—is to see the Supreme Court in action. She was frustrated in this hope yesterday, however, as the court was not in session.

Lunching with friends, the wife of the famous songwriter looked cool and chic yesterday in a simple gray tailleur with a white crepe de chine blouse trimmed at the neckline with tiny tucks. Her little, low-heeled black pumps had black bows, and she wore a white hat.

"Louisiana Purchase" is the first Berlin show ever to open in Washington, and the Berlins will follow it to Philadelphia before its New York opening May 28.

THE DAUGHTER of the late Clarence Mackay has made a name for herself as a short story author, but doesn't like to talk about this phase of her activities. She would much prefer to tell you of her three children—the oldest is now 13.

After several years in Hollywood, the Berlins have taken a house in New York and Mrs. Berlin says she's glad to be back. They are too busy with the theater this week to go in for much social life during their visit.

MRS. BERLIN

AT HAZEL ERGAR'S and Mary Jones' cocktail party at the F Street Club, three of the smartest women there wore dead black dresses and chalk white hats. They were Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Hiram Bingham and Mrs. William MacCracken.

JOSEPH DAVIES is building a 7-hole golf course on the grounds of Eleanor Ryan's property on Foxhall road. He and Mrs. Davies have the place for three years. The Walter Schoellkops, whose home on Macomb street the Davies occupied this winter, are back again after a stay in Palm Beach.

PARTY NOTES: The Donald Jones' dinner Friday—the Irwin Laughlins' on Saturday . . . Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's tea on Sunday and Col. and Mrs. John Magruder's cocktail party on Thursday. Guest of honor chez Magruder will be Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles. The former recently returned from London, where he was Naval Attache, to take over the duties of chief of Army Intelligence.

PETER CARLISLE, the young British monologuist who will make his debut here May 12, recently returned from a world tour. In India he appeared before the Maharajah of Naipur, who wanted to give Mr. Carlisle as fee a beautiful slave girl. He was finally persuaded to compromise with a check instead.

Mrs. L. M. Corcoran Visits Her Mother

Mrs. Lawrence M. Corcoran, of Ho-Ho-Kus, N. J., has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Margaret Eacho in Arlington, Va., for the past week.

Junior League Invites 24 For Course

Provisional Members Must Pass Written Examination

The Junior League of Washington has invited 24 Washingtonians to take its provisional course next fall. They will become active members of the league when they have completed this course and have taken a written examination.

This year, for the first time, the provisionals, as this group is known, will have an opportunity to take part in a league project while provisionals. They will serve on a number of committees at the Washington Horse Show at Meadowbrook on May 17, 18 and 19.

Miss Dorothea Sowers, chairman of the invitation committee, announced today that those who have accepted the Junior League's invitation to become provisional members are Mrs. William Potter Arnold, Miss Ann Barr, Miss Sally Phelps Bradley, Miss Charlotte Burchell, Mrs. John B. Cleland, jr., Miss Helen Howard Diggs, Mrs. Herbert Fales, Miss Nancy Glover, Miss Patricia Henry, Miss Marilynn Himes, Mrs. John Laskey, Miss Martha McKenna, Miss Rosemary Merrill, Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Anne Sperry, Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant, Miss Sylvia Szechenyi, Miss Ann Campbell Toll, Mrs. William Van Benschoten, Miss Catherine Warner, Miss Nancy Weller, Miss Mary N. Shepherd Whiteley, Miss Martha Wilson and Miss Edith Wright.

Count Potocki Gives Dinner

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, entertained at a dinner party last night at the embassy on Sixteenth street, when the ranking guest was the dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander.

Among the guests were the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora Martins Associate Justice Frank Murphy, Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, the Attache of the French Embassy, Count Andre de Limur; Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Noyes, of New York City; Prince Serge Obolenski, of New York, Prof. Jan de Rosen, Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, Mrs. Marian Warburg, the Attache of the Polish Embassy, Count Jerzy Lasocki, and Prince and Princess Hohenlohe.

Anne Farquhar, Sidney Hamer Are Betrothed

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hallowell Farquhar, of Alexandria, Va., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Anne Langston, to Sidney Hamer, son of Karl Frederick Hamer and the late Mrs. Hamer, of Avonside, Buxton, England.

Since Miss Farquhar's graduation from the University of Michigan School of Music, she has devoted her time to teaching her chosen instruments, piano and violoncello, both here and in a Middle-western college. She is a member of Mu Phi musical sorority.

The wedding will take place in June.

Catherine Jones To Become Bride

Mrs. Charles Samuel Jones, of Culpeper, Va., and Washington, announces the engagement of her daughter, Catherine Crump Jones, to Archie Raysor Sabin, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sevier Sabin, of Jonesboro, Tenn.

Miss Jones graduated from Sullins College, Bristol, Va., later attending George Washington University where she received her degree in Library Science. She is a member of Chi Omega.

Mr. Sabin is a graduate of Columbia University and is now associated with the United States Department of Agriculture.

The wedding will be in the early summer.

2 White House Garden Parties Proceed Without a Hitch for Some 4,100 Guests

Mrs. Roosevelt Greets a Thousand Of District Society

By Carolyn Bell

The smooth running White House staff was geared to a greater degree of efficiency than usual yesterday afternoon when two garden parties went off without a hitch. Everything had been figured down to the very last minute. The genial policeman managed to herd 2,700 people out of the incredibly green lawns to allow some 1,400 others in—all within half an hour.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who hasn't done a good day's work until she has shaken several hundred hands, greeted well over a thousand members of residential society at the 4 o'clock garden tea party yesterday afternoon. At their best now, the White House lawns are dotted with rows of bright red tulips and colorful pansy beds. Not far from where the red-coated Marine Band played, the huge fountain splashed—surrounded by flowers. Red candy-striped marquees added a gay note to the affair.

Mrs. Hoge's Outfit Is Most Striking

Wearing an exquisite pleated chiffon gown with a white background printed in royal blue, Mrs. Roosevelt received her long line of guests. A wide-brimmed hat of blue starched linen topped her ensemble, which trailed the grass. Guests wandered about—greeting friends and sipping bright red lemonade, eventually finding a chair on the grass, where they listened to the band.

Quite the most striking outfit there was worn by Mrs. Kenneth Hoge, accompanied by Capt. Hoge. Her simple black frock was topped by a crisp pique jacket with a flaring peplum. Completing the outfit was a perfect Dutch Girl cap of white pique which also had a peplum in the back. Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, in a smart polka dot dress, chatted with Mrs. Adam Gordon and her two attractive daughters, the Misses Marjorie and Nancy Gordon. Mr. and Mrs. Abott McGinnis were noted in the throng.

A number of service people attended yesterday's party. Capt. and Mrs. Jack Horner were there, she wearing several martin skins over her gray printed ensemble; Maj. and Mrs. Mark Brunson, Capt. and Mrs. Charles B. McClellan, Maj. and Mrs. John M. Rooks, Capt. Irvin A. Duffey, Capt. and Mrs. John F. McCartney and Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. C. D. Emory.

Smith and DeLong Bowman were seen talking with several people. Mrs. Bruce Wallace was there in a blue lace gown and red straw hat, also there were Mr. and Mrs. David Finley and Mme. Espaillet whose black dress was trimmed in black and white checks. The party broke up when the band played "Home, Sweet Home."

Red Cross Guests Enjoy Their Party

Earlier in the afternoon, 2:30 o'clock to be exact, the First Lady entertained members of the Red Cross, here on a three-day convention. By 2:31 the slopes were covered with ladies here from Maine to California. Youngsters, not usually seen at such gatherings, tumbled gleefully over the place. Many had never been to Washington before, much less the White House, and they drank in the sights as fast as the lemonade.

Mrs. Roosevelt, wearing a turquoise frock printed in shades of blue and deep red, appeared on the White House portico to give a short speech. She wore a matching hat. Mrs. Roosevelt was introduced by Norman Davis, president of the Red Cross. Following the speech she came onto the lawn, followed by an eager group of camera fans and admirers.

Mad Dash to Get Refreshments Noted

After a brief stay in the garden, the First Lady returned indoors to prepare for her next party. As she entered the Executive Mansion it was announced from the microphone that the lawns would have to be cleared by 3:30 o'clock. At that, there was a mad dash for the marquees where lemonade and cookies were served.

Noted here and there were the Vom Rath twins, Cecilia and Maria, garbed in the pale-yellow Red Cross frocks with trailing scarfs, chatting with a group of White House aides . . . Miss Nancy Leiter, an ardent Red Cross member . . . Mrs. Albert Baggs, head of the Gray Ladies . . . Miss Virginia Barker in her trim motor corps outfit . . . Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who discarded her motor corps dress for a cooler black silk jersey, and Miss Millicent French, accompanied by Mrs. R. W. Cavanagh, both in yellow frocks of the staff assistance.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

NEWS COMES that Felicia Fisk has set the date of her wedding to Albert Dewey for June 4 the ceremony to take place at the home of her mother, Mrs. Frederick Frelingheuysen, in New York. Best of all is the news that the attractive couple will make their home in Washington next winter.

It is cheering to hear that the very popular Hamilton Bryans will be in Washington within a week to spend Commander Bryan's leave at their house in Georgetown, and that he has completely recovered from a recent illness.

KING STONE, son of Mrs. Sterling Larrabee, of Warrenton, has joined an American ambulance unit and will soon be on his way to France. With him will go Peter Prince, son of Frederick Prince and of the former Lysette Harding, now Mrs. Vadim Makaroff.

The Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray asked a few friends in the other afternoon to have a cocktail with Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Gest, who are staying in Washington at the Shoreham. Sydney Gest was formerly in the foreign service of the State Department and, after resigning, lived in the Capital for several years. Now he and his second wife live on a small ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., where they have a flower garden, a terrace with a view of snow-capped mountains and a stable of their own horses, which they ride every day.

MRS. NEWBOLD WALMSLEY, JR., came in looking very pretty in sheer navy blue with a matching hat crowned in red flowers. Also present were Senor and Senora Mario Rodriguez, she the former Marjorie Talman, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowlton, and two nice bachelors of the Spanish Embassy, the Mraquis de Zahara, counselor, and Eduardo Danis, who has a rank which I haven't come across before, that of minister-attache.

PIERRE BENECH, popular naval attache of the French Embassy, has been raised from the rank of commander to that of captain. Not many of his friends know of his promotion unless they find it out accidentally. He himself first heard of it in a letter which his wife received from her mother in France about the middle of March. It was sometime later that he received notification from the French government. "Of course," says Capt. Benech, "they have more important things to think of over there."

THE OTHER DAY at a tea party in Virginia I ran into Mr. and Mrs. Britton Boal Wood. The former Meza Durham was looking lovelier even than in the days when she and her cousin, Jane Aley, were Washington debutantes under the auspices of their beloved "Aunt Sally" Hert. Meza and "Britt" Wood were married in Washington at Mrs. Alvin T. Hert's apartment, one of those huge apartments in the building where live Mrs. George T. Marye and Mrs. Frederick Burgher. A pipe organ was imported for the occasion so that Dr. Kurt Hetzel could play the wedding music and all of Washington turned out for the wedding breakfast. After a two-day visit in Warrenton, the Woods returned to their home in Piqua, Ohio.

Mrs. Dillingham Goes To Bailtimore for Visit

Mrs. Walter F. Dillingham has gone to Baltimore after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Byrd Lacy at their home in Leesburg. She will return shortly for another visit with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Linn, recent guests of the Lacys, has gone to her home in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Lacy entertained at a luncheon for their guests on Sunday.

Envoy and Wife Hosts at Dinner

The Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas were hosts last evening at another dinner in the series they are giving this spring.

Ranking guests were the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz and the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace. The former United States envoy to Spain and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin and Miss Elizabeth Clark, a niece of Cameron Forbes, who is visiting at the embassy, were also among the guests.

Senor and Senora de Cardenas are entertaining a procession of friends this month. Arriving today is Rebecca White, of Thomasville, Ga., and on Friday Senora de Cardenas' brother-in-law, Clement Auffmordt, will come here. He is married to Senora de Cardenas's sister. Mr. Auffmordt will be accompanied by Count Emo, of California, an Italian who is married to an American. Mr. Auffmordt made his home in Paris until the war.

P. E. O. Editor and Supreme President Guests at Conclave of D. C. Chapters

Mrs. Wilfrid Jones Addresses Banquet On 'Far Horizons'

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Wilfrid Jones, of Portland, Oreg., president of the supreme chapter of the P. E. O. Sisterhood, and Mrs. Winona Evans Reeves, editor of the P. E. O. Record for the last 17 years, were honor guests yesterday at the opening sessions of the fifth annual convention of the District Chapters in the Washington Hotel. Nearly 200 members of the 17 chapters in the District are attending the two-day conclave.

Mrs. Jones addressed the banquet in the Rose Room of the hotel last night at which Robert Lincoln O'Brien was also a guest speaker, and Mrs. Reeves brought greetings. Mrs. Robert M. Ferguson, the local president, presided at the business meetings, and Miss Jane Mackay Anderson at the banquet.

Mrs. Jones, speaking on "Far Horizons," urged women to maintain their faith and poise despite the clamor of world events. Fear, she said, threatens to shut out the beauty and peace of far horizons.

The P. E. O., through its activity in promoting education with its scholarship fund and the maintenance of Cottey College, Nevada, Mo., is doing its part to level the wall of ignorance, she said. From the beginning, education has been the paramount concern of the society, Mrs. Jones said. She traced the growth of the loan fund by which between 6,000 and 7,000 girls have been helped and mentioned the high standards maintained by the college.

Another guest of honor at the banquet and business sessions was Mrs. Katherine E. Church, of Illinois, mother of Mrs. F. E. Weick, State corresponding secretary. She is a past president of the Illinois State Chapter and a trustee of Cottey College, about which she talked briefly at the afternoon session.

Mrs. E. H. Hutton, second vice president, conducted an "information please" quiz on the four objectives of P. E. O.: "The P. E. O. Record," the educational fund, the Memorial Library at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, and Cottey College. The quiz brought out that the educational loan fund is now $826,000 in addition to the endowment fund of $24,000. During 1939-40, loans amounting to $187,000 were made to girl students in all parts of the United States. Already $141,000 of this has been repaid.

200 Members of 17 Units Here Attending 2-Day Convention

Eight girls in the District have been helped with P. E. O. loans. They are Mary Richards, now a student at American, and Margaret LeMasters, graduated from American in 1936, both sponsored by Chapter A; Jean S. Albert, formerly of the District, now a student at Iowa Teachers College, sponsored by Chapter B; Edith Brown, now a practicing physician at Point Pleasant, N. J., who was sponsored by Chapter E, at George Washington University; Rosemary Lovejoy, who was sponsored by Chapter F, at George Washington in 1933; Elizabeth Walker, sponsored by Chapter I, at Cottey College in 1939; Margaret Williamson, a student at George Washington, sponsored by Chapter J.

The banquet program also included vocal solos by Mrs. Vera Neely Ross. Music during the day's sessions included vocal solos by Mrs. Helen Turley, contralto; Adalene Eaton, Dorothy Mitchell; violin solos by Mrs. Carolina Randell, and piano solos by Alice Applegate and Marjorie Wine. Nelle Barrett was pianist for the general singing.

The two new chapters of the District, Chapter P of which Miss Gladys E. Gunderson is president, and Chapter Q, of which Mrs. Harold E. Mesch is president, received their charters from the supreme president at the morning session and were presented to the District by Mrs. F. F. Elliott, State organizer.

The sessions continue today.

Staff Renamed By Columbian Women Group

Business Session, Tea Held at Home Of Mrs. Marvin

Officers of the Columbian Women, headed by Miss Margaret Pepper, were reelected yesterday at a business meeting at the home of Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, past president, preceding a tea at which she was hostess.

Dr. Marvin, president of George Washington University, of which the Columbian Women are an auxiliary, talked briefly.

He told of the proposed new auditorium, whose three-fold purpose will be a place of assembly for the student body, a center for music and a little theater. He also complimented the Columbian Women on their gift of the reading room in the new library.

Other officers are Mrs. Russell McNitt, first vice president; Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, second vice president; Miss Helen Gantley, recording secretary; Mrs. DeWitt Bennett, corresponding secretary; Miss Elizabeth Middlemas, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. Thomas Brown, treasurer; Miss Katherine Johnson, assistant treasurer; Miss Sarah Lerch, historian.

Mrs. Otis Lamson, of Seattle, who is visiting at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Marvin, was an honor guest at the tea.

It was decided to change the meetings of the Columbian Women next season from afternoon sessions followed by tea to a variety of programs throughout the year.

Women Should Get All Facts On Labor Unions, Club Is Told

Women should insist on facts when they are taking sides on labor questions, Mrs. Theodore H. Eckerson, president of the Hollywood League of Women Shoppers, declared yesterday in an informal talk before members of the Washington league. She spoke at a tea given in her honor by the District president, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel.

Mrs. Eckerson told league members that women's organizations were being influenced in a surprising way by antilabor sentiment. She described the activities of the League of Women Shoppers in Hollywood, including their investigations and efforts in cooperation with other organizations which finally resulted in the impeachment of the "mayor-dictator." The league, she said, raises money for three billboards on which it presents its side of a case when what it considers unreliable information has been given by the other side.

Mrs. Eckerson is here on her way to New York City, where she will attend the national convention of the League of Women Shoppers Friday and Saturday.

Among those who attended the tea in her honor were Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mis Ellen Downes, Mrs. Robert Sher, Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, Miss Elia O'Day, Miss Hildegard Kneeland, Mrs. Mary V. Daugherty, Mrs. Robert Wyman Horton, Mrs. Michael W. Straus, Mrs. Shoshana Garber Krivonos, Miss Frances Rice, Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Mrs. Nina P. Collier, Mrs. Harold Glasser, Mrs. Edward Hollander, Mrs. Thomas Blaisdell, Mrs. Mary Schoene, Mrs. Anna Witt, Mrs. Nathan Halpern, Mrs. Clark Foreman and Mrs. Ezekiel's mother, Mrs. C. A. Finsterwald, of Detroit.

Mrs. Edgar Kay to Attend Unveiling Of Late Husband's Portrait

MRS. EDGAR BOYD KAY, president of the Political Study Club, which will have its annual May breakfast Saturday at the Mayflower, will go to Tuscaloosa, Ala., the last of the month for the unveiling of a portrait of her late husband. Mr. Kay was a member of the faculty of the university and the unveiling will take place May 27, in connection with the annual Alumni Day celebration there at which Mrs. Kay will speak.

The portrait, which she considers an excellent likeness of her husband, is the work of Robert Ade, a Washington artist.

Mrs. Kay will preside at the breakfast Saturday and will not go South until after the regular May meeting of the club, scheduled for May 18. Senator Allen J. Ellender and Senator Claude Pepper will be the breakfast speakers.

TEA HOSTESSES—Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, retiring chairman of the American Merchant Marine Library Association, and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor will entertain from 3 to 6 this afternoon at tea for members of the association at 1301 Seventeenth street. Those who will alternate in pouring include Mrs. Harry P. Huse, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Seth Richardson, Mrs. William Crounse, Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. McCeney Werlich and Miss Lydia Loring.

Mrs. Emory Scott Land is the incoming chairman of the group.

PROGRESSIVE DINNER—The Phi Mu alumnae will have a progressive dinner tonight for members and their husbands and escorts. Mrs. Donald Christy will be hostess for the first course and Mrs. John Reed for the second. Mrs. William Bradford is general chairman.

SILVER GIFT—The Dorothy Hancock Chapter, D. A. R., winding up its silver anniversary year, is presenting to Constitution Hall 400 silver dollars to be used for the purchase of 20 map trays for the archives room. Mrs. John Townsend is the chapter regent.

Miss Janet Richards was guest speaker at the chapter's closing luncheon yesterday at Olney Inn.

OXON CLUB ELECTS—The Oxon Hill Woman's Community Club has re-elected Mrs. Glenn Maines as president for the coming year. The club also presented "pioneer" medals to two of its members at its annual meeting: Mrs. Wentworth Jones, for length of service, and Mrs. Charles E. Janes, for leadership.

Other officers re-elected were Mrs. George Shupp, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles E. Janes, treasurer; Mrs. R. H. J. Campbell, director. The new officers chosen were Mrs. Norman Stamp, secretary, and Mrs. C. E. Robertson, corresponding secretary.

W. C. T. U. to Meet

The Capitol Hill W. C. T. U. will meet tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. C. W. Hollida, 301 Maryland avenue northeast.

Voters Hear Florence Kerr

The youth, old age and child problems are all dimensions of the unemployment problem, Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner of the Works Projects Administration, told members of the League of Women Voters yesterday.

Mrs. Kerr, addressing a joint luncheon meeting of the child welfare and economic welfare departments, at the Y. W. C. A., declared that the best solution of the child welfare problem was to give the father a job. On this basis she termed the WPA the biggest child welfare organization in the world because it provides jobs for mothers if the father is not the head of the family.

She also explained the food stamp plan and its operation.

About 50 league members and guests attended the luncheon and the speaker was introduced by Mrs. Paul Appleby. Mrs. Chester Williams was cochairman of the meeting.

Dr. Williams Addresses 500

Dr. Mona Williams, of New York, addressed 500 members and guests of the Washington Chapter of the National Home for Jewish Children yesterday at their annual donor luncheon given at the Mayflower Hotel.

Speaking on the subject "Self-Expression Though Service," Dr. Williams asserted that "the devotion we give to others—a neighbor or orphan—away from and out of ourselves, makes of ourselves another personality."

In dealing with women, she said that she found those who lived only to themselves, did not understand themselves. Even those who have children to rear, need such outside interests as work in a charitable organization for self-expression, she said.

Commending support of the National Home, she asserted, "There is nothing higher than bringing a change in a child who, but for your care, would be destitute and in the streets."

Mrs. Ellis Kossow, the president, presided at the luncheon and presented to Mrs. Marguetire Maier, of the Jewish Social Service, as a gift from the organization, a check for $300 to be used to send boys to the Jewish Community Center Camp. Mrs. Max Zarion served as pianist during the fashion show which featured the program. Mrs. Jack Seigel was chairman of the luncheon.

Miss Hoffman Takes Office As Club Leader

Mrs. Louise Hall Hollis, new district governor of the Pilot Club International, last night installed officers of the Washington club at a dinner at Ivy Terrace on Connecticut avenue. Miss Helen Hoffman is the new president, succeeding Miss Louise Boyton, who had served since the formation of the club 14 months ago.

Other officers are Mrs. Mary Moore, first vice president; Miss Effie Mae Hammer, second vice president; Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, third vice president; Mrs. Ina Stacy, Miss Analu Jeffries, Miss Patricia Collins, Miss Bonnie Taylor, Miss Louise Boynton, Mrs. Hollis, directors; Miss Frances Meilleur, corresponding secretary; Miss Emma Biebl, recording secretary; Miss Lois White, treasurer.

Stephens Alumnae Hold Benefit Bridge

Members of the Stephens College Alumnae Club of Washington gave a bridge party last night for the benefit of the Lela Rainey Wood Memorial Fund. It was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Olwine, 2027 Massachusetts avenue.

This fund, named in memory of the wife of President James M. Wood, was established in 1937 by alumnae for the building and maintenance of the Lela Rainey Wood Building, which houses national alumnae offices and also many student activities on the Stephens College campus at Columbia, Mo.

Officers of the Stephens College club are Mrs. Richard E. Olwine, president; Miss Helen Froelich, Forest Glen, Md., vice president; Miss Ruth Winn, Rockville, recording secretary; Miss Bette Snyder, Forest Glen, corresponding secretary, and Miss Ruth Strasser, Washington, treasurer.

68 District Aliens Granted Citizenship

Justice Pine Explains Obligations To Applicants

Justice David A. Pine granted American citizenship to 68 aliens in the District Court yesterday.

After hearing the applications, in which he asked a few questions, Justice Pine, in an informal talk, welcomed the applicants into the fold of citizenship.

He reminded the applicants that now they possess every right that is enjoyed by native-born Americans, except eligibility to hold the offices of President and Vice President.

"Live decent and upright lives and do your best to add to the general welfare of our country," the judge concluded.

Ickes Designates Appomatox Area As National Shrine

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes yesterday designated a 500-acre area at Appomattox, Va., scene of Gen. Robert E. Lee's surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia on April 9, 1863, as a national historical monument.

The area includes the spots where Gen. Lee and Gen. Ulysses S. Grant had headquarters, the sites of the McLean house where Lee surrendered to Grant and of Appomattox Court House, and two structures still standing—the county jail and the brick tavern or "Patterson home," formerly called "Clover Hill."

The National Park Service contemplates reconstruction of the McLean house and rehabilitation of several other buildings, to recreate scenes contemporary with the surrender. Landscaping probably will include restoration of some of the old roads.

Officials said they had $92,000 available for reconstruction of the area, and might find it necessary to ask Congress for additional funds to complete the task.

Podiatrists Elect Dr. A. M. Steinberg

The District Podiatry Society elected Dr. A. M. Steinberg president at a meeting last night in Doctors' Hospital.

Also elected were Dr. G. R. Stillson, vice president; Dr. H. L. Hoffman, secretary-treasurer; Dr. William Reher and Dr. S. W. Hurrell, members of the executive board; Dr. E. C. Thompson, N. A. C. councilman; Dr. O. E. Roggenkamp, national delegate; Dr. A. C. Levin and Dr. Dion Meeks, Middle Atlantic Association delegates.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

The youth was taken to Emergency Hospital where he was pronounced dead at 6:05 p. m. The body was removed to the morgue, where Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will conduct an autopsy this morning.

Sons of Maryland Veterans Of Civil War Convene Here

Warmed by Reminiscence and the Sun, They Seem Little Concerned With Current Hostilities at 54th Encampment

Warmed by patriotic reminiscence and the sun, a little band of descendants of American fighting men yesterday opened the fifty-fourth annual encampment of the Department of Maryland, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, at the Continental Hotel.

The members launched a business session little concerned with the world's current belligerencies.

The members were from the District, Delaware and West Virginia, as well as Maryland. They recommended that Lincoln's Birthday be made a legal holiday in the Free State. Besides Maryland, only 11 States formerly in the Confederacy and three in the Southwest still refuse this tribute to the Emancipator's memory, they pointed out.

The department was greeted by their past national commander in chief, Horace H. Hammer, 65-year-old former postmaster of Reading, Pa., and for 50 years a member of the patriotic society.

In an interview, Hammer told about his father, Thomas Hammer, who was one of the original 531 Pennsylvania troops, first to spring to the colors. They arrived in Washington April 18, 1861, ready for battle. The famous Massachusetts regiment that marched through Baltimore is set down incorrectly in history as the "first defenders," Hammer declared.

Hammer recalled incidentally what he said was the first injury to a Civil War soldier here. He said the colored orderly of a Pennsylvania officer was struck and wounded by a brick, hurled by a Confederate sympathizer as the troops marched between Washington railroad stations.

The ladies auxiliary yesterday met on the second floor of the hotel.

8 Magazines Face Ban in Capital

District Attorney Edward M. Curran said yesterday that eight magazines now being sold here are definitely obscene and will be the subject of prosecutions unless they are withdrawn from newstands.

Curran said complaints were made by individuals. The magazine distributing agencies will be asked to withdraw the magazines, Curran said, before action is begun. He declined to name the magazines.

Citizens Urge Election of 2 D. C. Heads

Southeast Council Approves Motion That Would Lead To Enfranchisement

Popular election of two District Commissioners as a step toward eventual total enfranchisement of the Capital was urged last night at a meeting of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations.

Adelbert Lee, delegate from Randle Highlands Citizens Association, urged the measure, "not because it is all that is to be desired, but as a means of crystallizing the suffrage issue, in the minds of the people of the District and in Congress. The meeting was held at Eleventh Precinct Station.

The motion, providing for election of both Commissioners, other than the Engineer Commissioner, by a special election, and for two-year terms after the expiration of their incumbencies, was approved with an amendment. This specified that the motion was not to be considered as an "end-all, but a step in the right direction."

[Earlier in the day, the District Commissioners, in a letter to Chairman Jennings Randolph, of the House District Committee, expressed disapproval of the House bill introduced by Representative C. A. Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, which would permit the District to elect the two civilian Commissioners.—Editor's note.]

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, took the floor to express approval of the suffrage proposal. He declared the move was desirable because it would "permit the people of the District some part in local government although the bill was not all that was to be desired."

The federation head declared the sentiment of the District was swinging toward suffrage. At one time delegates advocating the vote at federation meetings were "laughed down," he asserted, while at present between 90 and 95 per cent of the membership of the body desires enfranchisement here.

Harry Wender, first vice president of the federation, also a guest at the council meeting, followed Stull on the rostrum to urge increased attendance of Southeast citizens units at federation meetings.

Cleveland Park

One hundred members of the Cleveland Park Businessmen's Association and their wives last night joined in a "ladies' night" party at Bradley Hills Country Club. The ladies were presented with corsages and gifts.

The program included a dinner, entertainment and dancing. The entertainment, highlighted by Les Kohler's stories and songs, was presented by residents of the neighborhood. Speakers were Louis Bowdler, president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, and Walter C. Cersley, chairman of the party committee.

Auto Victim's Body Identified By Her Husband

Ralph Cary, of 1236 C street northeast, yesterday identified the body of a woman traffic victim at the District Morgue as his wife, Mrs. Martha Cary, 40, a secretary for the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mrs. Cary died at Casualty Hospital at 10 a. m. Monday from injuries suffered earlier that day on Central avenue, a mile from the District line in Maryland. She was struck by an automobile that police said was operated by William Tyler, colored, 25, of 514 M street northwest. Tyler was charged with reckless driving by Prince Georges County police and released under $500 bond.

Cary said his wife was returning from North Beach when the accident occurred. He said she had been driven there by a friend and was awaiting a bus.

A native of Fredericksburg, Va., Mrs. Cary came to Washington in 1918. For the past 13 years she worked for the Washington office of the Louisville newspaper. Surviving are four sisters, two in Fredericksburg and two in New York City.

Five-year-old Terance Ryan, of 632 Morton place northeast, struck by an auto while playing at Orleans place and Sixth street northeast, suffered lacerations and was taken to Sibley Hospital.

Red Cross Speaker Falls Dead in Street

Frank L. Slezak, 55 of Coffeyville, Kans., fell dead on the sidewalk before the Annapolis Hotel last night a few hours after he had addressed a session of the American Red Cross convention.

He collapsed at 6:25 p. m., and was pronounced dead by the house physician at the hotel. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said death was due to natural causes.

Mr. Slezak was an official of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Takoma Flower Show To Be Opened Today

One of the largest exhibits of spring blooms in the history of the Takoma Horticultural Club is expected today at the opening of the twenty-fifth annual tulip show at 8 p. m. in the Takoma branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar streets northwest.

There will be 18 classes of tulips, seven classes of hardy spring flowers, two in the flowering shrub arrangement, five in the arrangement group and two classes for miniatures.

Quotas Fixed In Symphony's Fund Campaign

Goals Announced For 10 Committees; 1st Report Tomorrow

Quotas which each of 10 campaign committees must achieve if the National Symphony Orchestra financial drive is to reach a $107,600 goal by May 16 were announced yesterday by A. F. E. Horn, general chairman.

First results in the drive will be reported by committee chairmen at a 12:30 p. m. luncheon tomorrow in the Carlton Hotel.

Goals Listed

Largest assignment went to the special gifts committee. It has been asked to raise $61,500 from the symphony's larger contributors.

The business and professional group is expected to garner $14,000 from those engaged in Washington's commercial enterprises.

From the Army Committee, $1,500 is expected; from the Navy and Marine Corps, $3,500.

The associations groups, which solicit the musical, service and civic organizations, have a quota of $7,500.

For 20-Week Period

The Orchestra Guild, the year-round organization of the National Symphony, is responsible for the raising of $6,500; and from the outlying sections of Washington, the suburban committee is expected to obtain a total contribution of $2,500.

The total of $107,600 asked for in this year's drive covers the employment of orchestra members for a minimum 20-week period. It is based on a budget prepared by C. C. Cappel, manager of the symphony.

This budget does not include the summer season at the Potomac Water Gate. As announced yesterday, the Sunset Symphonies will be underwritten by an anonymous donor, providing the minimum goal of the present drive is realized by May 16.

Christian Science Held 'Practical'

Judge Samuel W. Greene, of Chicago, lecturing in First Church of Christ, Scientist, last night declared Christian Science to be a "practical and effective elucidation of infinite power that has too long been considered such a mystery as to be beyond the reach of the ordinary thinker and worker.

"There is nothing radical or revolutionary in considering in one's every thought the concept of perfect man," Judge Greene said. "Such a concept is authorized by the familiar words in the first chapter of Genesis, that God created man in His own image and likeness."

Capital News in Brief

Firemen Save a Child

Morty Hyman is only a year and a half old, but he inadvertently brought out the fire department yesterday.

His mother, Mrs. Paul Hyman, was returning with Morty from a shopping trip to their home, 1410 Third street southwest, when it happened. Mrs. Hyman had opened the door and turned to get the bundles, when Morty entered and closed the door behind him. Somehow or other, the key fell inside, too, locking Morty in and Mrs. Hyman out.

The worried mother put in a call for firemen, who climbed to the second-story apartment and found Morty unconcernedly playing in the kitchen.

School Inspection

District and PWA officials will inspect the newly completed addition to the Margaret Murray Washington Vocational School for Colored Girls at 9:30 a. m. today. Keys to the annex will be turned over to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

The $212,000 addition in O street between North Capitol and First streets northwest, includes a cafeteria, classroom, tea room, kitchen and supply room, library, display and sales room, dining room, two food laboratories, child care instruction room, nursery, cosmetology laboratory, domestic laundry, dry cleaning laboratory and science laboratory, as well as classrooms.

Nostalgic Horse

Apparently irked by the dispute oer the merits of Bimelech and Gallahadion, a horse belonging to the Russell Stables in Fort Stevens drive northwest, went A. W. O. L. yesterday and appeared to be headed for Pimlico.

Called to bring back the runaway, Sixth Precinct police mounted their cruiser cars and scouted the ranges of farthermost Northwest section without success.

The runaway returned a half hour after his sudden leave and announced through interpreters that nostalgia had gotten the best of him.

Paper Cups Rout Thugs

A barrage of paper cups threw two young holdup men into confusion at High's ice cream store at 617 Fourth street southwest last night, and protected the cash register for Eleanor Scott, 28, the operator.

"They scared me when the light-haired one pointed a gun at me," Miss Scott reported to police. "I got mad and threw paper cups at them, and they ran out."

Painful Playing

Two children painfully learned yesterday that playing didn't always bring fun.

Betty Nichols, 12, of 463 E street southwest, fell out of a tree near her home and cut her arm on a jagged rock. She required treatment at Providence Hospital.

Also taken to the same hospital was 8-year-old Bernice Henson, colored, of 78 I street southwest, who ran against piping protruding from a parked truck.

Bolles to Speak

Representative Stephen Bolles, Republican member of the House District Committee, will speak on Washington's fire prevention and police needs tonight at the thirty-second anniversary meeting of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association in the Woodridge sub-branch library, 2206 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Paul Ward to Speak

Paul Ward, foreign correspondent who has just returned from the European war area, will speak at a dinner of the National Lawyer's Guild tonight on the topic, "Europe at Close Range." The dinner will be at the Rumanian Inn, 817 Thirteenth street northwest. Ward is now a Washington correspondent for the Baltimore Sun.

White to Speak

Earline White, past national president of the Business and Professional Woman's Clubs, will address the annual mother-daughter banquet of Ninth Street Christian Church tonight at 7 o'clock at Ninth and D streets northeast.

Shades of Al G. Fields

The Men's Brotherhood of Ryland Methodist Church today and tomorrow will stage an "Old Time Minstrel" in the new building on Branch avenue near Pennslyvania avenue southeast. It will begin at 8 p. m., with Henry Hendley directing.

Lecturer Home

Dr. Glen Levin Swiggett, of 2220 Twentieth street northwest, has returned from Indiana University, where he conducted a series of lectures on Latin America.

5 C. U. Clubs Pledge 47 Boys In Tap Day Rites

Five Catholic University organizations yesterday elected 47 new members in Tap Day ceremonies on the campus. The undergraduates, mainly freshman, lined up along the iron fence outside Gibbon's Hall at noon, and the club presidents passed down distributing bids.

The pledges are as follows:

Cave Dwellers Club for residents of Washington—Donald Ludwig, Robert Sullivan, Harry Peden, Ernest Meyers, Andrew Bain, Alfred Bell, Louis Knight, William Beard, Lester Poretsky and William Wright.

Senators Club, also comprised of Washingtonians—Paul Easby-Smith, Edward J. Walsh, Harry Gallogly, Bernard Doyle, John Oehmann, Bernard Auth, Henry Johnson, Edward Veihmeyer, Michael Dolan, Joseph Joers, Norbert Eakle, Francis Daly, Maynard Kidwell, Alfred Stokes, Lewis Catanese and John Gillaine.

Phi Kappa Fraternity—John B. Robinson, New Haven, Conn.; Daniel Antinozzi, of Darby, Conn.; Jerome E. Mettenberger, Steubenville, Ohio; Joseph E. Rankin, of Baltimore; Leo F. Gaffney, Fall River, Mass., and James Kelly, of New Haven, Conn.

Utopian Club—Charles V. Orsechowski, of Mount Carmel, Pa.; Leo E. Houck, of Lancaster, Pa.; Robert B. Kaleher, North Beach, Md.; Joseph B. Styles, Forest Hills, Long Island, N. Y.; Bernard Cody, Easton, Pa.; Julius J. Buckanavage, Shenandoah, Pa.; Ira K. Blackbird, Fair Haven, Vt.

Abbey Club—James M. Graham, of Brookline, Mass.; Carl J. Giannotti, West Haven, Conn.; Robert L. Morrissey, West Hartford, Conn.; Robert E. Heitzel, Warren, Ohio; Dennis W. Madden, Warren, Ohio; Ferdinand T. Serafini, Winsted, Conn.; John F. Lynch, Springfield, Mass., and Frank A. Heffernan, Bristol, Conn.

Youngblood Defeats Galloway In Takoma Mayoralty Fight

Weary election officials yesterday decided that Oliver W. Youngblood, merchant, had been elected mayor of Takoma Park, Md.

The decision came at 5 a. m. when the tired group of judges, clerks and watchers finished tabulating the 2,126 votes cast in the most heated town election in the history of the town.

Youngblood, with 1,123 votes, defeated Dr. C. C. Galloway, dentist, who received 953 votes, while 50 votes were thrown out by the judge as defective.

Four candidates for the town council on the Youngblood ticket were elected and two from the Galloway ticket. Millward C. Taft and Howard H. Harrigan, both running on the Youngblood ticket, were elected councilmen from the fourth precinct. Taft received 1,038 votes to defeat Harley Buckingham, 1,000 votes, and Harrigan's 1,033 votes defeated John K. Williams, son of a former mayor of the town, who received 976 votes.

John F. Sidell (Youngblood ticket) received 1,056 votes to defeat George B. Kissinger, with 1,013 votes, a Galloway supporter, while former Judge Herman C. Heffner (Galloway ticket) garnered 1,051 votes in defeating Roy G. Richardson (Youngblood ticket), who had 955 votes, in the sixth precinct.

Joseph Martin (Galloway ticket), with 1,072 votes, defeated the Youngblood candidate, Jesse R. Booth, who had 967 votes, in the ninth precinct. Col. Arthur L. Conger (Youngblood ticket), gained 1,065 votes to defeat Charles N. Thomsen (Galloway ticket), who had 971.

Nine other Montgomery County towns held municipal elections Monday, but in none of them was the contest so bitter as in Takoma Park.

Church Unity Needed, Says Dr. Freeman

Prelate's Address Opens Convention Of Washington Episcopal Diocese

The pressing need for Christian unity today "when the world looks to the church for moral and spiritual leadership" was urged last night by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington.

The prelate delivered his annual address at Epiphany Episcopal Church, his former pulpit, opening the three-day convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington. Formal business sessions begin today at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, worship place of President Roosevelt.

Bishop Freeman, recovered sufficiently from a sprained ankle to attend the service, warned that the church today faces grave perils.

Holds Unity Vital

"In some places," he declared, "its very existence is threatened and in other places it is wholly interdicted, its ministers defamed, persecuted and martyred. Under such conditions the question of corporate unity becomes a vital and urgent one."

Early in his address, the bishop eulogized clerical and lay members of the diocese who died during the past year. They included the Right Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, one-time Bishop of Pennsylvania, and for 13 years warden of the College of Preachers at Washington Cathedral, and Dr. Ernest C. Smith, senior clergyman of the diocese in point of service and rector of St. Thomas' for 33 years.

Also the Rev. William E. Allen, rector of St. Thomas,' Croom, Md.; the Rev. C. W. Whitmore, rector of Trinity Church, St. Mary's City, Md.; the Rev. George Baker Stone-Alcock, nonparochial clergyman, and two diocesan laymen, Byron S. Adams and Carl B. Keferstein.

Bishop Freeman lauded the services of Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, who recently retired as rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church here after long service.

Cites Progress

He said the Washington Diocese is making good progress, spiritually and materially, and pointed out that the Triennial General Convention of the Episcopal Church in the United States will meet in Kansas City in October.

One of the matters to be considered at the general session, he said, will be the securing of a permanent see for the Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church. It has been proposed that part of the Washington Diocese, preferably the District of Columbia, be designated for a central see.

Bishop Freeman called attention to a recent further inquiry "that contemplates the ceding by the Diocese of Washington of a part of its area."

"While it has long been my conviction that this city furnishes the most strategic setting for a central or primatial see, I feel that any dismemberment of the diocese as now constituted would be most unfortunate and unwise," he stated, contending that "the diocese is small in area and the allocation of the whole or part of the District would seriously affect both its influence and future usefulness."

Offers Plan

He said that at the New Orleans convention he presented what he considered the only feasible plan for the creation of a central administrative see. That "contemplated the absorption of the diocese as a whole and under conditions that would be favorable to both the diocese and the General Church."

Today's sessions will begin at 8 a. m. at St. Thomas' with corporate communion for convention members. A fellowship breakfast will follow in the parish hall. Bishop Freeman will preside at the business sessions at 10 a. m.

Hjalmar Procope, Minister from Finland, will address the fellowship dinner tonight at 6:30 o'clock, when George O'Connor will sing, and Clifford E. Berryman, cartoonist, will give a charcoal talk.

D. C. Girl Wins More Scholarships Than She Can Use

Jean Eichelberger, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Eichelberger, 3121 Newton street northeast, yesterday was announced as the winner of two parochial college scholarships, one more than she can use.

JEAN

She received the highest scores in competition for scholarships to Immaculata Junior College and Trinity College. According to her mother, wife of the Washington real estate man, she has decided to enter Trinity next September.

Miss Eichelberger has been at the top of her class for four years at Notre Dame Academy, where she graduates this June. Winner of the Anna Hanson Dorsey scholarship for full four years' tuition at Trinity, her grade in the Immaculata examination was 15 points above her nearest competitor.

War Victims Held Seeking U. S. Sympathy

Dr. Barnes Addresses Church Conference; Group Names Officers

Christians of war-stricken lands are looking hopefully toward American members of "God's family" for a demonstration of sacrifice, sympathy and understanding, Dr. Rosswell P. Barnes declared last night at All Souls' Unitarian Church.

Associate general secretary, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Dr. Barnes addressed the Middle Atlantic Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches, the main sessions of which are being held at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

He was presented by Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, Mount Pleasant pastor and retiring moderator of the Middle Atlantic Conference. Earlier in the day, Dr. Alfred D. Gray, pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, Seventeenth and P streets northwest, was named moderator to succeed him.

Others Elected

Also elected were the Rev. Walter Mueller, of Chatham Congregational Church, Chatham, N. J., assistant moderator; John T. Beach, Upper Montclair, N. J., treasurer, and Stanley Chedister, Maplewood, N. J., scribe.

Legislative, governmental, judicial and other leaders, addressing a dinner-meeting in Pierce Hall preceding the worship services in the Unitarian Church, told how laymen see religion in the American scene.

Insisting there can be no faith without works, David Cushman Coyle, noted economist-author,said:

"It is not our duty to comfort people suffering from unnecessary evils . . . our duty is to do away with those evils."

Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the United States Children's Bureau, said a supreme concept of religion in the present time is the acceptance of suffering and struggle, and that "we must be willing to accept the fact that the very condition of our mortality means struggle."

In discussing religion's meaning for today from the laymen's viewpoint, Henry P. Chandler, director of Administrative Office of the United States Courts, emphasized the need of "motives higher than ourselves." Good works cannot be relied upon unless there is faith as a deep, underlying motive, he commented.

Deplores Preaching of Economics

Representative Bruce Barton (Republican), of New York, deplored the church's departure from the central mission of stressing to men that they are "children of God." Preaching of economics and such subjects from pulpits, he said, was as "if Henry Ford began to add shoe trees to his line."

The speakers were introduced by Miss Jessie La Salle, moderator of the Washington Association of Congregational Churches.

The convention adopted a resolution requesting the denomination's Council of Social Action to present the matter of possible additional financial support of the migrant problems before the Middle Atlantic Conference board of directors.

Another resolution, being presented to the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, asked for enactment of legislation authorizing President Roosevelt to prohibit sale of war materials to Japan, as a step toward ending the Sino-Japanese War.

Doctor Praises China for War On Malaria

Health Parley Hears Dr. Williams, Just Returned From Orient

A vivid account of China's fight, not against the Japanese but the killer malaria, was given yesterday by Dr. L. L. Williams, Federal medical researcher just returned from a rescue mission in the Orient.

Heading an American commission requested by the Chinese government, Dr. Williams set up headquarters along the Yunnan-Burma Highway in a zone so disease-deadly that whoever goes there, according to a Chinese proverb, had best make arrangements first for the remarriage of his widow.

Dr. Williams, who has charge of the United States Public Health Service malaria research division, spoke before the Pan American Conference of National Directors of Health.

Coaches Doctors

He returned to Washington Sunday after spending four months of survey making and coaching young Chinese doctors and health officers on controlling malaria, the only epidemic disease he encountered in China. Other members of the commission were Dr. Bruce Mayne and Dr. Hiram Bush, both of the Public Health Service.

The so-called Burma Road, strategic back door into China, is a veritable malaria trap along the western 150 miles of its length, Dr. Williams said. For centuries this region had been known to be deadly, particularly to strangers, but no one knew the cause until recently, when two native scientists investigated and found an extremely virulent form of malignant certain malaria.

The Williams party set up headquarters at Chefang, about 25 miles from the Burmese border and in the heart of the danger belt. Among school children, supposedly healthy, in the vicinity they found high indexes of infection; so high, in fact, that their remarkable tolerance to malaria amazed the Americans.

Dr. Williams expressed high admiration for the Chinese, citing the manner in which all hands joined in rebuilding the medical school in a new place every time it was bombed.

Epidemiologist Speaks

The Pan American public health officers, whose conference closes today, also heard Dr. James P. Leake, Public Health Service epidemiologist, discuss his investigation of an infantile paralysis epidemic in Colombia recently.

He pointed out that the cases which were observed in Colombia were less fatal and produced less paralysis than those which occur in United States epidemics.

The delegates elected Dr. Williams head of its Pan American malaria committee, with Dr. Henry Henson as the representative of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau. Other members named yesterday were:

Dr. Mark F. Boyd, Rockefeller Foundation; Dr. C. A. Alvarado, Argentina; Dr. Joao de Barros Barreto, Brazil; Dr. Victor Sutter, El Salvador; Dr. Luis Vargas, Mexico, and Dr. Arnaldo Gabaldon, Venezuela.

Police Trap 3d Fugitive From Lorton

Traffic Boner Holds Prisoner After He Eluded Posse, Hounds

The last of three convicts who made a spectacular escape from the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va., three weeks ago, has been apprehended, it was announced last night by Ray Huff, superintendent of penal institutions.

Another prisoner, who escaped while working at the Penal Wharf, Ninth street and Maine avenue southwest, was also captured yesterday.

In Pulaski, Va., Charles E. Leapley, 23, who with two companions had smashed his way through the Lorton reservation fence with a prison truck and then eluded both searching posse and bloodhounds, was arrested on a traffic violation. He was identified as the missing prisoner through fingerprints. Leapley was serving a term for housebreaking.

Leapley's companions, William R. Crosswhite, 24, and Robert C. Chappell 23, both of whom had been sentenced for robbery, were captured about a week ago in Abingdon, Va., where they were picked up by police as suspicious characters and later recognized through lookout photographs.

Meanwhile, John Wiley, 36, colored, was arrested yesterday in the 1300 block of Fort Stevens Drive northwest, near the Sixth Precinct police station. Serving an 18-month term for housebreaking, Wiley fled from the Penal Wharf Sunday.

Jewish Appeal Picks 3 to Head Men's Division

Edward C. Ostrow, Aaron Goldman and John M. Safer were chosen last night to head the men's division of the 1940 United Jewish Appeal. The drive for funds for refugee relief and overseas needs will open May 14 and continue for three weeks.

Aided by a number of unit chairmen, they will seek to recruit 150 volunteer workers.

The unit chairmen are Henry Salus, B'nai B'rith; Rabbi Henry Segal, B'nai Israel Congregation; Allen V. DeFord, Isaac Jacobson, Bernard Danzansky and Zalman Henkin, food stores; Morris Garfinkle and Cantor Louis Novick, Mizrachi; Dr. Max Spigel and Dr. Meyer Silverman, medical; Rice Protas, Dr. Jack Kotz, Dr. Harry unit.

Also S. A. Golden, Poale Zion; Joseph Gordon, Jewish War Veterans; Samuel Rudolph, Jewish Center Service Council; Phillip Rosenfeld, Washington Hebrew Congregation; Harry Gelfand, Workmen's Circle, and I. Kartzinel, of the George Washington Lodge.

DiMag Back, But Tigers Score, 4-2

Harold Newhouser Continues Jinx Of Left-Handers, Beating Champs

By the Associated Press

New York, May 7.—Even Joe DiMaggio couldn't break the jinx of left-hand pitching today for the New York Yankees and the Detroit Tigers slapped a fourth consecutive defeat on the World Champions, 4 to 2. The loss dropped the Yanks into a tie for last place with the Chisox.

DiMaggio made an unheralded appearance in the Yankee lineup, limping slightly as he patrolled centerfield for the first time this season. He had wrenched a knee in an exhibition game on Sunday before the campaign opened.

He was installed almost automatically in the cleanup spot in the champions batting order, but failed to exercise any magic with his bat. He singled once with the bases empty, but he was an easy out in the first inning after Charley Keller doubled, lifted a fly to the outfield in the fifth behind Keller's triple, and fouled out with the bases loaded in the seventh.

Altogether the Yanks got nine hits and six walks, but they never had a chance against young Harold Newhouser, the rookie southpaw who worked until he sprained a finger and had to be relieved in the ninth. He struck out six and kept the hits scattered except in the sixth, when two singles and an infield out scored a run. In the seventh a three-base error by Bruce Campbell on Frank Crosetti's fly led to the other New York run.

Bonura Races Home To Win for Nats, 6-5

Big First Baseman, Purposely Walked In Strategic Move, Scores on Wild Pitch In Tenth to Break Washington Jinx

By Shirley Povich.

Into the dirt at home plate dipped a wild pitch released by Johnny Whitehead of the Browns in the tenth inning yesterday and thus did the Nats end their five-game losing streak. Big Zeke Bonura lumbered home from third base with the winning run of a 6-5 ball game.

It was a dismal denouement for the Browns and a luck-annointed victory for the Nats in its final stages. A grievous error by Rookie Catcher Bob Swift inspired the winning run and heaped trouble on the hapless Whitehead in the first extra inning.

Gerald Walker, with his faculty for heroism in one instance and bumhood in the next, unwittingly fetched the Nats the ball game in that tenth inning. He opened the inning with a single to rightfield and then, for a few brief seconds, evoked the deep moans of the customers. He was trapped off first base by a dozen feet when Swift called for a pitch-out.

Walker Reaches Third

Walker had no alternative but to dash toward second with little prospect of reaching the base when all of a sudden young Swift uncorked a wild throw to second. The ball bounded into centerfield and Walker, to the great amazement of himself and the customers, ended up on third.

None was out, and the Brown's strategy called for Bonura and Early to be purposely passed to set up a force-play at home and when Walker was nipped at the plate on Bloodworth's grounder to Third Baseman Berardino, the strategy began to prove itself. With the bases still full, Manager Harris withdrew Jimmy Pofahl for Pinch Hitter Sammy West, and on the second pitch to West Whitehead lost the ball game. His low pitch hit the dirt 2 feet in front of the plate, bounded off Swift's mitt toward the

Red Sox Beat Indians, 6-4; Tighten Grip

Finney, Desautels Hit Timely to Pace Mates to Victory

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 7.—The timely hitting of Lou Finney and Gene Desautels was more effective than the vicious barrage aimed at the veteran Bob Grove today when the Red Sox strengthened their grip on first place in the American League by defeating the Cleveland Indians, 6-4.

The visitors outhit the Sockers, 13-8, in the series finale. All but one of the hits were against the venerable southpaw, who quit the mound in the eighth inning after Hal Trosky and Rolly Hemsley homered and Ken Keltner singled for a three-run rally that was choked off by Rookie Herb Hash.

Cards Bang 7 Homers, Swamp Brooklyn, 18-2

By International News Service

St. Louis, May 7.—The Cardinals vented their pent-up slugging spleen on the Brooklyn Dodgers today with a record collection of seven home runs and 49 total bases out of 20 hits—proving by an 18-to-2 affidavit that the National League leaders can be stopped.

The Redbirds kept up such a steady bombardment that Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers took cover in the middle of the game, letting Peewee Reese substitute at shortstop, and kept Hugh Casey on the mound for seven innings to save wear and tear on his other pitchers.

Don Padgett started the big runs roaring in the second inning with a round tripper. Rookie Infielder Eddie Lake followed with one in the third and another one in the eighth. Johnny Mize hit for the circuit also in the third with one on and again in the eighth with none on. Stu Martin joined in the shooting with one in the fourth and Joe Medwick hit one in the sixth with one on.

Warneke Stars

Behind this powerful offensive lean Lonnie Warneke pitched shutout ball for seven innings and weakened only in the eighth when the Dodgers got four of their nine hits and both their runs.

The seven homers hit by the Cards tied a National League peak reached five times in the past. The Yankees set the Major League high of eight in the American League last year.

The 49 total bases on seven homers, two triples, four doubles and seven singles bettered the modern National League mark of 47 set by the New York Giants in 1931, but also was four short of the Yanks' major league level of last year.

Shell Macon

The Cards clustered five of their runs in the second and went on another five-run spree in the eighth after Max Macon had taken over the Dodgers' pitching chore.

It was the second defeat in 13 games for Brooklyn—the previous setback being a decisive 9-2 loss to Cincinnati.

Crash Fatal To Racer at Indianapolis

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, May 7.—George Bailey, 38, Detroit race driver, died today in a hospital soon after he was injured in a wreck while practicing for the annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Bailey, driving a rear-motor speedster designed by Harry Miller, of Los Angeles, had just finished four laps on the 2½-mile track, the last at 128 miles an hour, when the car hit a wall and caught fire.

He was thrown out and his clothing was burned from his body. The fire was believed started when the impact burst open a gasoline tank on the side of the racer.

The accident was the first in practice for the race on Memorial Day.

Your Chance Takes Stakes At Pimlico

Widener Entry Warns Preakness Hopefuls With Fine Victory

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Your Chance, owned by Mrs. George D. Widener, served notice on his Preakness rivals that he must be reckoned with in Saturday's classic by winning the Survivor Stakes today in convincing fashion. Running easily in the stretch, the Chance Shot colt turned back three other candidates for the biggest money of the meeting. With Jockey Harry Richards in the saddle, Your Chance forged to the finish line three lengths ahead of Mrs. Tony Pelleteri's Sun Pharos.

The Wheatley entry pair, Snow Ridge and Merry Knight, was third and fourth in the vest-pocket field. Your Chance, in competitive action for the first time this year, was the favorite and paid $4.20 following some brilliant workouts.

The race, over the mile and a sixteenth course, was run over a fast track and Your Chance turned in good time. He was clocked in 1.46 1-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. The fractional time was :23 4-5, :47 4-5, 1:12 3-5 and 1:39 4-5.

The Wheatley Stable entry tried to give Sun Pharos and Your Chance the "one-two" punch. Merry Knight was sent to the front at once and set the pace under hustling tactics while Snow Ridge was reserved in the rear of the four-horse field. Sun Pharos and Your Chance, reserved, were within striking distance of the leader.

Nearing the half pole, Your Chance moved up gradually and swinging for the stretch, he took the lead. Merry Knight quit and Sun Pharos set out to chase the new pacemaker while Snow Ridge saved ground along the rail. In the straightaway, Sun Pharos made his bid but Your Chance shook him off without effort. Snow Ridge's move along the rail in the closing stages was too mild to be effective.

The race was worth $2,260 to the winner. The program drew a crowd of 10,000.

Dodgers Release Al Hollingsworth, Giuliani to Minors

St. Louis, May 7 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers announced today they had released Pitcher Al Hollingsworth and Catcher Angelo Giuliani to their Montreal farm of the International League, reducing their roster to 28 players.

Giuliani was purchased recently from Washington and Hollingsworth was sold to the Nats conditionally in a concurrent transaction, but was returned.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It has been fashionable in recent years to credit the spectacular success of the New York Yankees to the vision and long-range planning of the gentlemen in the club's front office.

In any discussion of the wherefores of Yankees supremacy, the efficacy of the business office is a note that is always introduced.

POVICH

The wisdom of Manager Joe McCarthy is usually acknowledged, the feats of the Yankee sluggers and the Yankee defense, including the pitching, are properly recognized and then we are told what actually makes the Yankees tick. It's those gents who have sown the Yankee farm system with bright young talent, who have organized the finest scouting system in baseball and who do the shrewd buying and selling for the Yankees.

There have been copious examples of that shrewdness. When three other big league clubs turned down Joe DiMaggio after he suffered an injured knee on the Coast, the Yankees deemed him worth the $25,000 and the three players he cost. That price scared off everybody but the Yankees' Pacific Coast scout.

Four years ago when the Yankees traded Johnny Allen to the Cleveland Indians for Monte Pearson that appeared to be a fair-enough even-up swap of two pitchers. But General Manager George Weiss of the Yankees insisted that a minor league pitcher owned by Cleveland be thrown into the deal. That seemed to be an humble request, but at this writing Steve Sundra is credited with being the best pitcher of the three who figured in the trade.

The Yankees' front office arranged to finance Charley Keller's way through the University of Maryland and gave him a generous bonus for signing a contract. It was a wise investment. They seasoned Keller on their Newark farm and then brought him up to the Yankees as a major league sensation. They did much the same thing with Joe Gordon whom they signed as an Oregon college student, and when Tony Lazzeri's legs quit on him they had in Gordon the cleverest second baseman to break into the majors since Charley Gehringer.

That's the way it has been going. Apparently whenever the Yankees needed a replacement, they had a bright young lad available on one of their farm teams. The Yankees' supply of talent seemed limitless. The Yanks won four pennants and four world series in succession. And the Yanks' front office was duly credited with the club's success.

But now it appears that some mistakes were made by these very same gentlemen. Those mistakes are brought into even bolder relief by the present plight of the Yanks. Currently they are mired in the second division. Why? Because they are short-handed. They don't have capable substitutes. They are too left handed. There's nobody to substitute capably for Joe DiMaggio. Their pitchers are wearing out. Where are all these replacements that were supposedly at the beck of the Yanks' front office?

The fact is that the Yankees have let too many good ball players get away. At a time when the Yanks are suffering for the lack of a first baseman who can come close to hitting .300, a former Yankee now with the Browns is probably the best first baseman in the league. Why did the Yankees sell George McQuinn? That is a question that is continually embarrassing the front office.

When McQuinn was with the Yankees' Newark farm, the Yanks had Lou Gehrig, but they failed to reckon with the possibility that Gehrig could not continue his iron-man pace. Lou was stricken by a sudden and de-vitalizing illness that forced his retirement, but he was already getting old as ball players go. The Yankees' front office certainly was short on vision when they gave up McQuinn to the Browns for the mere $7,500 draft price.

McQuinn was an acknowledged star with Newark and it was no surprise when he continued to star as a big leaguer. In his early years with the Browns, McQuinn was probably the most under-rated first baseman in the league. He is no longer under-rated. While the Yankees are struggling along with the impotent Babe Dahlgren whose fancy fielding doesn't drive any runs across the plate, the first baseman they used to own is the hottest article in the league.

When Joe DiMaggio was hurt and Jake Powell suffered a brain concussion, the Yankees didn't possess an outfielder worthy of calling in from one of their farms. But they used to own one they didn't appreciate. For some reason, certainly no shrewd one, they sold Walter Judnich to the Browns for the $7,500 draft price. Judnich would look very comforting, indeed, to Manager Joe McCarthy if he were available to the Yanks.

At a time when the Yankees' front office was protecting a lot of bums from the minor league draft by calling them in to the Yankee club, they left such as McQuinn and Judnich to be drafted. The Browns were fortunate enough to get first pick of the Yankee superfluous talent, and they now own two ball players the Yanks are crying to repossess. If the Yanks do blow the pennant, not Joe McCarthy but the front office should take the rap.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 7.—It takes a long time for a fighter to get popular, if the fighter wins a title from a guy who was loved. Sometimes he never gets popular. But Lou Ambers has made the grade. He was called a "cheese champion" for a seemingly unending period of time after he succeeded the ever-popular Tony Canzoneri. But now no less an authority than Prof. Will McCarney classes him with his five all-time lightweight champions:

CONSIDINE

1—Joe Gans.
2—Benny Leonard
3—Tony Canzoneri
4—Freddie Welsh
5—Lou Ambers.

That puts the grinning, happy-go-lucky Italian kid up there ahead of Bat Nelson, Jack McAuliffe, Lew Tender, Barney Ross, Frank Erne and a lot of other great 135 pounders. And we're not here today to doubt the word of the professor. We're just here to point out that not so long ago Ambers was generally regarded as a bum and worth walking a mile to miss. Today (when he's not quite as good as he was) he's a swell drawing card, well-liked, and a pretty fair section of the boxing world will resent it deeply if that tough young Lew Jenkins belts the lightweight crown off his head Friday night.

Ambers has had 98 professional fights and lost only six of them. And in most of these cases he fought his conquerors a second time and licked them, as he did in the cases of Canzoneri, Henry Armstrong and Pedro Montanez.

But curious things have entered into his metamorphosis from a bore to a drawing card. Though his speed and resourcefulness and fighting heart were generally respected, few thought of him as a real champion until he lost his title to Henry Armstrong. Armstrong had knocked out Petey Sarron to win the featherweight title and had given Barney Ross a brutal beating to acquire the welterweight crown. Then he took on Ambers for the lightweight title and the judges voted that he had won that one, too. But it was so close, and Armstrong was in so much worse shape at the end, that it seemed like sheer robbery—and a lot of sympathy went out to the loser.

When Ambers fought Armstrong again, he won the title back from Hammering Hennery. It was a tainted victory in a lot of ways, for he was given five rounds on Armstrong's supposedly low blows. But nonetheless, it was a popular victory throughout the house, and Ambers had not heard many cheers in his career. The fans said it was justifiable retribution.

But the thing that put him over in the hearts of New Yorkers was his over-the-weight victory over Al Davis last winter in the Garden. In Davis was vested all the things a righteous citizen resents in a youth. Bummy, as he is pointedly called, had a fine sneer, a reputation as a slum tough, and had been arraigned for beating up a neighbor in merciless fashion.

Now, Ambers was no angel himself. He had been in a reform school as a petty thief, but he had come out of it and rehabilitated himself in a really inspiring sort of way with the help of his religion and his busy fists. When Lou squirmed out of trouble and went on to slapout a jigging, dancing, slappy victory—which sorely bewildered Bummy—Lou could have had the joint for the asking.

Jenkins has had an odd career. Two years ago he was shoeing mules in a Texas cavalry outfit. He had had 15 fights in the army before he fought a pro match on a furlough in January of 1938 and made $16. For a time he left his native Sweetwater and roamed from town to town, fighting for whatever the promotor chose to pay him. He knocked out and got knocked out, and pretty soon Hymie Caplin heard of him and became his manager—jumping a couple of priority claims. Under Caplin he has won 10 straight, the last seven by knockouts.

When New York reporters first interviewed Jenkins he described himself as "an ornery cuss," which might have come from his association with those mules. He's certainly got a mule's kick in his right duke. Luigi will have to be at his deftest to evade it.

By Bill Burnett

For a brief period—less than an inning—Anacostia High diamonders held a lead on Central's slugging interhigh champions yesterday, but the advantage faded in a flurry of extra-base hits and errors and the Vikings took their third series triumph, 9-1.

Anacostia's only run during the game on the "flats" came in the second inning as a result of three singles and a passed ball. The 1-0 margin lasted until the third, when the Vikings tied things up. In the fourth they jumped on big Art Faircloth for a pair of hits, got three charity bases, an error and another passed ball to score five more runs. That was the ball game.

One Anacostia casualty resulted in the fifth frame when Billy Fisher, relieving Starting Pitcher Charley Kligman for Central, "beaned" Johnny Penn. The Indian outfielder was unconscious for several minutes after which he was rushed to a doctor. His condition was not serious, however.

It was Penn's misfortune, incidentally, which figured in the Indians' biggest threat to overtake Central once its lead had been lost. That put two men on base with nobody out, Gene Nunnally having previously hit a single for the only safety off Fisher during his five-inning relief role. After striking out Bob Nolte, Fisher walked Elmer Leukhardt to fill the bases. The next two batters, however, fanned futilely at Fisher's high, hard ones.

Though Fisher looked exceptionally well, there was no doubt that the star of the game was cocky Benny Steiner, Central shortstop. In five trips to the plate he tripled twice, walked once and sent a screaming home run into rightfield. He batted in four runs. He made one error, but his running pickup and throw of Joe Soresi's hot grounder in the sixth was the fielding gem of the day.

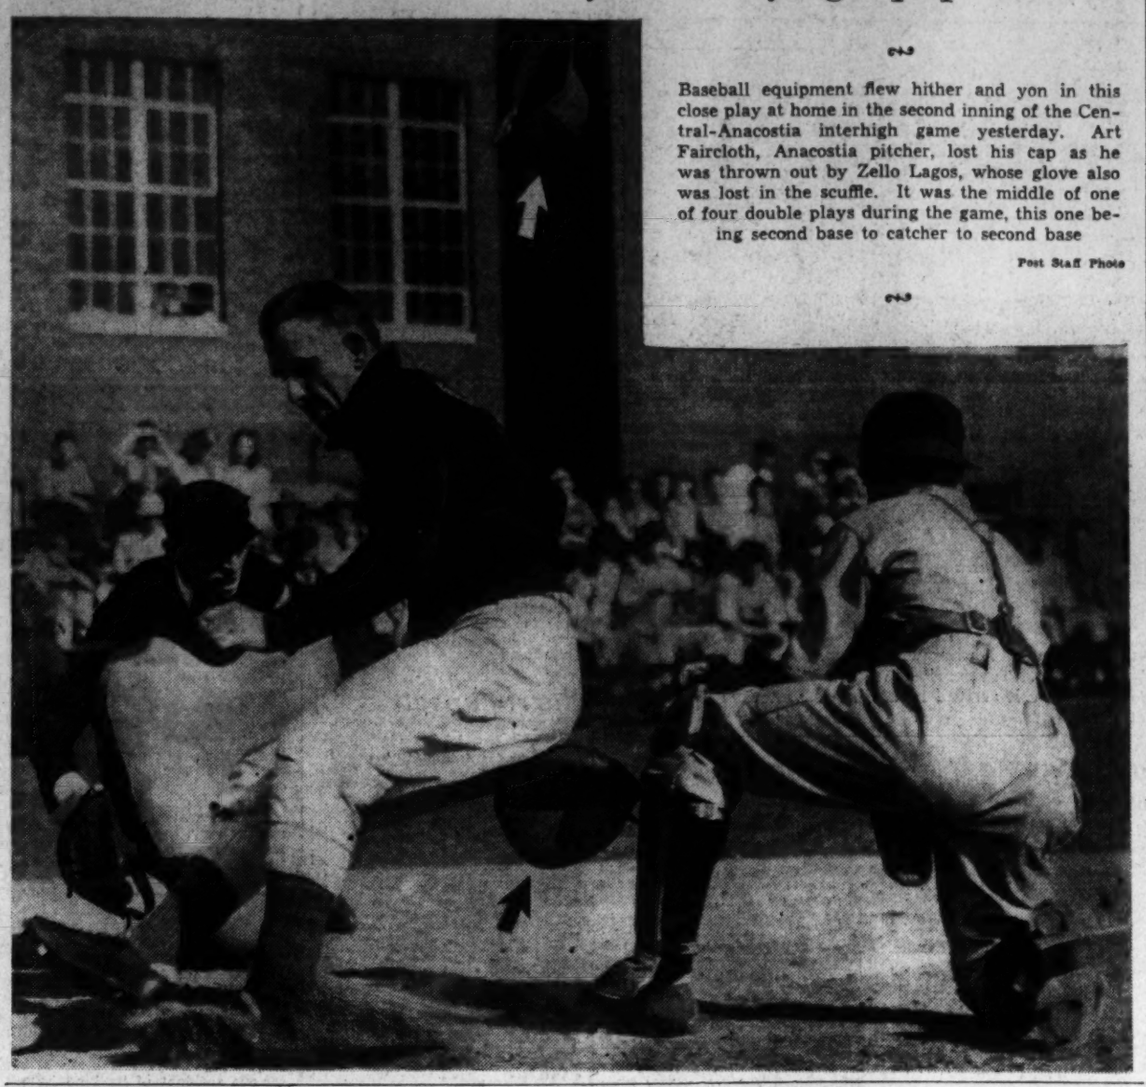
Central Starts a Double Play Amid Flying Equipment



Baseball equipment flew hither and yon in this close play at home in the second inning of the Central-Anacostia interhigh game yesterday. Art Faircloth, Anacostia pitcher, lost his cap as he was thrown out by Zello Lagos, whose glove also was lost in the scuffle. It was the middle of one of four double plays during the game, this one being second base to catcher to second base

Brewers Beat Cameo in Post League, 8-3

After two successful starts in The Washington Post-Industrial Baseball League, Cameo Furniture tasted defeat for the first time yesterday when the champion Heurich Brewers staged a late rush to win, 8-3, at the Ellipse.

The Beermen tallied three times in the second to give them a margin until the fifth, when Cameo deadlocked things at 3-3. Four more Brewer runs in the seventh sent Ottie Prince from the mound and sewed up the game. Hits were evenly divided between the clubs, each getting 11.

Heurich took undisputed possession of first place with the victory, its second straight.

Early Scores Help Western Top Episcopal

Local Nine Scores, 8-7; Buck, Leitch Smash Home Runs

Alexandria, May 7.—Early hitting counted heavily today as Western High School romped home to a single run victory over Episcopal High, 8 to 7, on Hoxton Field.

Coach Bill Ravenal, of the Maroons, pulled his starting pitcher, Snow, from the box in the first frame after a hit and a pair of walks, with none out. Graham Ellis carried on hurling duties throughout the contest, allowing the Washingtonians ten hits.

Grey, of the victors, held Episcopal to 11 hits before turning the moundover to Leitch, previously posted at first base, in the seventh inning. No hits were registered against Lietch in the two remaining innings.

Gallaudet Faces 2-Way Meet Today

Beginning with a triangular meet with American U. and Bridgewater today, Gallaudet trackmen have a busy week on their hands. Saturday they square off against the strong Loyola, of Baltimore squad. Both events are listed for Hotchkiss Field, today's starting at 1:30 p. m.

Stars of the Blue effort will probably be Dick Phillips and Earl Stevens, a pair of youngsters with lightning in their heels. Latz and Dickmen are known around school as the "double-threaters," their specialties being the one and two-mile jaunts, respectively.

Covelli, Scalzo to End Training For May 15 Fight Here in Public

Featherweight Championship Participants To Take Up Quarters in Turner's Arena

The performers in the National Boxing Association's latest brain-child—the Petey Scalzo-Frankie Covelli featherweight championship match, May 15, at Griffith Stadium—are expected to arrive in Washington tomorrow and Friday to conclude training in public for their 15-round date in Promoter Joe Turner's first venture outdoors.

Covelli, who next to Scalzo is the chief beneficiary of the N. B. A.'s elastic policy, will take up quarters tomorrow in Turner's Arena.

The Chicago lad, first to make an onslaught on the title recently bestowed upon Scalzo without so much as a slap being passed in anybody's ring, will work out at 1 p. m. under the watchful eye of Izzy Kline, his manager, who is bringing in a stable of sparring partners to help garnish the title match's supporting card.

Covelli, the No. 5 featherweight on the N. B. C.'s list, has the dubious honor of being the first fighter to benefit by that body's recent reversal of its policy insisting that championship fights shall be those between the champion and one of the top three fighters in each division. Under the new rule, the N. B. A. will give titular recognition to any bout between the titleholder and one of the first ten battlers.

Pete Reilly, manager of Scalzo, will bring his fighter in Friday and will supervise the New York Italian's daily workouts each day after Covelli & Co. leave the Arena.

Slightly abashed because of failure to get Scalzo declared featherweight champion in a title match, the N. B. A. carried ahead bravely yesterday by issuing him a certificate officially declaring him the new champion—as far as its membership of some 40 States is concerned.

Scalzo has proved himself master of the 126-pound class in nontitle matches, and only the strange habits of boxing managers has kept him from proving conclusively that he is the rightful heir to the featherweight throne—a spot the N. B. A. declared vacant when Joey Archibald refused to fight Scalzo.

Rough Riders Beaten, 12-7, By Briarley

Special Dispatch to The Post

Ammendale, Md., May 7.—Briarley Military Academy registered one of its most prized baseball victories of the season here today when it pounded four Roosevelt hurlers for 15 hits and a 12-7 decision. The invaders were never in the running after the fourth inning, by which time the Cadets had amassed an 8-1 lead.

"Smokey" Intindola went the distance for the winners, and though he allowed 13 safeties he was in serious trouble only in the fifth, when four Rider scores came over Buster Knight paced the winners' stickwork with three hits in four times, including a double.

Coach Larowe's Boxers Act as Pallbearers

Charlottesville, Va., May 7 (AP).—Eight University of Virginia students who formed Coach John Larowe's last boxing team, carried him to his grave here today. Larowe, whose teams won championships of the Southern Conference for seven years, died here Sunday.

Headed by President John Lloyd Newcomb, the honorary pallbearers included faculty members, former members of Larowe's teams, and the school's athletic staff.

They gathered in the little Gothic chapel on the university campus for services conducted by the Rev. William Laird, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and Dr. Cecil Cook, pastor of the University Baptist Church. Faculty members, students, alumni and other members of the community were present.

Small But Classy Field Runs in $20,000 Dixie 'Cap Today

Seven Start In 36th Race At Pimlico

Challedon, Kayak II Not Entered; Isolator And Masked General Are Cofavorites

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Three-year-olds, with their Derby and Preakness doings, will take a side seat tomorrow while older horses take the spotlight with the annual running of the historic Dixie Handicap, $20,000 added test at a mile and three-sixteenths. Of the 50 nominations for the thirty-sixth renewal of this race, only seven were named in the overnight entries but the field has class and action should be of the highest type.

This was expected to be another clash of Challedon and Kayak II but both horses will stay in their barns. Challedon because Trainer Lou Schaefer is not yet ready to let his ace go postward and Kayak II because Trainer Tom Smith was not pleased with the weight assignments.

The chief wagering is expected to center around the Brandwine Stable's Masked General and the Belair Stud's Isolator. Masked General came off the pace to win the Philadelphia Handicap at Havre de Grace. Isolater, while making his first start of the year, has worked well.

However, there is a reason for support of any of the seven entries. Honey Cloud, winner of two $5,000 stakes at Bowie and second to Masked General in the Philadelphia, will be backed. Belay, nosed out by Honey Cloud last week, is expected to improve off that first effort of the year.

Aethelwold closed ground in the Philadelphia and will carry the W. L. Brann colors. Filisteo and Olympus are reported fit and ready for the best.

On the Preakness front, today's developments were: Andy K. worked five-eighths in 1:01 4-5, Abrasion went three-eighths in 0:36, Pass Out was sent a half mile in 0:49, Gallahadion, winner of the Derby, and Mioland, fourth at Louisville, arrived from Kentucky in good style. Trainer Bill Hurley said that he was satisfied with Jockey Freddie Smith's ride in the Derby and that the little fellow would have the mount on Bimelech Saturday.

Post time for the first rate tomorrow and Saturday has been set at 2 o'clock instead of the usual 2:15.

Gallahadion, Fresh From Derby, Arrives for Preakness

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

With all the dignity of a champion, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' long-shot Kentucky Derby winner, walks down the ramp from his private car the object of a barrage of a photographers' flash bulbs. Trainer Roy Waldron (extreme right, with halter rope in hand) seems a bit excited as Gallahadion steps down. The colt arrived in Baltimore yesterday for Saturday's Preakness at Pimlico

——At the Post

Dear Al:

We have heard a lot of post mortems about the Kentucky Derby but I'm just wondering what has become of those "mystery shoes" that were going to help C. S. Howard's Mioland. Some of the scribes at Louisville fell hook, line and empty-headed for that stuff about vacuum cups, etc. Well, I went out to the Churchill Downs barns and investigated that "mystery" shoe" business. In fact, Trainer Tom Smith, conditioner of Mioland, Kayak II and Seabiscuit, not only said there was no mystery but gave us one of the shoes. It is a bit lighter than the ordinary horseshoe and built up slightly on the front but otherwise it is not unlike plates that have been worn for years by thoroughbreds. Should Mioland win the Preakness, the boys are going to hop that "mystery shoe" gag again. Pimlico has decided to use the Puett starting gate for the Preakness; at least such was the announcement last Monday. This will be the first time that the electric gate, with boxed-in stalls, has been used in a Derby or Preakness. At Louisville last week Col. Matt Winn ruled out the door gate and the Derby was sent away out of a plain stall gate. Regardless of comment to the contrary, the start was excellent in my book. There might have been some swerving after the horses left the gate but they came out of there together. Now don't get me wrong; I believe the automobile is here to stay but somehow I shudder to think what could happen on Saturday. Last Monday a 2-year-old named Last Bet became fractious in the gate, threw up his front legs and ripped a foot of hide off. The stewards mercifully withdrew him from the race, but, of course, all bets had to stand. This was the first serious accident of its kind here with the electric gates used. On the other hand the door stall gates probably have saved dozens of horses from injury. If something happens to

Champion Chevy Chase Beats Kenwood Women Golfers

Manor Blanks Woodmont By 12-0 Score

Kenwood All But Eliminated From 4-Ball Title Play; Columbia in Tie

In the first match of the series between two strong teams, the defending champion Chevy Chase octet defeated Kenwood, 8½ to 3½, yesterday at Congressional to virtually blast any hopes Kenwood had of the Women's Golf Association first-team championship.

Manor held its lead with a 12-0 shutout over Woodmont, marking 35½ points out of possible 36 the Manorites have scored in three matches. Argyle was able to muster only five players and lost, 11½ to ½, to Army and Navy, while Washington, minus the star of the first two matches, Sally Whipple, split with Columbia, 6 to 6.

Manor was knocked out of the second team lead by losing, 8-1, to Chevy Chase at Columbia, while Congressional defeated Kenwood, 7½ to 1½, and Army and Navy won over Kenwood, 6 to 3.

Congressional's third team scored its second straight shutout, blanking Washington, 6-0, while Manor held its lead with a 4-2 victory over Army and Navy, in another third team match at Columbia.

FIRST TEAMS AT CONGRESSIONAL

Montgomery Blair Beats Devitt, 10-7

An eightrun spree in the second inning accounted for Montgomery Blair High's fifth baseball victory of the season yesterday, a 10-7 beating of Devitt Prep on the Four Corners diamond.

Twelve men went to bat in the second. Two doubles, four singles, a stolen base and three Devitt errors accounted for the uprising.

Herby Southgate took credit for the victory, though he was relieved by Johnny Norris after the seventh. Between them they allowed 13 hits, while Devitt's Webster was holding the winners to 10. Johnny Stevens, of Devitt, hit a home run in the first inning with one mate aboard.

Until that point, last place was yawning for the Nats, for a defeat would have dropped them into the cellar, but their victory enabled them to scramble into a fifth-place tie with the Athletics.

Young Hudson Wins

For young Sidney Hudson it was a gallant sort of victory. The rookie right-hander outlasted two St. Louis pitchers to go the full ten-inning route, and struck out seven Browns during the proceedings. His pitching literally held the Nats together throughout the ball game. He allowed 11 hits, but only in the second inning, when Johnny Beradino belted a home run with a mate on base, did the Browns make free with Hudson.

Hudson's performance was a refreshing sort of item, coming as it did in the wake of a week of inept and wild performances by various members of the Nats' staff. Always pitching well within himself, Hudson didn't walk a batter until the ninth inning.

The Nats made an uphill battle of it, never scoring more than a run in one inning. They tied the score at 2-2, at 4-4 and at 5-5 in the late stages but could give Hudson no lead to work on. Elden Auker was Hudson's pitching opponent at the outset but gave way to a pinch hitter in the seventh inning.

A freak triple by Buddy Lewis set the Nats up in a temporary 1-0 lead in the first inning. His routine grounder took a freak hop over Second Baseman Don Heffner's shoulder and evolved as a three-bagger. Cecil Travis' fly to Hoag moved Lewis home on a close play at the plate.

Nats Go Ahead

Berardino belted a high curve ball far into the left center bleachers with Hoag on base in the second to reclaim a 2-1 lead for the Browns in the second inning, but singles by Jake Early and Jimmy Bloodworth got a run back for the Nats. In the third the Nats moved ahead, 3-2, on Case's safe bunt and Walker's double to left.

Walker collected four of the Nats' 11 hits, and figured in four of their runs to lead the Washington attack. After the Browns tied the score in the fourth, Berardino's two-bagger and Heffner's double, Auker himself put them in a 5-4 lead with a fifth-inning homer to the flagpole. His circuited the bases with the help of a bungled relay on Case's throw.

Walker's single and his stolen base paved the way for the Nats to tie the score at 5 to 5 in the sixth. Bloodworth got the run home with a single to right, but in the seventh the Browns moved in front again. Gallagher pinch hit for Auker and beat out a single to Pofahl, scoring on Judnich's three-base blast to deep center.

Case and Walker fetched the Nats the tying run in their seventh. Case doubled and, with the customers despairing of the run, Walker singled to left with two out, to deadlock the game again at 6 to 6.

Walter Judnich was an important factor in sending the game into extra innings. In the eighth he galloped into the center field corner to drag down Jake Early's long drive and in the ninth he dashed against the center field wall to haul in Buddy Lewis' bid for a triple.

College Boys and Men of 60 Needed to Boost Billiards

By Al Hailey

Calling all college boys, men over 60 and bright young press agents—you're the lads who have been elected to save three-cushion billiards from the fate of the Do Do bird.

Maybe this mixture appears a bit daffy, but, so help us, Willie Hoppe says that it's vital for the aforementioned groups to get together if the sport that was once America's favorite pastime is to be saved from extinction.

Hoppe said it yesterday after an exhibition at the Arcadia Billiard Parlor, and he should know, for he not only has been the Nation's No. 1 cue stick artist since age 18, but also is the world's three-cushion billiard champion today—at age 52.

There's $20,000 a year lurking around for the fellows who really want to get to the top in the three-cushion world, and when that many "iron men" per annum are mentioned in one breath you naturally wait around to hear the rest. Here's how Willie sees it.

Colleges Are Incubators

Colleges furnish an ideal chance for steady-nerved youngsters to learn the game from the ground up. They usually have the time, and the skill and concentration it takes to become an expert is a challenge to the mental capacities that inspires the will to become the master.

And as for that $20,000—that's no fairy tale. Hoppe himself has experienced that. His main concern is that prospective college champions will be deterred by thought of entering a game which will "never make them more than five or ten thousand a year."

"What this game needs to put it back on its old level is new faces, new stars, new champions, men whose artistry will draw the crowds again. And right now it appears that the new faces are going to come from the ranks of college men," Hoppe says.

You think this strange—listen:

"Charley Paterson has been doing a grand job giving college men instruction in three-cushion billiards for several years, and more recently there has been a pronounced increase of intefest in the game on the campuses," Hoppe goes on. "Peterson makes Georgetown every now and then, and his tour includes Yale, Princeton, Harvard, all the Big Ten schools and several others."

Peterson is the 61-year-old expert who formerly toured with Hoppe, and although he's getting along in years still is acclaimed as the world's greatest fancy shot artist, Hoppe explained.

"Men like Charley — fellows around 60—are just fitted for this type of work, but what we need is a dozen or so men like Peterson touring the Nation's colleges to conduct billiard schools."

Brooding because bowling appears as the likely successor to the sport he nurtured and saw hit its zenith in past years, Hoppe is convinced that the third ingredient for the revival of three-cushion billiards is promotion.

Publicity Boom

"Look how the game boomed with all the publicity given the national championship tourney in Chicago last March," he said, referring to the $20,000 title play he won with a perfect record of 11 victories.

Space is too limited to enumerate the astounding number of records plied up by the "boy wonder" of the billiard table. Willie started handling a cuestick at age six, went to Paris at 18 to defeat Maurice Vignaux for the world's 18.2 balkline championship, which he has held the last 18 years.

Still using the cuestick which he has carried with him for 36 years of his 43-year playing career, Hoppe yesterday defeated Gene Ruark, former national amateur champion and present District titleholder, 150-1 in a balkline exhibition.

Before a spellbound audience, Willie missed the first shot and then ran out on the second try—150 straight points. At three-cushion he defeated Ruark, 40-23, and then whiled away time with a number of fancy shots.

He'll give two more exhibitions today at the fourteenth and Park road billiard rooms—at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m.

Wilson Golfers Beat Western, Clinch Crown

Earle Skinker's Woodrow Wilson High School golf team put the interhigh championship under lock and key yesterday at Congressional, defeating Western, 8½ to ½ for six victories in as many matches.

Skinker, who lost a dormie 3-up lead against George Vass last week, defeated his old rival, 3 and 2, and he and J. Brantley won the best ball, 5 and 4, in the first foursome. Skinker and Johnny Vandergrift, jr., a member of Congressional, each scored three over par 75's in the one-sided triumph. It was Western's second defeat. Roosevelt's defending champions have also lost two matches.

Roosevelt won its fourth match, defeating Tech 8 to 1 at Beaver Dam, the losers' lone point being scored by Dick Burgess, as usual.

Rockville, with Scotty Ross winning 2 points individually, defeated St. John's, 6½ to 2½. Ross was out in 36 and back in 40 for a 76 as he defeated Kelly, 6 and 4, and beat Kelley and Johnson's best ball, 4 and 2. Rockville forfeited the second individual match.

Wilson, 8½; Western, ½

Skinker (W.W.) defeated Vass, 3 and 2; Brantley (W.W.) defeated Sparks, 5 and 4. Best ball, Wilson, 5 and 4.

Vandergrift, (W.W.) defeated Stetekluh, 9 and 7; Stockell (W.W.) defeated Fisher, 5 and 3. Best ball, Wilson, 8 and 6.

Appelby (W.W.) defeated Trindall, 4 and 3; Olds (W.W.) and Valle (Western), all even. Best ball, Wilson, 5 and 3.

Rockville, 6½; St. John's, 2½

Ross (R.) defeated Kelly, 6 and 4; Johnson (St.J.) won by default. Best ball, Rockville, 4 and 2.

Stanton (St.J.) defeated Haynes, 3 and 2; Teace (R.) defeated McGinnis, 6 and 4. Best ball, all even.

Monday (R.) defeated Steele, 6 and 5; Cecil (R.) defeated Maloney, 1 up. Best ball, Rockville, 5 and 3.

Roosevelt, 8; Tech, 1

Brownrigg (R.) defeated Goodspeed, 3 and 2; Burgess (T.) defeated Myers, 4 and 3. Best ball, Roosevelt, 2 up.

Johnson (R.) defeated aller, 7 and 5; Barse (R.) defeated Rea, 4 and 3. Best ball, Roosevelt, 6 and 5.

Griffin (R.) defeated Brown, 3 and 2; Wannan (R.) defeated Talbert, 5 and 4. Best ball, Roosevelt, 4 and 3.

Md. Freshmen Rally to Beat G. W. Frosh

Maryland's frosh ball nine spotted the G. W. yearlings nine runs in the second fram at College Park yesterday but went on to win in a late-inning uprising, 11-10, for the fifth win against no losses.

Twelve men went to bat for the district nine in the second frame to produce nine runs on nine hits to send Dan Cleveland to the showers. Bill Crist took over the hurling duties in the third and set the Colonial nine back with one hit. In the heetic G. W. second, Dowd and Fitzgerald singled and scored on Konescweitz' double into short center. Two walks and six more hits accounted for seven Terps.

The Terp yearlings scored in the second and added four more markers in the third on hits by Boothe, Crist, Grier and Reynolds.

Catcher Todd Loses Ball, Lets in Run

Third Strike Bounds From His Mitt and Philadelphian Scores; Ike Pearson Victor

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 7.—Ike Pearson, 23-year-old Philadelphia righthander, who jumped from the Mississippi State University campus to the majors last June, whitewashed the Chicago Cubs with a four-hitter today, 1 to 0, in the "rubber" game of their series.

An unusual error by Catcher Al Todd produced the game's lone run. Ben Warren beat out an infield hit in the fifth, went to second on a base on balls and reached third in a double play. He scored when a third strike on Pearson caromed off Todd's glove and rolled several feet away.

Before the ball could be retrieved Warren had reached the plate and Pearson was on first base.

Hank Leiber, who had hit safely in the past 12 games during which he had batted .510, was helpless against Pearson's slants.

Eli Gottlieb In Semifinals

4S—FRIENDS

Eli Gottlieb, third-seeded player from Roosevelt, became the first semifinalist in the Friends invitation interscholastic tennis tournament yesterday when he defeated Emmett Sheehan, of Gonzaga, in a hard-fought match punctuated by long rallies. The score were 7—5, 3—6, 6—1.

In a quarter-final engegement Al Farrington, of Roosevelt, scored a mild upset in beating Alvin Dulcan, of Friends, 6—4, 2—6, 8—6. Dulcan had surprised Monday by eliminating eighth-seeded Oscar Thorup.

Today's schedule at Friends School lists four interscholastic matches, the winners to gain the quarter-finals, and one boys' semi-final and one boys' quarter-final.

The interscholastic pairings, all matches at 3:30, are B. Fisher, Roosevelt, vs E. G. Gamble, Episcopal; Sterling Lee, St. Albans, vs. Bobby Bensinger, Takoma Academy; Dick Williams, Episcopal, vs. Ahendschin, Washington-Lee.

The boys' semifinal pits Jack Barnes, Gonzaga, and Cotton Smith, Friends, while the quarter-final brings together Sam Doyle, St. Albans, and R. Beatty, Landonz, both at 3:30.

Chisox Invade Griffith Stadium For Two Games

Boasting the league's leading hitter in Taft Wright, former Washington outfielder, the White Sox move into Griffith Stadium today for a two-game series.

Manager Jimmy Dykes will take advantage of the fact that the Nats have not beaten a left-hander this season by starting Southpaw Edgar Smith. Ken Chase, afflicted with wildness in his last two starts, will get another chance today.

GREAT PYRENEES

Just where this fellow originated or when cannot be ascertained, but he is difinitely placed in Europe as early as 1800 B. C. and has been the working companion of the shepherds high in the Pyrenees Mountains ever since. Living closely to man as they have for many centuries they have developed their sense of devotion, guardianship and an understanding of mankind to an extreme. They are usually all white though some may be slightly marked with grey or tan, from 25 to 32 inches high and weigh from 90 to 125 pounds. (Photo courtesy Dog World.)

G. U. Plays Maryland Nine Today, Saturday

Hoyas Hosts to Terrapins at 3:30 At Hilltop; Go to College Park As Favorite for Second Game

Both in high gear and ready for their finest performances of the season the Georgetown and Maryland nines will open a two-game home and open series today at the Hilltop at 3:30 o'clock. Saturday the Hoyas will invade College Park for the second game.

Georgetown, winner of seven of eight games and recent conqueror of Fordham, the team that inflicted its only defeat, will be a slight favorite to beat the Terrapins, who twice upset the Hilltoppers last year.

On record, Georgetown figures to be the heavy choice. But restraining those who might otherwise be overenthusiastic about Georgetown's chances is the chubby figure of Earl Springer, Maryland's left-handed pitching star.

A much better pitcher than last year, when he throttled the Hoyas, Springer has allowed only six hits in his last three games and has won four straight. His most recent effort was a one-hit shutout of William and Mary for the Terps, with big Pershing Mondorff, a right-hander, held in reserve.

Colonial Nine Meets Terrors

George Washington University's baseball team gets back into action today after a layoff of one day, entertaining Western Maryland on the Ellipse at 2:30. This is the first of two games to be played this week between these teams, Western Maryland being scheduled to entertain G. W. on Saturday at Westminster, Md.

G. W. Netmen Snap Hoyas' Streak, 5-4

George Washington University's tennis team avenged an early season defeat and at the same time snapped Georgetown's undefeated record yesterday by winning their match, 5—4, at Columbia Country Club.

In evening the score with the Hoyas, who won the first meeting of the schols by the same 5—4 score, the Colonials split even in six singles and won two of the three doubles.

Davie Johnsen, who lost his first match of the season Saturday to Allie Ritzenberg, of Maryland, came back with a will to trim Georgetown's No. 1 man, Don Martin, 6—1, 6—2. Johnsen also was a winner in the doubles, teaming with Fleming to defeat Martin and Ritzer, 6—4, 6—4.

Georgetown had won five straight matches.

SINGLES—Johnsen (G.W.) defeated Martin, 6—1, 6—2; Owens (G.U) defeated Fleming, 6—1, 6—2; Davis (G.W.) defeated Ritzer, 2—6, 6—2, 6—2; Blankin (G.W.) defeated Green, 6—3, 2—6, 6—3; Watts (G.U.) defeated Madden, 6—3, 3—6, 10—8; Boyer (G.U.) defeated Mann, 7—5, 2—6, 10—8.

DOUBLES—Johnsen and Fleming (G.W.) Davis and Blankin (G.W.) defeated Owen and Watts, 2—6, 6—4, 7—5; Green and Walford (G.U.) defeated Mann and Gel-defeated Martin and Ritzer, 6—3, 6—4; fond, 4—6, 6—2, 7—6.

C. U. Tennis Team Beats American University

Four victories in the singles and two out of three doubles matches gave Catholic University at 6-to-3 victory over American yesterday on the Eagles' courts.

Bees Defeat Pirates, 11-9, In Long Game

Boston Scores Third Straight While Bucs Drop 7th in Row

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, May 7.—In a game that lasted one minute over three hours, the Boston Bees today won their third straight, 11 to 9, from the Pittsburgh Pirates, who were handed their seventh loss in a row.

Pittsburgh deadlocked the contest with a run in the first inning and again with three runs in the third, but the Bees went ahead by counting four in the fifth and never lost their edge. Boston made 16 hits, including a homer by Eddie Miller, and the Pirates made 15. Both teams used 35 players.

Wilson Rally Falls Short, W.-L. Wins

Woodrow Wilson nine's late surge came a bit too late and was one run short yesterday, giving Washington-Lee High its eighth triumph in 14 games, a 13-12 decision in a slugging duel at the Arlington diamond.

Twenty-four base hits—including Jack Kowaleski's homer in the fourth for Wilson—marked the battle, W.-L. getting 13 of them. Of the 11 errors, the Little Generals were charged with five and Wilson six. Each side used three hurlers, none of them pitching anything like airtight ball.

Casey, Evans Clash Tonight

The question of whether Washington will continue to suffer from two wrestling enterprises may be settled tonight when Jimmy Erwin stages his second show at Riverside Stadium—a double feature bringing out Steve (Crusher) Casey against Don Evans and Bob Weatherly against Abe Coleman.

The troupe performing tonight at Riverside, just in from a one-night stand in Camden, N. J., shapes up as the "big test" for Erwin. Another flimsy crowd and he may retire, leaving the field to Promoter Joe Turner and his collection of freaks.

Casey, who was one of wrestling's biggest drawing cards in the "good old days," still carries some of his appeal, and Erwin is counting on a goodly Irish turnout to see the County Kerry Irishman bounce Evans around.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

As we view it, the outstanding performer for the Nats yesterday was young Sidney Hudson and to him we are giving the largest point award in the Man of the Month contest. Points were distributed as follows:

To Hudson, ten points, because he was responsible for breaking the Nats' losing streak, because he held the club together and kept it in the ball game with his clever pitching, and because he gave up only two bases on balls, one of them intentional.

To Gerald Walker, seven points, because he made four of the Nats' hits, because he drove in the tying run with two out in the seventh, and because his single in the tenth led to the winning run.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, three points, because he made two hits and drove in an important run.

To George Case, three points, because he made two hits, one of them a double, and scored two of the Nats' runs.

To Jake Early, three points, because he singled and doubled. The totals:

Cecil Travis	12	Buddy Lewis	4
Syd Hudson	10	Zeke Bonura	4
George Case	10	Rick Ferrell	4
Jimmy Bloodworth	10	Al Evans	4
Gerald Walker	8	Jake Early	3

Postlude

District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs presents the annual choir festival Tuesday night in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Observance of National Music Week brought around again last evening the annual choir festival sponsored by the District Federation of Music Clubs, and all the space not occupied by singers in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church was was filled with interested auditors. The vested choristers were ranked in the central pews while awaiting the turn of each choir, and it was from this position that the combined organization sang the opening and closing numbers of the program, under the direction of Eva Whitford Lovette, president of the federation.

BROWN

In the arrangement of this year's festival, Chairman Deane Shure followed a principle of rotation which brought into participation several choirs which have not hitherto been heard. The choirs taking part were Augustana Lutheran (Lila F. Knudsen, director), Washington City Brethren (Iola Hollinger Bucher, director), First Baptist (Harwood Hall, director), Calvary Baptist (Herbert V. Pate, director), Covenant-First Presbyterian (Theodore Schaefer, director), and New York Avenue Presbyterian (Charles Dana Beaschler, director).

Each choir filed into the loft for the presentation of three numbers, and the music selected showed a preference for such excellent liturgical composers as Bortnianski, Arkhangelski, Christiansen, Mueller and Levandovski. Included were the Introit and Kyrie from Gabriel Faure's beautiful Requiem, and compositions by Noble Cain, Henry T. Burleigh, Nathaniel Dett, Ippolitov-Ivanov and Harold.

The commendable quality of the singing, in which no competitive element was involved, was a testimony to the ideals of the various directors. Those of us whose memories are long can remember a time when church choirs on the average were far from the level of today. The advancement of standards has been steady, not only in the training for technical accuracy, but in the quality of the music performed.

Last evening's festival was the second event of Music Week for the local Federation of Music Clubs which held its annual banquet and concert at the Army and Navy Club on Monday night, when 250 members and guests broke bread together. The guests of honor were Mrs. Guy P. Gannett, national federation vice president for the eastern region; Mrs. Frank Stuart Rowe, president of the Capital district, which includes Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia andn the District of Columbia; and Mrs. Roland Whitehurst, president of the Maryland federation.

After the banquet a program was presented in the lounge by the choral group of the Takoma Park Women's Club, the Sligo Music Club, Dorothy Raddle Emery, composer-pianist; Nellie Barber Brooks, soprano; the Washington Opera Guild, the Marian Chace Dance Group and the Lovette Choral Club.

Claude Robeson directs the Rubinstein Club in the Willard Hotel ballroom Tuesday night, with Ardelle Warner, contralto, as guest soloist.

That always dependable organization of women's voices, the Rubinstein Club, gave its final concert of the season last evening in its usual locale for public appearances, the ballroom of the Willard Hotel. Claude Robeson directed the enjoyable choral numbers in a program which opened with Kieserling's "Spring Song" and closed with Christopher O'Hara's "Hark, O'er the Sand" adapted from Ippolitov-Ivanov's "Procession of the Sardar." The other selections were arrangements of music by Rubinstein, Schubert, Saint-Saens and Wagner.

The guest soloist, Ardelle Warner, of New York, disclosed a contralto voice of wide range and considerable power in songs which were for the most part familiar, such as the Habanera from "Carmen," Veracini's "Pastorale" and Brahms' "Vergebliches Staendchen." Exceptions were Balfe's "The Arrow and the Song" and Fairchild's "A Memory." Miss Warner's voice has a natural beauty of tone, but her method of production could be improved by the elimination of vibrato and by greater care for an even control of breath.

Parole Officer, Seeking Escaped Convict, Is Beaten

William A. Stein, 53, District parole officer, entered a house in the 700 block Seventh street northeast yesterday in an attempt to pounce upon an escaped House of Correction prisoner.

Instead, Stein himself was pounced upon by a number of men and beaten about the face. Stein proved that he could give as well as take. Augustus Lover, 19, colored, of 752 Seventh street southeast, who was charged with being one of the assailants, required treatment at Providence Hospital for scalp wounds.

The convict, who fled several weeks ago from the House of Correction at Jessups Cut, Md., was believed to have escaped in the melee.

Riebe Named NavyYard Captain

Capt. Herbert B. Riebe, president of the Naval Reserve Inspection Board at the Navy Department, yesterday was named captain of the Navy Yard and assistant superintendent of the Naval gun factory here.

He will succeed Capt. Ferdinand L. Reichmuth who has been ordered to Newport, R. I., as a student in the Naval War College.

Barcroft P.-T. A.

Newly-elected officers of the Barcroft Parent-Teacher Association, Arlington, will be installed at a meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the school.

Woman's Club to Vote

Amendments to the constitution will be voted on by the Lyon Village Woman's Club, Arlington, tonight at the Clarendon Community House at 8 o'clock.

U.S. Lines Earn, I. M. M. Loses, Report Shows

Radio Corporation Shows Profit; Other Companies Advance

New York, May 7.—International Merchantile Marine Co. and consolidated subsidiaries today reported 1939 net loss of $537,306, compared with net loss of $551,840 in 1938. The report included operations of Roosevelt Steamship Co. and American Lines Co., which were not consolidated in 1938.

U. S. Lines Co., controlled by I. M. M., not included in the report, earned net profit in 1939 of $3,051,055, compared with $1,021,993 in 1938.

Because all ships owned by U. S. Lines Co. were laid up early in December due to the Neutrality Act, and not put into operation again until March, 1940, net results of operations of I. M. M. for the first quarter this year showed net loss of about $868,000, John M. Franklin, president, said in the annual report.

Kennecott Copper

Kennecott Copper Corporation earned about $11,840,000 in the first quarter this year, equal to $1.09 a share on capital stock, E. T. Stannard, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. This compared with net income equal to 27 cents a share estimated for the similar 1939 period.

Radio Corporation

Radio Corporation of America reported today March quarter net profit of $2,312,893, equal to 11 cents a share on common after preferred dividend requirements, a big jump compared with the $1,448,110, or 4 cents on common, for the 1939 March quarter. Gross volume of R. C. A. in the first quarter totaled $28,310,407, a gain of 13 per cent over $25,004,989 in the 1939 March quarter, David Sarnoff, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting.

Fruehauf Trailer

Directors of Fruehauf Trailer Co. declared a dividend of 35 cents a share on common stock, payable June 1 to holders of record May 20. Company paid 25 cents in April.

Life-Savers

Life Savers Corporation and subsidiaries reported March quarter net profit of $223,673, equal to 63 cents a share, against $220,706, also 63 cents, in the 1939 March quarter.

P. C. A. Traffic Shows Increase

Breaking all previous traffic records, Pennsylvania Central Airlines carried more revenue passengers in April than it has ever transported in a single month, setting a record for the second consecutive month, it was reported yesterday by Edward Sullivan, general traffic manager.

Sixteen thousand, one hundred and sixty-six passengers flew on PCA in April, representing a 77.26 per cent increase from April, 1939, and a 22.16 per cent gain from March of this year.

Steel Scrap Prices Raised 50 Cents a Ton

Pittsburgh, May 7 (AP).—No. 1 heavy melting railroad steel scrap has been advanced to $18 and $18.50 a ton, from $17.50 and $18, thus widening the spread between this grade and rgeular heavy melting material to more than $1.50, trade sources reported today. Steel men said the spread, usually $1, might be eliminated in the near future.

Equipment Sales

Latest figures on sales of electrical household equipment show that consumer purchasing power is being maintained at good levels over a year ago, according to the Financial World.

Boston Wool

Boston, May 7 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Business was very quiet on the Boston wool market today. Scattered sales were being closed on ⅜ and ¾-blood bright fleece wools, offered for shipment from accumulation points in producing areas at 36 cents, in the grease, delivered to mills. Prices were firm at this level but buyers were resisting higher asking prices. Territory and Texas wools were mostly very quiet. Dealers were reported moderately active in the territory States and Texas despite the limited demand in Boston.

Better Tone Is Shown in War Issues As Chamberlain Fails to Report Any Further Reverses; British Bonds Slump

New York, May 7.—Prime Minister Chamberlain's explanation today of the Allied defeat in Norway was the thing the financial markets were awaiting, but when the speech was delivered it passed almost unnoticed.

No further reversals were reported and possibly for this reason the markets appeared to feel somewhat better. The big board was irregularly higher and closed with a minor net advance of 0.07 point in the composite average.

There was a better tone in the war stocks, notably the aviations, steels, equipments and motors. The equipment shares have increased in popularity on the assumption that the companies with heavy equipment are best situated to secure war orders for munitions.

Store Division Strong

The store division also reflected support in today's dealings. The feature was Montgomery Ward, the day's most active stock, which closed up 1⅜ points, reflecting the company's report of April sales showing a 10 per cent gain over last year.

War news had a more noticable effect in the foreign exchange market than in stocks, both the British and French currencies being weak. The pound extended its decline 4 cents to a low of $3.37¼, the lowest level at which sterling has sold since January 23, 1933. The record low for sterling is $3.14½, made on November 29, 1932. French francs sank 2¼ points to a record low of 0.191¼. Canadian dollars closed at a discount of 16⅞ per cent.

Sentiment toward domestic business prospects has improved. The General Motors dividend of $1, declared after the close Monday, was regarded as a favorable gesture of confidence. Steels were helped by the higher operating rate.

There was some profit taking among the marine and paper shares. Among paper and pulp stocks, Rayonier was down nearly a point, while International and West Virginia edged up fractions.

British Issues Weak

Weakness in British Empire issues of all descriptions, whether direct government obligations or corporation loans, was the feature of bond dealings in this market today. New lows for the year were reached by many issues. Declines for British bonds ranged up to more than 6 points.

United States Treasury issues were idle and changes mixed.

Conspicuous among the British bond price declines were the several Australian issues as well as New South Wales 5s of 1957 which dropped 6¼ points to close at 55⅞. Queensland and Sydney bonds also sold down. Canadian obligations were similarly affected. Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Railway had losses up to 4 points for new lows.

Buyers to Study Advertising Media

Nearly every advertising medium will be studied by the buyers of advertising who make up the Association of National Advertisers at their semiannual meeting at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y., May 13, 14 and 15. In closed sessions, the members will discuss methods of measuring the effectiveness of copy and of mediums, costs, trends, research and the latest developments.

Car Demand Shows Rise During April

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 7.—Consumer demand for new and used motor vehicles apparently still is moving upward. First of the April retail sales reports indicate also that demand for commercial vehicles continues steady.

Chevrolet division of General Motors Corporation reported its retail sales of new passenger cars and trucks during April numbered 108,362 units, a gain of 33.7 per cent over the same period last year. During the last 10 days of April retail sales numbered 39,976, an increase of 4,485 units over the preceding 10-day period.

Pontiac division reported retail sales of 22,741 cars during April, compared with 16,010 in April last year, and an increase of 1,040 units over March. Sales of the last 10 days of April were 7,855 compared with 7,716 during the preceding 10-day period.

D. C. Business Shows 3% Rise

New York, May 7.—Business conditions in Washington as of May 1 stood at 3 per cent above normal, representing a decrease of 2 per cent from April 1 of this year, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the business survey department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., advertising concern.

On Fay 1, 1939, the city's business index stood at 4 per cent below normal.

Rolls of Cotton To Promote Sale

Several thousand rolls of cotton were being shipped through the mails today by the National Retail Dry Goods Association to its member department and specialty stores throughout the country as a graphic means of centralizing attention on National Cotton Week, May 17 to 25.

D. C. Gas Light Wins Sales Certificate

The Washington Gas Light Co. has received a certificate of award for making the greatest number of gas refrigerator sales in its classification during the first quarter of the American Gas Association refrigeration drive, it was announced by Bernard T. Franck, chairman of the refrigeration committee, New York.

The certificates were awarded to 23 gas companies which led their respective classifications in sales for January, February and March.

"The gas company and its sales force deserve high commendation for their exceptional sales accomplishment during the first three months of the year," Franck said.

Swedish Gold Escapes War, Reaches U. S.

By the Associated Press

Swedish gold made its way to American safety again last week, despite warfare in Norway. The Commerce Department said that $4,509,995 of the metal arrived from Sweden in the week ended May 1, raising ot $163,000,000 the total of gold shipped by Sweden to the United States since last fall.

Total gold imports in the week were $46,252,291, a decline of about $10,000,000.

Foreign Markets

London, May 7 (AP).—Another sharp advance in British government bonds steadied the balance of the securities list today. Trade was severely restricted, in view of the House of Commons debate on war policy. Egyptian bonds recovered after early weakness in the foreign division and Brazilians leveled off at lower prices. Royal Dutch dropped but other oils held even. Selected buying appeared among kaffirs, while industrials were mixed.

Paris.—A brisk come-back partially erased heavy starting losses in the bourse today. While the movement from foreign to domestic equities continued, absence of a definite new break in the foreign situation encouraged buying at lower levels. The dollar guaranteed remie rose 40 centimes but others tended downward.

Amsterdam.—Announcement of the cancellation of Dutch military leaves caused a sharp decline in security prices, but final quotations nevertheless showed net gains of 1 to 4 points. The early puward swing was led by Royal Dutch, sugar and shipping issues. Industrial stocks finished mixed and tobacco were lower. Dutch bonds were divided, while British, French and Danish were weak.

Liverpool.—Late support cut into early losses in cotton futures and the market closed 1 point higher to 4 lower. The market was affected by the declines in New York Monday.

Building, Loan Investments Set a Record

More New Money In 1940 Quarter Than for 9 Years

By Thomas M. Cahill.

More new money was invested in saving, building and loan associations during the first quarter of the year than in any similar period in nine years, Members of Dis-Loan League have been informed of this by the United States Saving and Loan League, which, on the basis of unit association reports, estimate between $250,000,000 and $275,000,000 placed in these units in January-through-March.

Emphasizing that this money will be put into circulation rapidly through unit associations' loans to home owners, President George W. West of the national body reports that several billion dollars of business would be transacted by the turnover of this money in a few weeks, recovery power of dollars in circulation being stressed in his report.

Explaining how funds saved or invested in thrift and home financing institutions circulate, Mr. West has investigated this process in several communities where associations operate, a hypothetical course of $25 saved during the first quarter of the year has been traced to the benefit of builder, laborer, grocer, wholesaler, farmer, manufacturer and factory worker. In about three weeks the $25 has done $175 worth of business. He explained that this is only one of the typical routes which a sum of money takes when it starts circulating out of a building, saving and loan association.

"No transaction tax nor other new-fangled notion to keep money circulating is required in any sense of the word to prevent the idleness of money in a saving and loan association," said West. "Automatically such funds start on an unpredictable course of serving a long string of diversified purposes as a medium of exchange. Unless somebody had saved the money, in the first place, however, the contractor would not have had the job of building the house and all the trade transactions which began with that house building would have been stymied at the start. That is why the initial act of saving is most important."

Amounting to nearly 20 per cent more than in the same period last year, $10,772,264 was advanced by the 12 regional Federal Home Loan Banks during the first quarter of this year to member institutions to aid them in meeting expanding demands for mortgage loans by some families in their communities who are building or buying homes, Federal Home Loan Bank Board officials announce.

Cumulative advances by the banks since their establishment in 1932 amount to $592,694,724, of which $455,052,443 has been repaid. These institutions report $4,374,870 was advanced in March, an increase of $2,363,875 over February and $476,670 over March, 1939. At the end of March the banks had $176,622,145 in capital, $260,014,507 in consolidated assets, $5,540,253 in reserves $4,827,667 in undivided profits, $68,937,973 in cash, $19,660,855 in commercial banks (deposits), and $34,347,114 of members' deposits.

Kennecott Sells Copper to France

New York, May 7 (AP).—France is taking 8,000 tons of copper monthly from the Kennecott Copper Corporation, it was disclosed today at the company's annual stockholders' meeting.

E. T. Stannard, president, also told shareholders the company is supplying Italy with 2,000 tons and Japan 1,000 tons monthly. Under the present contract, Stannard added, the French tonnage will be reduced to 6,600 tons a month, starting with June, and running through August.

Cotton Resists Heavy Pressure, Shortens Losses

New York, May 7 (AP).—The cotton futures market put up a good front to heavy selling today. Down more than 10 points at one time, the list rallied to close 3 to 5 lower. Gloomy views of export possibilities and reports of further crop progress disheartened most prospective buyers.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures declined 5 to 7 points today as unsettled allied markets, particularly lard and tallow, prompted moderate pressure. The confused state of European affairs braked active support. Sales totaled 132 lots; May, 6.80 bid; July, 6.82 bid; September, 6.88; October, 6.89; December, 6.92 bid. Crude oil was nominally unchanged at 5⅞ to 6 cents a pound in the Southeast, 5¾ to 5⅞ in the valley and 5½ to 5⅝ in Texas.

U. S. Income Drops, Trend Soon to Turn

17.9 Billion in First Quarter Exceeds 16.3 Last Year

The national income produced in the United States declined to $5,664,000,000 in March from $5,735,000,000 in February and from the peak of $7,571,000,000 last October, the Alexander Hamilton Institute noted yesterday in reporting. March thus represented the fifth consecutive month in the down trend.

Despite this decline the national income in March was 4.2 per cent larger than in the same month last year, when it amounted to $5,436,000,000. The national income during the first quarter of this year amounted to $17,920,000,000 as against $16,315,000,000 in the same period last year, an increase of 9.8 per cent. The income this year was larger than in any preceding first quarter since 1930.

Preliminary information suggests that the national income showed a further decline in April. Although prices have recently shown a firmer tendency since the war spread into Scandinavia, it is probable that when the price average for April is compiled, it will show little increase over the March level.

There is a possibility, however, that April represented the final month of downward trend. At the same time it is not likely that much improvement will occur during May and June. July should provide definite evidence of an upturn.

The rise this year may not be as pronounced as it was last year, but the fact should not be overlooked that wartime inflation is likely to develop. This might result in a larger national income than in any year since 1929.

Commodity Price Index Declines

The wholesale commodity price index compiled by the National Fertilizer Association declined last week, after advancing in each of the three preceding weeks. It was 77.3 in the week ended May 4, compared with 77.8 in the week immediately preceding; 76.2 a month ago.

Listen! with Slocum

Tomorrow evening, come 7 o'clock, a one-time vaudevillian will mark the fourth anniversary of one of radio's most popular shows which four years ago to the day made its debut here in Washington via WJSV and has since gone on to be a bulwark of the Columbia network's extensive commercial schedule.

The show is "Ask-It-Basket" and the vaudevillian is Jim McWilliams. McWilliams, who had one of the funniest acts in vaudeville, had been a well paid performer, working steadily during vaudeville's golden era in the United States. Came the fall and decline of the great American institution and McWilliams looked with some horror upon a set of bookings that permitted only 10 or 15 weeks work a year and included such gay split weeks as a first half in Des Moines and the second half in Tulsa.

McWilliams, a true artist, also frowned upon the business of six shows a day. When he was knocking them loose from their teeth at the Palace a vaudevillian worked two shows a day. Jim took a quick look at his bankroll, found it quite adequate, took another look at the 5-a-day bookings, and said in effect, "t'heck with it," and retired to the fastness of his Virginia home.

He meandered around that for a while, then found the inactivity dull and through a mutual friend came up to WJSV, where the executives were slightly ga-ga over a quiz program idea a young newspaperman named John Heiney had submitted. McWilliams' droll mannerisms and gift of gab made him the ideal gent for the master of ceremonies job on a quiz show and he went to work.

The rest is history. You can't turn on a radio for more than an hour these days without hearing some sort of audience-participation quiz broadcast. It all started right here on May 9, 1936.

"Orphans in Love"

By Marion White

Blue-eyed Ellen's entire life revolved around Peter Storm and had ever since they were children together in St. Peter's Orphanage. One day, when Peter had been out of college three years, they were lazily talking on the lawn of the old Tucker house, just across from the orphanage. Peter was saying that he wanted only the best of everything, which he could not possibly have now on his small salary. He wanted to live in circumstances comparable to those of the Tucker House in its heyday. Long since closed and deserted, the old house had been the subject of their daydreams for a long time, although Ellen, who loved Peter, was willing to be content with much less.

Chapter 2

"I'M nobody. An orphan, left on a doorstep. Something nobody wanted. Something that just didn't fit into the world. It's up to me to make a place for myself. To make it a good place, and justify the accident of my birth."

So they planned their own little world, or rather Peter planned it earnestly and dynamically, and Ellen followed him a little sadly, perhaps, because he made the way so hard.

They planned their private worlds, here in the warm sunshine on the hill, and they forgot the larger world which moved about them. They could not see beyond the brow of the hill, seated where they were against the sharp slope.

Time escaped them because this was Sunday afternoon and every hour belonged to them, without obligation.

Prelude to Sunset

They escaped the lengthening shadows as prelude to sunset; they did not notice that stormclouds were gathering in quickly deepening intensity, that the breeze no longer whispered through the treetops but grumbled now in ever-increasing irritation, as if to warn them of the dark clouds which followed.

Not until the first few drops of the shower fell upon them did they hear the ominous rumble of thunder. Then, as they looked up into the sky behind them they saw the sun disappear suddenly behind the looming thunderheads.

Ellen's hand flew toward her new blue hat; she glanced toward the public road, nearly a mile away. "It's raining already, Peter!" she cried dismally. "We didn't even see the storm coming."

He jumped to his feet, pulling her with him. "Only a shower," he promised optimistically. "It won't last long."

"What'll we do? I don't want my hat spoiled. Let's get under the trees." She started down the hill before him

In Danger

"Wait, Ellen." He caught her by the arm, checking her swift flight. "Never stand under trees in a thunderstorm. It's dangerous. Come, we'll go up to the house."

"To the house?"

It was a daring suggestion. In all the years the children had roamed through the woods and loitered on the hill, nobody had been bold enough to approach the house. It was sacred ground, taboo to the destructive influences of childhood.

Ellen still remembered Mother Ross's stern caution. "Play in the woods, children. Wade in the brook, if you want to. But stay away from the house! Remember. Stay away from the house. It's somebody else's home."

And now, with the long-remembered warning echoing in her ears, she was running along with Peter, letting him pull her right up to the front door.

"Of course, the house!" he insisted practically as they ran. "Anybody's doorway is shelter from the rain."

"But it isn't . . . it isn't . . ."

Lovely House

It wasn't It was a large, lovely house, sturdy and substantial and impressive, but the doorway was not shelter from the rain. It was a fine, wide porch but the roof of the porch projected not more than a foot beyond the framework.

They were as much out in the open as they had been down on the hillside.

"We're on the wrong side," Peter decided quickly. "Come around to the back."

She hurried along behind him, keeping as close to the house as the thick shrubbery would permit. Still the rain poured down on them in a constant shower, and Ellen gave up all hope of salvaging the new hat.

She was thoroughly wet now; inside her shoes her feet swished as the puddles through which she stumbled grew wider and deeper.

Rain Comes

The back of the house proved equally inadequate as a shelter. The rain came down steadily, swirled in varying directions by the swift wind currents.

Drippings from the roof pattered upon them as if a dozen faucets had been turned on, and their feet sank into the soft, muddy ground.

"We can't stay here!" Peter grumbled. "Look, at that black sky. There's not a sign of a break. The rain may keep up for hours."

Ellen nodded, too out of breath to speak. Truly it was a dreary world upon which she looked, a world bearing only superficial resemblance to the warm, sunny playland through which they had walked all afternoon.

Low, threatening thunderheads loomed closer, and the only lift in the gloomy darkness above them was the blinding, jagged flash of lightning which pierced the heavens with sharp, unceasing terror.

Like Angry Puppies

Down on the river the quiet water was lashed with white foam and tiny boats bobbed about uncertainly and tugged at their anchors like angry puppies trying to break free of the leash.

From this point on the hilltop they could look over to St. Peter's, an oasis of warm, dry comfort, but two miles of dark woods lay in between.

"Don't, Peter!" she protested quickly. "We can't break into the house!"

"We cain't stay out here and drown, either. Who cares whether we go inside or not? You're not afraid of the ghosts, are you?"

"No. But——"

"Wait! Did you hear that?"

Vague Knocking

She listened intently. From somewhere on the other side of the house there came a vague knocking, the sound of wood scraping against wood, the thumping of a shutter loosened in the wind.

Instantly Peter was off to locate it; a moment later she heard his voice, raised in eager excitment.

"I've found it, Ellen. Come around here."

He was tugging hopefully at one of the long green shutters. Gradually, as she rounded the corner of the house, Ellen saw it give way slowly, until it was loosened sufficiently so that it might be pried from underneath. He tugged again, and suddenly they heard the slipping of its latch.

The shutter fell open, banging back against the wall and pulling him backward with its force.

Ellen crept back, preferring the chill of the rain. But already Peter was fumbling for a window latch.

"It's an old, deserted house," he was saying to fortify her, "and nobody will ever care whether we go inside until the storm breaks. No—Whew! Look here. The window isn't even locked. It slips up. Come, Ellen, in you go!"
